The Forward and Acknowledgements

Mission Statement:

To provide an immersive game of intrigue, with boffer combat.

Hopefully for entertainment, enjoyment, and perhaps a chance for a little self-enlightenment.

Acknowledgements:

This is the part where I thank people who have helped write, play test, and just plain act as sounding boards to create this game.

Before I start telling you about some of the people and groups that I am so very thankful for helping us form this wonderful game, LARP group, and yes family, let me start by thanking those who are both the present and the future of Mythic Adventures. You, all the players. Without you this little book would be only that, just a book.

We are a player driven LARP with plot hooks, and player driven events as well that add to the story and the environment for everyone else. Without your enthusiasm and dedication, without you giving us a try and building a living breathing entity which not only increases your enjoyment, but also the level of immersion and enjoyment for everyone around you. We simply would just be another book, online without an audience.

Throughout the rewrites, the play tests and the ongoing story arcs that have hopefully captured the imagination, I have been thankful and humbled by the level of dedication I see in each and every one of my players. All of you are amazing!

My Staff

I would like to take some time to thank many of my various staff and friends who have aided and helped me along the way.

Rory Baer, who as the LARP Guy online has been able to review and catalog so many of the items and references we use in this game every time we play. He is my fellow Game Master in all of this craziness.

Rory who started as the first of our new type of Fey planning on a goofy, comical almost slap stick Eldar Deputy who served a Humans sheriff, and who through time and many long road trips with the Crimson Chain crew helped change the course for an entire race.

Rory has helped us develop a silly race into one with a majestic past, as one of the first Fey Races who rose to the very pinnacle of Civilization and yet maintained its feral edge. A race which has seen loss too horrible for most to comprehend, and now seeks only to wipe out the darkness, even if they have to embrace that darkness and give up all hope for themselves in do so. Rory is the primary reason the Eldar are what they are today.

Sarah Andoe, my other Game Master, who also spent way too many hours driving around the country in the Sovereign Nation of Tahoe from MetroCON to Otakon to GenCon back home to do DragonCon, and all those places in between.

Sarah has helped me take the mythical ideals of Elves set by such authors as Tolkien and Fiest and bring them into our own rendition of the Ancient Guardian Race.

She is a driving force behind the Sisterhood of the Phoenix, and yet humble enough to know that to serve is the first step to being a good leader.

Oh and Sarah is also one of the first people to encourage me when I hit a writing block, and also tell me when I've done something just plain dumb. Both needed, believe me.

Thane Molnar, who I did everything in the world to keep out of the staff portion of this game, so he could maintain his other obligations.

He is the Artistic Director and has taken my ideas and fleshed them out into beautiful ideas and creations which I know my players are both amazed and terrified by.

Will Dowling, who has been a source of constant encouragement and willingness to do any task set before him. Who, even when his enthusiasm gets the best of him, will listen and be able to on the fly correct the course of many a one shot or story arc so that everyone can enjoy themselves to the fullest.

Will is one of those driving forces behind taking my framework and making sure people see the webs of how things I set in motion are interconnected, and the world is living, breathing, and better for his input.

Jonathan Posnick, one of my oldest friends, who has known me for longer than some of my players have been alive. If Will helps make sure people see the interconnection, Jonathan is that person who has been around since my Traveller's Inc. Campaign for 2nd Edition and really knows that everything has a purpose and happens for a reason.

Jonathan shares my vision of immersion, and care for making sure everyone around him is included in the story arcs, whether he is running the story or is playing in the story just like everyone else.

Matthew Rickwood, what can I say, another of my long-term friends who I actually never expected would ever LARP again. Most of you will never be able to understand how absolutely touched and humbled I was when he came and asked me to be the Head of Logistics for all of us. Matthew is without a doubt the best logistical person I know. Period.

Robert Rook, who is for all of us the grounding that we need to make sure none of this goes overboard. He understands what I mean by immersive and therefore that every monster and item must be phys-rep'd and therefore we are a low fantasy, character powerful, low magic item game.

Not that items and spell won't be a big part of the game, but Robert is there to help make sure we all understand you will not see a dragon until we can make a dragon.

Jessica Frame, you have always done amazing things, I really thank you for wanting to spend time helping me, doing our programing and making sure that the Sisters of the Phoenix are a force to be reckoned with every time.

To all of my Marshalls now and in the future, you are the heart and soul of making sure we succeed in helping out everyone who plays Mythic and to help each person have the chance to flesh out their character, improve their gameplay, and provide them endless hours of immersion and intrigue in a safe and consistent environment. Hats off to each of you.

Friends Present, Past and Future:

I have a lot of people to thank. Such as Virgil Jones the founder of Crimson Chain who wants to see this and all that that we are creating come not only to fruition but to succeed beyond anyone's wildest dreams.

Amanda Bumgardner, who has put up with constant hours of me working on this and all the projects I have. She has learned that insomnia is not just a condition but in my case, it is a life style.

To Alex and the whole MetroCON crew. Words cannot express how much I want to thank you for letting us have a spring board at your show to get everyone into this hobby.

Sherman DeHart, who has helped make sure work gets done, not only here but in real life as well. One of the best and hardest working men I have the honor of calling friend.

Diane Roberts, who was long an inspiration at our LARPing events for me. She helped me realize just how immersion and intrigue could be just as important as, no even more important than, all the fun boffer combat could provide.

Danny Ham; my buddy, longtime friend and co-owner in Frederick's Forge. Danny has more time LARPing than many of us combined, and is an encyclopedia of knowledge, for good and evil.

Ash Hill, he always has my back. He acts as my grounding wire and realist, who always made sure I saw other options.

To those people who spent hours of their own time helping improve the system such as David Huston and Robert Roy who made rules lawyering for good a new art form.

Jeanette Esparza, who can play anything with an accent so well you would never know she was not from that culture. She is magic at keeping people focused on what is going on in front of them and in the moment.

Katie and Dante, for the countless hours of work. For turning their home into Mythic Adventure workshop prime. Making sure we had props galore and helping make an immersive duo for the other players to be scared of and intrigued by.

Brooke and Stacey, you two inspire me to only want to make everything better every time, to never be satisfied but to always do better at each event, if for no other reason than to watch your glee at every new thing.

Nick, Bill, Brian and Miles, you all are just wonderful at making sure your groups stay organized even as you expand and even sometimes change the groups. Your watchful eyes and attention to details will always make sure everyone around you guys knows they are in for an amazing experience.

Corey, Cory, Wyl and Frank...Dwarves, can I even say more. You guys aren't playing Dwarves you are absolutely showing everyone around you the Dwarves, even at 5'9", truly exist.

Greg Garguilo who can make anything that can be said in a minute into a full-blown symposium on the subject. He makes every nuance come to life and shows depth even I did not know was there.

To another of the Sovereign Nation of Tahoe Jack Clemons, who took what was already an amazing race in the Ogre-kin, and well, made it Bun Bun's; which only brings more fun, and more character to them in total.

Rand and Tom who tried it first and took the time to make sure I knew what I was getting into. Especially you Rand, you were correct, and thank you. It has been amazing in all the directions you said it would be.

Randy Sheppard and Ron Owen, these two are both my power couple friends and my family. They help me make sure I re-energize, and have a place to call home.

To friends I have gamed with over the years, Chris, Ian, Jenny, Angie, Ame Wolfe, Anthony and Joey and all of the Traveller's Inc. Crew who showed me if I can run a 60+ person AD&D game every weekend on campus than I can run anything.

Chris Menigo, Daniel Copa, Danny Dawson, Wesley Martin, and hey even Chris "Kit" Tollerton, and Sean "Shecky" Timmons without these people and many (oh so many) more Mythic Adventures would not be in your possession today.

And lastly my heart itself, my wonderful and exasperating daughter Lilith. I Love you sweetiepie, you are where my sun rises and sets. May your life be more amazing than all the adventures Mythic Adventures LARP ever has to offer.

Thank You All!

Chapter 1: Beginnings

In the beginning, there was only Darkness, a calm pervasive stillness to the universe. In this time before all things there was nothing. All that exists now did not, a singularity, a unity of peace and nothing.

Then there was the Spark of All Things, and what was nothing was pushed back by everything. Life like a fire of abundance was suddenly shattering everything, in all corners the darkness retreated, and knew pain. Worlds were created in that moment, all of existence suddenly burst into life and in great agony the nothing dreaded all that was lost.

The Immortals were the first to arise. Their forms coalescing, beginning to take shape that all things after would copy and repeat.

The Ethereals arose from these beings, as did the Ancient Races of the Fey. The Ethereal Races traveled the pathways through space and time; through the planes of existence, where they built their kingdoms. Though being not as fully formed as the Fey, and traveling along the Planar Nexus of realities, they became manipulated by the elements and magics around them.

The Djinn-born being closest to the elemental planes had fire and flame, ice, lightning, and darkness all leave their mark on these celestial beings.

Warped by Ethereal powers, the Sons and Daughters of Kyth, the Arcanum, the Shadowvium, and others arose. War often followed them both amongst themselves and in many a land they passed through or conquered.

The Ancient Races were born on the material planes, and these beings became both caretakers and the reshapers of worlds.

Both Elves and Eldar built their cities and kingdoms, and are still held in awe, as amongst these are the most powerful places ever to exist.

The Eldar arose with more variation, more civilized and yet more feral than the Elves. They were the reshapers, the builders, and the peace keepers. Their ancient kingdoms a million strong; they dominated the world. They were the first people of the world to watch over her and repel the invaders.

The Elves were more singular in their nature, though civilized they were more in tune with the world, and accepted their roles as caretakers, teachers, and protectors. They became the guardians of the world and all her wonders.

Next to arrive were the Younger Races. Dwarves appeared first, spouting from the mountains and tearing into them to make their homes and gather their wealth.

Shirelings and Gnomes then came and built their farms, workshops and homes, all quite content to enjoy the bountiful harvest, and create wonderful pass times and toys, to enjoy all that they had, here and now.

Then came the Humans. They too left their mark on the world for both good and ill. Humans' nature was so unpredictable that they are never satisfied with what is now, but always looking to the future, even though they are often too short lived to see such.

The kingdoms of the Humans began to try to rival those of the Fey. Humans were jealous, so they tried to imitate and copy, some might say poorly, the Elves and the Eldar.

For the sake of power alone they built their kingdoms, manipulated the world around them rather than become part of it, used twisted magics and created the beast races as servants or slaves and indentured them to fight the older races.

The last to arise during this corruption were the Goblinoids. The Orcs came from the darkest regions of the world. From the crags, swamps, bogs, and moors, the Orc horde arose and made war with all.

Fed by the Darkness they exalted the infinite nothing, and yet they learned to conquer and control, to exist, and thus were the first mistake the nothing made. For nothing created from something could truly be nothing.

To this day, the Goblinoids wage war, they kill for sport and for fun. Only death is their gift, they corrupt the very lands in filth and harm comes to all who cross their path. They are beings purely bred for one purpose, to make war on the other races of the Spark.

So, the Darkness coalesced, and its pain grew. It had not yet truly taken from beyond the edges of reality, that thing that does not exist, but is perceived. It's only desire to return to the eternal calm.

This singularity grew, and it found ways to breach the reality of the Spark.

Bringing its anger first in an attack of mad wrath against the Ancient Races of the Fey. Fairies, Eldar, Centaurs, and Dryads all were attacked. They became aware of an enemy that they never knew; which never existed. Millions were driven from their great cities and kingdoms in a single strike, which none had expected or could prepare against. The Nothing had found anger and hatred; its wrath was on full display.

Hundreds of thousands of Eldar attempted to protect their homes and families as the war began to rage on. Fear came with dread, and the nothing found a name.

Tens of thousands found a way to contain the Darkness, and bring the war back to the Dredd, even on its own plane, as thousands of Eldar fought and corrupted themselves in an effort to defend all that they loved, they watched as other Fey races were wiped out, near completely.

The Elves finally arrived to find thousands of refugees, and to give support to help seal the breach that had given the Dredd their opening in the first place. They came into these wars late.

The caretakers along with their Eldar brother and pushed back the darkness and banished it from this plane

With the bright pain of the terror brought upon them, the Eldar still harbored wounds from of a million souls crying out for revenge. Once millions strong, now they are but a few thousand. The Elves help their brothers and sisters as best they can and the Eldar allow.

The Elves did not arrive late for lack of wanting to help, but they too were assaulted. The Nothing itself unleashed Necromancy into the world in an act of Entropy. This form of unlife was destructive to all the caretaker Elves held dear, and they fought back in a war against the undead, which served as a distraction that allowed the Dredd the time they needed to attack the other Fey races.

Though pushed back, the Undead still exist in every corner of the world, as beings of nightmare and servants of Entropy. As for Entropy, she is said to still reign in the Undying lands, neither alive nor dead. She is all forms of Undead, and none, being Spectral, Corporeal, and Skeletal, and yet more. She is served by her Decaying Seraphim and Undying Dragon. Her Cultists walking the lands still, they contain members of all races waiting for the end times, and Entropy to run her course.

The Ethereal races returned, driven out of their strongholds by changes of fortune, wars and the legions of the Dredd.

First to return were the Djinn-born, sent to the world by the other denizens of the Elemental planes as both ambassadors, and soldiers against the coming dark. Their hatred of the Arcanum and the Shadowvium knows no bounds and has existed for so long it seems to have no beginning. It just is, as if it were hardwired into their very essence.

In more recent history, as counted in Human terms, there were seven kingdoms, all of whom traded amongst themselves as well as made war with each other. They all rose to great power, and their strength began to rival those of the Fey who were now in retreat from the minds of the Younger Races.

Wars against the Goblinoids seemed to crush those monster's numbers, and beings of old such as Dragons and other Mythical creatures all but disappeared.

The Humans had even believed they rivaled the Elves and that they no longer should take their counsel. They began to use old and forbidden magics to create beings which they could turn against the caretakers, such as the Beast Races, and when those failed, Necromancy came easily to the idle hands of the Humans. It seemed the time of Man was here, but in the way of deceiving things, corruption always finds a way into wicked intentions.

Again, came the plague of the Undead. The being Entropy heard the calls and spells of Man and she answered with her hordes.

With her powers obviously tied to those of the Nothing, Undead made war on all the peoples of the world. The specters, skeletons, and the corporeal undead blighted the entire world and the world finally had enough. She went to shake off humanity and start over. Though twelve brave souls went to appease her and to bring a stop to these wars, Ancient beings proceeded to purify the land and bring balance back. As wars were fought many died. Necromancy arose among the Humans again and the Twelve were betrayed, and the destruction of the Old Kingdoms were sealed. The survivors had to flee their blighted and blasted lands. They fled to new shores, the old line of kings was rebuilt, and they formed an alliance with Elves, Dwarves and Eldar.

This would have been enough, but the beast races also arose and fought for their freedom against those kingdoms that had enslaved them. With the aid of their former enemies they gathered in strength and conquered the archipelago of Jal'Khandia.

More than 200 years have passed and in that time strife and war have gone. Border skirmishes have happened, Orcs still attack, and goblins still abound in the hills. But the Free Kingdoms haven't known war now for 88 years, the King's age of peace. Its Parliament, full of squabbling nobles, tries to weaken its Queen's powers. They see her military as a threat to their power. Kingdom heroes of old are forgotten, their descendants living on the good names of those long gone.

Those Ancient Races which fought in the wars of old are seen as warmongers, powerful beings of a bygone and better forgotten era. Even magic, with its academies and hedge wizards, is seen as a fading discipline, or merely a useful tool in the belt of Humans. A new tool has begun to take its place, technology holds the promise to replace magic, and even give those who can't wield magic capabilities similar in strength and power. So, no, the Humans do not fear the Darkness, after all, nightmares are only dreams; they do not exist.

The Elves have begun to muster with their Eldar allies. They have warned, the portents show, that the Arcanum will one day return. The Kingdoms of the world are in their sights. The Arcanum raid, leaving only destruction, and then flee before the Darkness can catch up to them. Those left alive from their raids only serve to slow down the darkness while the Arcanum flee.

Yet even now the Darkness still stirs and watches as squabbling fools grow weak. It waits, biding its time, collecting its thoughts, hoping to return to silence. A chorus of the Dredd waits to see when its symphony can strike.

All the while Entropy sits on her throne and her Undead still haunt the world.

Chapter 2:

What is a Live Action Game?

Have you ever been to a theater and thought it would be fun to be one of those characters on the big screen. Well, that is what a Live Action Game is like, at its very base. You get to be one of those people, not with dice around a table or cards over at a friend's house. Instead you get to develop the role, dress the part, and respond as the character would.

The Rules are guidelines and provide the way to solve problems or complete a task, but otherwise it is you having to do it, you are swinging the weapon, in this case your trusty foam sword. You are the mage casting the spell, by saying the verbal and then throwing the bean bag and hoping you hit your target, but there is a lot more too it then just that.

Think of it as Improv Theater at its best. The story team makes the background narrative and the other players fill in the cast, and you respond as the role you developed, and as the story progresses, so do you. The best part is of course that you can develop the story too. It is not just the story team but the players that determine how the game will go, what happens, and when.

Live Action can be a fun and immersing experience, one that truly gives you the opportunity to be happy, sad, surprised, and, at its best, thrilled.

Good Sportsmanship

The primary expectation and catch all rule for our game is Good Sportsmanship.

What this means is that we expect everyone to play by the rules presented here and on site honestly, honorably, and to the best of their ability, to acknowledge and respect other players' concerns as raised, and keep other players' fun in mind when making choices. Basically, to crib off numerous moral systems, treat others with the respect you would like to be treated.

It is impossible to define every possible interaction and what we believe Good Sportsmanship would call for in that situation. What is or isn't Good Sportsmanship is inherently a judgement call, and that call will be made by the people running the game when called into question. New details may even change that call after the fact, including the examples presented here. In general, calls made on the field should be respected and followed until you have a chance to speak to someone else.

The conflict resolution hierarchy is:

1. Players amongst themselves.
2. Appropriate Marshal.
3. Staff Member responsible for the subject area.
4. Officer
5. Game Director

Your common sense and judgment can determine if it is appropriate to skip one or more links in that chain for the issue at hand.

Here are some broad examples and guidelines as to what we consider Good and Bad Sportsmanship, and some common nomenclature. If you are repeatedly on the wrong side of sportsmanship calls, then you may end up in a disciplinary situation.

Good Sportsmanship:

Taking your Hits – Do your best to pay attention to what is happening around you in combat. If you lose track of your hp count or are told something hit you and you are unsure if it did or not, take the effect/go down.

Helping others to their feet and thanking them after a battle.

Everyone makes mistakes - Graciously taking corrections from Marshals on rules and requests to check your swings or throws from opponents.

Supporting and encouraging new players.

If you're unsure of timing, use real time or a slow 5 count, as appropriate.

Play in good faith – As much as you can, follow the intent/spirit of the rules as much as the letter. There should be no perfect combination in Mythic Adventures. Everything has a counter or weakness. If you're not sure, please ask before implementing your fool-proof plan for game domination, or that interesting edge case rule interaction you found, and you think no one else has.

Bad Sportsmanship:

Breaking the law – Nothing in this game or rule set should be taken to imply that unlawful actions are permitted or supported from an out of play perspective. These situations can and will be referred to law enforcement as appropriate.

Cheating - Intentionally not following the rules of the game.

Metagaming – Using information you have, or gained, out of play to the advantage of your character in play. This doesn't include using actual player skills like sneaking or downtime activities/puzzles such as translations, though we do recommend appropriate RP skills if you use them often.

Refusing to follow the standards set, or guidance of the Marshal responsible, for a restricted group you are a member of, including Profession, Prestige Group, or Race. This can lead to you being removed from that group.

Being a Rectal Haberdasher to other players out of play.

Mommy/Daddy – Going to a different or higher authority after receiving a call you disagree with, and not informing the new judge before you ask that you've already asked the question and gotten an answer, in the hopes of getting a different answer.

Rule Shopping – Similar to the above, but intentionally going to certain people who you believe will agree with you initially, instead of the closest or more appropriate authority to the situation.

Knowingly spreading false out of play information or rules calls. This includes following old rules that have been modified or corrected, but that you prefer.

Blurring the line of out of play/in play or using character impetus to justify violating known or reasonably expected out of play boundaries like privacy, touching, and trauma.

"It's what my character would do," is not a blanket excuse, especially if you know something will cause out of play harm. If you still feel a need to do something, check in with the player or staff to see if there's a better or not as harmful way to resolve the situation.

"Deal with it", "Suck it up", or similar are inappropriate responses when someone tells you to check your swings or similar.

Chapter 3:

Basics of how to make a Character

Ever want to be a person from a book or history? Popular fiction is filled with wonderful stories of people such as magic users, brave knights, and scoundrels who in the end have a heart of gold.

But why stop there? Thrilling and exciting villains also exist, as do druids who protect the balance of nature, and bards who tell their tales to the masses.

Elves, Dwarves, Samurai, Fortune Tellers, and any number of others exist in our minds and in our hearts.

So, with all this in mind, how do we get started? Simple, first we decide what type of person we want to be. Then we decide what race and we go from there.

Then ask questions, seek out advice, and be prepared to visualize your concept.

Have a costume ready, or at least an idea of one. Have a starting place and find a group of friends, everything else will come in time, and you may be surprised. Where you end up may be very different from where you started as the character evolves.

Skills are there to match the concept and enhance it; to give the character direction and goals. Without a basis to go on though, they are just numbers on a page or in a database. Take the time to read and see what you want to do, but before anything take the time to dream and figure out who you want to be.

A character always starts at level one (1) with one (1) Character experience point. Level one (1) starts with twenty (20) skill points to spend on skills. These can be anything the player would like that are not level or prerequisite restricted. The world is dynamic and while magic can change based on player actions, so too can prerequisites. Additional requirements or restrictions based on these changes may also be in effect. Check with the Hero's Library who keep a record from the Staff and Race/Duchy Marshals of these dynamic changes.

There are two types of experience point categories that will be referenced by the Hero's Library. The first is player experience. Player experience is experience earned by the player. This can be gained from volunteering. These points can be spent towards the character experience point pool. This is the pool that indicates when a character will level. Once experience is in the character experience category, it can not be removed.

Sometimes a player can find a way to start at a higher level, and thus start with more skill points. This is covered in the chapters on experience points and leveling toward the end of the book.

These higher-level characters will almost always start with the base experience points for that level.

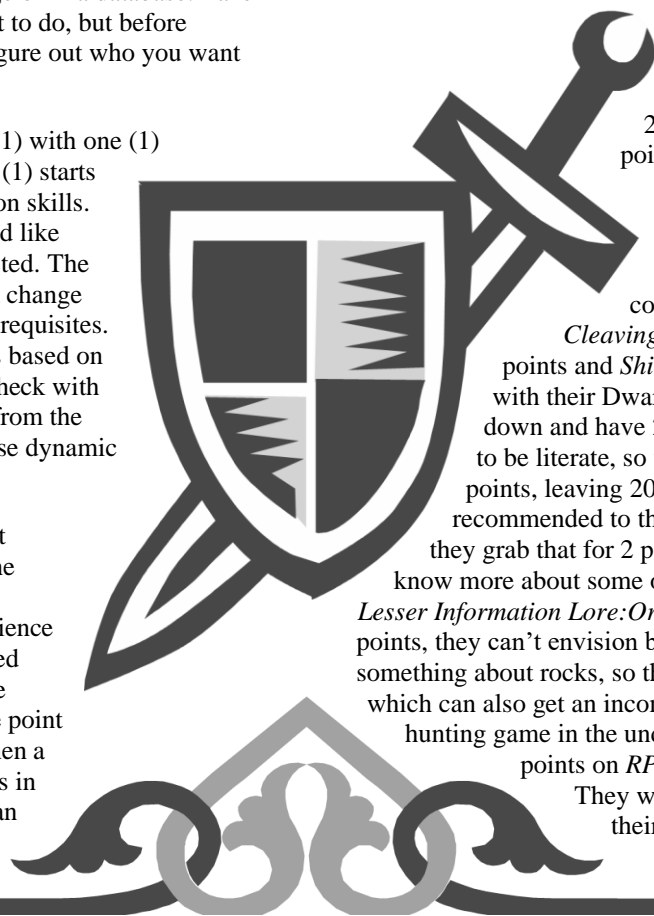

Character Creation Example:

Beth looks over the Races and Professions and decides they want to play a Dwarf Warrior named Brigid. They have a long beard from a previous cosplay, enjoyed Gimli et. al. from the films and liked the brief view of the culture they got from the Race Primer.

With this basic concept in hand, they reach out to the Dwarf Race Marshal with the contact information they got from the FB page or Mythic Adventures website. They discuss their costume, the make up requirements, their planned background, and they get more information and advice on how they can firmly place their character in the existing story of Mythic Adventures. They decide to be part of Clan Zanor Ibmat. They have the beard and some dwarven looking garb. Their basic concept, make up, and costume are approved by the Race Marshal, so on to the next step.

They're ready to begin spending points on skills. As a 1st level Character they start with 20 points to spend. They also monstered for an event to get the lay of the land and earned enough XP to gain a level and start at level 2. They notify the Hero's Library that they wish to spend their XP to level from 1 to 2. This grants them 10 more skill points for a total of 30.

They want to fight, and they want to fight with an axe and shield. Looking at the skill chart in the column labled Warrior they find Cleaving One Handed Weapons costs 4 points and Shield Use: Medium costs 3 points with their Dwarf advantage. They note these down and have 23 points left to spend. They want to be literate, so they pick up Read & Write for 3 points, leaving 20 left to spend. First Aid was recommended to them and they can see the appeal, so they grab that for 2 points, leaving 18. They want to know more about some of their enemies, and so puts Lesser Information Lore:Orcs on for 2 points. Down to 16 points, they can't envision being a Dwarf without knowing something about rocks, so they spend 3 points on Mining which can also get an income. Their back story includes hunting game in the underground, so they spend another 3 points on RP Skill: Tracking, leaving 10 left. They wants a little extra damage with their axe and so add Weapon Affinity

I:Dwarf for 3 bringing the remaining down to 7 points.

They decide they want to spend their last 6 points on Nobility but sees that it is a restricted skill. They go back to the Race Marshal to inquire. There is an available spot, but Nobility comes with more strict costuming requirements and role play responsibilities. Beth thinks about it and decides they can do it. They go through their costume closet, finds some pieces that fit the noble esthetic described by the Race Marshal, and submit pictures of their new costume for approval. After a little back and forth on changes, the Race Marshal approves the Noble costume and purchase the skill. They spend their last 6 points on Nobility leaving 1 left over for future purchases once they gain more levels and are ready to talk to the Hero's Library.

Beth submits the character to the Hero's Library and the Race Marshal, and the Race Marshal informs the Hero's Library about any necessary approvals. Once confirmed by the Hero's Library they're ready to play the character at a Mythic Adventures event.

Live Action Role-Playing Game

Chapter 4: The Races

In the fantasy world in which Mythic Adventures is set many varied and diverse races live side by side; some in conflict, others in partnership. In this chapter, you will find the information on those races which you the player may portray. Each has its own set of requirements and unique experiences.

Limited Races and Population:

Some races are just so rare that the game must place a limit on how many there can be of any given race. This is to help maintain immersion and game balance. All races other than Kingdom Humans have a population limit.

This is expressed per hundred (100) and specifics may vary for different campaigns or world settings. The number represents how many players may be of a given race for every one hundred individual players there are on the games books.

There are other restrictions on a given race as well, such as needing a Game Marshall's approval and even limitations which require none of a race can be played for the first hundred (or more) of a chapter's players.

(Example: Djinn-born are limited to three (3) characters per hundred players but may not be opened as an available race until the game has at least one hundred players have already been created. Thus, you may see the first 'pack' of Djinn-born be a group of six (6))

Restricted Races:

Experience is often required to play certain more complex races; therefore, several of our races are restricted to those players with greater role-playing skill. Also, many of these races require unique costuming and / or make-up requirements which must pass through and be approved by a Race Marshall.

Further, due the storyline these races represent, players may have to earn a certain amount of experience points through other means so that they may start at the higher level these beings need.

On the other hand, it is not unusual for a new player to demonstrate the capability to play a restricted race. In that instance, an exception can be made. The restricted races below are noted by placing [R] next to their name.

Costuming and Make-Up:

As a player it is understood that many factors affect a player's costuming, with considerations like budget and time often being the most limiting. While we hope that you can make the costume that you want a reality, we understand that our imaginations sometimes reach beyond our means. Ours is a Medieval Fantasy game, costuming should reflect this period, and not be of a modern day or Science Fiction genre.

On the other hand, make-up is not such a flexible issue. As a very inexpensive part of our game, there is no reason a player's make-up shouldn't be flawless! Set an example and have the BEST make-up!

Race Marshall:

A Race Marshall is a player who has been assigned a specific race to represent. The many jobs of this individual include supplying answers and information about the race, adjudicating any misunderstandings, and monitoring all characters of their assigned race. If a player is found to be improperly playing a race that player will be warned and can lose her/his right to play that race. Reversion to Humans and loss of skill points can result!

Each Race Marshall has access to a race lore packet for the members of that race to be able to play to the fullest. These packets are full of lore, clues on playing a race, mythology and legends of the race, and basic information such as politics, aging and so on.

These packets must be attained from a Race Marshall, who will review the character's background, and assist in fleshing out the character. The only way to gain access to one of these packets is to play the race in question, or be trained in the appropriate Lore skill (i.e. Elf Lore, Dwarf Lore, etc....)

The Kingdoms of Man

Humans come in all shapes, sizes, and colors and can choose any profession. It seems that humankind is capable of anything, from profound love to extreme hatred and violence. Humans have a relatively short life span and can learn skills and trades with lightning speed. This ability is both boon and bane.

There are additional Human realms beyond the borders of the Free Kingdom, many of which await discovery, and though not common enough to be a normal payable race they may still be encountered from time to time.

Kingdom Humans:

The Humans of the Free Kingdom are based on a feudal society with a limited monarchy, ruled by a beloved and just Queen. Parliament is composed of those of the noble caste, and the common man is both dedicated to the lands and to his or her Lord or Lady.

Notes: A Kingdom Human does not have to belong to a Duchy, but if they choose to they gain both a specific ability, at the cost of being answerable to the militia of the Duchy they belong to.

The Queenslands

The Queen's personal holding and home of the Kingdom's capital of Summer's Rest, the Queenslands are a peaceful pastoral paradise filled with rolling fields and orchards.

The Captial has the highest population density in the free kingdoms and the most diverse inhabitants. It is home to the head chapters and campuses of most human prestige groups, the military, the court, and parliament.

Make-Up and Costuming:

Humans are not required to wear make-up.

The capital and its surroudings base their fashions of 16th and 17th century France, though givent the melting pot nature of the capital, pretty much any Renaissance or Medieval fair garb will work.

Aeldirmann

Aeldirmann was the first duchy granted after the Free Kingdom was established. People from here are taught how to ride at an early age, and almost all have at least some small skill with weapons (most have far more than “small”). They are loyal to their Duke and their Queen.

In general, Aeldirmanians love parties, horses, and pie, and hate necromancy with a deep and abiding passion.

It is based on Rohan from LOTR.

Duke of Aeldirmann: Xavier Rickshire IV

Colors: White with a green horse

Make-Up and Costuming:

There is no makeup requirement for Kingdom humans.

Both nobles and commoners have a very “Rohan” LOTR feel, with a slight Viking influence, especially those from the earldom of Blackwall.

Nobles are held to a higher standard of costuming than commoners, frequently appearing in some variation of their house colors. The fabrics will be of a higher quality and have more trim. New players coming in as nobles must have their costuming approved by the Aeldirmann marshal.

Fur is rarely worn in Aeldirmann because it’s hot and is often a fashion statement when it is.

Edomere

Edomere is a place of Trading, Art, and Exploration. The priority placed on these attributes depends on the group or person you ask.

Access to cheaper food from Berowick combined with Cultural influences from the Farseni traders has led to a more specialized and merit-based society in Edomere. A skilled individual can rise among his peers to become a person of wealth and importance in Edomere.

Houses and Merchants use their wealth to compete to patronize great Artists, Mages, Engineers, and Scientists. A focus is put on information that is more useful in war, such as Firearms and Siege Engines. Finding a good patron is a goal for many from Edomere.

Flowing in the steps of Scoprire, Edomere has a focus on exploration and sends out ships to search for new islands or land that has not been discovered yet. With the hopes to expand without breaking the treaty with the elves. This has led to several noble and merchant houses building their estates on newly found islands as a sign of Prestige.

Duke of Edomere: Duke Travin Oberon

Make-Up and Costuming:

For commoners, themes of Renaissance Italy should be in your garb, but can also include garb that is seafaring in nature. For Nobles, there is a higher standard of costuming that must include inspiration from Renaissance Italian Fashion.

Edomere is a naval Duchy, and this is reflected in its clothing. Commoners wear plain loose-fitting cottons and linen clothing that would support a life at sea or on the coast.

Those looking at appearing wealthier and/or noble should look towards Renaissance Italian fashion. Wealthy Edomerians see clothing as a status symbol, and will normally purchase new fashion regularly as a way to show off wealth.

A character whose house is inside of the Book of Silver might show that with a long sash of silver cloth or a silver bracelet.

Berowick

Berowick was the third duchy founded after the Free Kingdom was established. They are a duchy of farmers first, and everything else second. They are exceedingly loyal to their Duchess and to their Queen, often taking a dim view of outsiders.

They have more Shires than any other duchy.

In general, Berowickians are home bodies with a deep love of hearth and home and consequently very protective of their loved ones and their land.

It is the breadbasket of the kingdom, growing wheat, barley, and rye, as well as most of the vegetables and berries consumed by the kingdom. It is also known for its superior beers.

Duchess of Berowick: Duchess Cynthia Valhelm

Colors: Pale gray with a blue gryphon

Make-Up and Costuming:

Humans are not required to wear make-up.

Nobles are held to a higher standard of costuming than commoners, frequently appearing in some variation of their house colors. The fabrics will be of a higher quality and have more trim. New players coming in as nobles must have their costuming approved by the Berowick marshal.

Sleeves and skirts/pants that can be hiked or tied are commonly seen in the peasant classes.

Trumpet sleeves are fashionable for the noblewoman, and noblemen tend to wear sleeves that do not tie at the wrist and pants that do not tie at the ankle.

Sudomir

Nestled between the forests of Valenwood and the grasslands of Aeldirmann lay the hills, mountains and swamps of Sudomir. Sudomir is a harsh land still recovering from a dynastic civil war shortly after it's founding.

Good farmland is rare throughout most of the duchy, with the vinyards in the northwest being the primay exception. Stone, ore, and fighting men and women are the primary trade goods of the Duchy. This is good, as it borders the Orc stronghold of Threskmar and even prior the opening of new mountain routs in the sudderings of 212, Orc raids were not unknown.

Sudomir does not have rich enough farmlands to inspire many Shirelings or Gnomes to face the risks and take up residence.

Sudomirians can be a harsh and tradition bound people, but that reflects their surroundings and history. The current duke is dragging the populace into the modern age through force of will, and the people are nothing if not loyal to their duke.

Duke of Sudomir: Duke Ivan Van Neste VI

Colors: Purple (or Black) with a gold fist holding a crown

Make-Up and Costuming:

Humans are not required to wear make-up.

Sudomirian Culture is loosely based on the Eastern European areas near the Black Sea and southern Russia. Commonfolk tend to dress in these styles which are largely unchanged from the 12th century all the way up to the time of Peter the Great.

The noble court, and costal nobles, under the direction Ivan VI tend to follow the fashions prominent in Summer's Rest, similar to the fashions of 16th century France.

With the Duke's push toward modernization, new ideas, such as allowing an Academy Sorcerous to break ground and open its doors, as well as other institutes of higher learning are the talk all around the lands. Great strides in ore refinement and in Engineering are also looked on favorably by the Duke and his counsel.

Valenwood

A land of deep forest and tradition, Valenwood is the northern most duchy of the Free Kingdoms. The people, named the Valish, are hardworking and superstitious. They pride themselves on their unique culture and independence from the Kingdom at large.

Civil discontent is on the rise in the duchy. Rampant banditry and high taxation have driven the commonfolk to the brink and war is rumored to be all but waging and no one has managed to escape the fallout. The nobles now move to quash or avert the violence, but many think it maybe too late and the first blood of what promises to be a terrible conflict is going to be split.

Duke of Valenwood: Duke Vlad Ravengain

Colors: Chestnut with a white raven

Make-Up and Costuming:

Humans are not required to wear make-up.

Valish costuming is grounded in the styles of the Normans. Tunics and simple pants are the predominate style, cloaks and jerkins of simple make to ward off the worst of the chill that can settle in around winter. Nobles emulate this style with more emphasis fine fabrics, intricate trims, and the incorporation of fur.

Metal is rare and often used as a sign of wealth, most common folk only having simple wood or clay jewelry while nobility will often wear showy and large pieces.

Those who go armed (which is most of the populace) are armed with a number of weapons of well crafted, but simple designs. Armor is almost exclusively leather, with the most popular style being brigandine.

Durenmyr

The southernmost duchy draws traders like flowers entice bees. The closest geographically to the Farseni Empire, they parallel the mercantile aims of their southern neighbor.

A relatively young duchy, it seems to be a meritocracy with most of the nobility having been raised from successful merchant houses with the Duchess leading and riding herd on the pack.

The pursuit of wealth is considered a primary virtue in these lands and even commoners are hustling to do business. Durenmyrians have trade routes throughout the kingdom and beyond. This has sometimes led them into conflict with other groups and there is a noticeable lack of Dwarven trade.

Duchess of Durenmyr: Duchess Loren Vigardt

Colors: Red with a white Tudor rose

Make-Up and Costuming:

Humans are not required to wear make-up.

Based upon the Dutch conservative style of the 15th-17th centuries. Severe blacks, lots of coverage, ruffs, and similar fashions.

The Romanovi [R]

"Family is the rock on this never ending road that stretches before us."

These are the haunted wanderers that travel the land. Although only the Matriarchs and Vezeto of their kind can truthfully speak on their origins, most others suspect some terrible event led to their nomadic ways and resulted in their ability to level the dreadful Evil Eye on an attacker or wrongdoer.

The Romanovi themselves are often linked with the "Creatures of the Night". While this may or may not mean that a particular Romanovi is evil, there is definitely a connection between Romanovi and both lycanthropes and the Undead.

Make-Up and Costuming:

Romanovi are Human and are not required to wear make-up but rather specific costuming instead.

Romanovi are based on the groups of Romanian, Balkan and other cultures around the Black Sea area. Romanovi tend to wear traditional fabrics with vibrant coloration that is often weathered due to the amount of traveling they do. Family heirlooms, and clothing that has seen extensive use is common. The words faded splendor should come to mind when looking at these individuals.

The Romanovi have a distinct language which is often only speak among themselves.

Though Romanovi is the common name, among themselves they refer to their clan name, not the generic word: Romanovi.

Due to their survival-oriented nature, certain skills are required from all starting Romanovi:

Craft: Divination (Any) Rank 1

Craft or Gather (Any) Rank 1 of a useful skill to the Romanovi (Example: Tailoring, Cartwright, Animal Husbandry, Scavenging...)

Inherent Advantages:

Romanovi may purchase the Curse of the Evil Eye skill.

Romanovi may also purchase the skill Evaluate Item at half skill point cost, rounded up. In addition, a Romanovi character may purchase any Role-Playing or Craft skill dealing with divination for minus one (-1) point. Such as the Astrology or Tarot Reading skills.

A Romanovi's connection to the dark forces of nature has caused them to become very sensitive to beings that have been corrupted. Thus, a Romanovi may detect corruption on five (5) count by stating "Detecting Corruption 1, Detecting Corruption 2, Detecting Corruption 3,...". If the being focused on is corrupted by magic or by nature, such as a dark Fey, this would be revealed to the Romanovi.

Further the Romanovi's affinity with curses allows them to detect a curse placed on a being on a five (5) count, as well. This is done by stating "Detect curse 1, detect curse 2, detect curse 3,..." This will reveal any curse placed upon the target being examined, what type (i.e. spell, Curse of the Evil Eye, etc.) and how powerful.

The range of these abilities is 20 feet, and the target must know they are the focus of the detection.

Break Charm: Powerful Romanovi can purchase the Break Charm skill at 20th Level.

Inherent Disadvantages:

Because of their nomadic and secretive ways, a Romanovi cannot become a noble or be a member of any of military order, knightly order, or any prestige group. Romanovi may never purchase the Nobility Skill.

Because of their affinity toward dark powers they feel uneasy around Undead, and any naturally corrupted beings. This is a role-playing effect that should be displayed and altered around more powerful beings.

An example would be that the Romanovi may not want to read the cards of an Eldaran, but might cower (wisely) in the presence of a powerful Vampire.

Lastly lycanthropes cause terror in Romanovi. This effect will cause them to flee from these beings once they reveal themselves. A Romanovi who is attacked can defend themselves, but they reduce their damage against such creatures by four (4) points. Learning the Bravery skill will counteract this disadvantage.

* You must have a Marshall's approval to play a Romanovi*

Note: All Players wishing to start as a Romanvoi must have achieved enough experience to be at a minimum of Level 5. See a Marshal or Staff on the ways this can be achieved.

Farseni Empire[R]

The Humans of the Farseni Empire are based loosely on Moorish and Persian medieval cultures. They are known to be well educated and are mostly encountered as nomads and merchants in the Free Kingdoms. Once, they were a great empire with many lands under their rule, but they are now in decline. The Jal'Khandian were once the servants of the Farseni Empire and their war for freedom may have been the last nail in the coffin towards the empire's final decline.

The Farseni Empire has long been rumored to be ruled by a dragon and many have heard the proclamations throughout the land, but none claim to have seen the emperor in the flesh

Make-Up and Costuming:

A Persian or Moroccan feel to one's clothing is a must. Veils, scarfs, and caftan are common items of clothing. Farseni have no make-up requirements

Farseni gain a level of Divination for free and are trained in the style of Astronomy.

Farseni may purchase any Magic Art (i.e. Wrath Arts, Celestial Arts...) for minus (-1) one point

Farseni may also purchase any Apprentice <Production> skill of for minus (-1) one point

Starting Farseni characters may buy the Nobility skill if they wish.

Lastly, their nomadic natures and mercantile expertise mean any Farseni may purchase the Evaluate Item skill for half cost, rounded up.

Inherent Disadvantages:

Farseni have culturally accepted the freedoms won by the Jal'Khandians and have entered many trading agreements with them, but they have still not learned to deal well with the Ancient Races such as the Elves and Eldar. They simply are too foreign to them.

Farseni characters may not learn any Cleaving or Blunt Weapon skills other than Staff, as these items are seen as unclean.

Special Note: Farseni may join the Jal'Parr ibn Klem prestige group if they qualify.

The Stout Folk

The Dwarves

The Dwarven Races: The first of the Stout Folk are the Dwarves. From the mysterious Shadow Dwarf, to the noble Stone Dwarf, and the nearly broken Sundered Dwarf these ancient people all share the same stubbornness and single-mindedness of their forefathers.

Additionally, Dwarves are extremely long-lived, aging only one year for every seven Human years. These attributes enable these beings to be such an enduring power in the realm.

The Stone Dwarf [R]:

These stocky and sturdy cousins of the Shadow Dwarves are believed to have arisen from the very rock of the realm's mountains. These noble beings have left an indelible mark on history.

The Dwarves' legendary love of song, history, and drink certainly belies their amazing fierceness in the arts of war.

Make-Up Requirements:

Dwarves have only one make-up requirement. Male and female characters alike must wear (or have) a full beard.

Note: This beard must be approved by a Marshall.

Costuming of a Nordic or Slavic type is encouraged as is costuming which would safely add to the look or feel of a Dwarf such as shoulder pads or broad waist belts.

The Shadow Dwarf [R]:

Born deep under the realm's crust, this breed of Dwarf has an ominous and secretive past.

The Underhill (Wee) Folk

Likely the youngest of all the races of the world are those wee folks from under the hills.

These are a peaceful and prosperous folk, whether Gnome or Shireling, and happy to tinker, be toy makers, and generally lead happy and unassuming lives in burrows and villages.

Often friendly and inviting to the bigger races, one would be mistaken to think they are easy prey, and more importantly to think they are without friends throughout all the kingdoms of the world.

The Shirelings

Shirelings are well accepted amongst most races and make loyal friends and competent adventurers. To most people, Shirelings prefer to live a simple farm life. They drink a lot, smoke a lot, and relax even more. This is an image which Shirelings cultivate and take great pride in.

These diminutive fellows reside in homes they call “Burrows”.

Always fond of food and drink, these chaps are warm and inviting. However, an evildoer should not be surprised when his Shireling victim slips a dagger between his ribs or renders him to dust with a Fiery Devastation spell!

One of the youngest races, they are a moderately long-lived race. It is not uncommon for a Shireling to live up to 130 years.

Make-Up Requirements:

Shirelings have fur on the tops of their feet. (Shoes that look like feet are acceptable)

Men often have mutton chop beards, and handlebar mustaches (Though these are not required)

Costuming for a Shireling tends to be simple peasant, farmer and commoner styles which show their rustic natures. Twill and homespun cloth items tend to be the most common fabrics for Shirelings. Plate armor is rare to say the least.

This lack of a martial background also prevents a Shireling character from ever learning any of the Weapon Master skills.

Lastly, Shirelings may not learn Shield Use: Tower or Shield Use: Master.

Gnomes [R]:

These little people of the hills are believed to be related to the Dwarves in the same way the Shirelings are to Humans. They are a fair and fun race and live quite content to tinker time away making things, and toys, oh so many toys....

Among other races the gnomes are known for their love of technology, creation and toys.

This is not to say that a Gnome does not like nature, he/she just simply enjoys making life more efficient so that one can enjoy the bountiful harvest that nature provides.

Make-Up Requirements:

Gnomes have only a few make-up requirements. Male characters must wear a large nose prosthetic, this may be pointy or round as preferred, and must also wear a pointy chin goatee which may be of any color. The Ancient Races

Long ago, at the very beginning of all things, the darkness was split by a Spark. From this time arose the first ones.

On the world, those closest to the original Spark are known as the Ancient Races. Some have gone extinct; others simply vanished to the planes or from our memories all together.

The origins of these beings are shrouded in the mists of time. Their civilization dates from times before the first Dwarf swung a smith's hammer, or the first Humans emerged from their primal nomadic ways

The most common of the Ancient Races are those commonly considered to be fey in nature. The assumption is that they all are descended from a common ancestry. This may or may not be true, depending on how one views the original Spark of all things.

The Ancient Races of the Elves and the Eldar are those which players can most commonly interact with and play as characters.

Other races do exist such as the Fairies, Druen'Ell, and even more wild beings like Centaurs and Dryads.

The Ancient Races tend to be the caretakers of the world and often have fought wars to protect the realm from beings unseen by the Younger Races.

They are known to have built the first great civilizations, though are now universally thought to be in decline and close to extinction after generations of strife against Orcs, Goblins, and other beings of nightmare and legend. Their great cities are often abandoned to the ravages of time. Places where relics of power and magic often await the brave to discover, left by these beings of power and ancient natures.

The Ancient Races often act as guardians and guides to the Younger Races, often referred to as the lesser races by some of these beings. They also jealously guard the secrets the past and may act to intercede rather than allow the Younger Races to tamper with ruins better left forgotten.

The Elves

The Elven Races: Regal and often beautiful, the Elven races are commonly considered to be the last of the Ancient or greater races. Even the eldest of these fair races cannot recall the origins of their people, and folklore holds that some great event led to the destruction of the first great Elven nation at the hand of the Orcs. The survivors of this catastrophe were scattered and had to form new nations.

Elves are often seen as the caretaker race, both of the Younger Races and the knowledge and ways of the ancient ones.

All the Elven races are extremely long lived, living often see a millennium or more before passing beyond the mortal coil.

Those of this race are considered mature at 100 and starting around their second century of life, they age at about a rate 12 times slower than that of a Humans.

Thus, if an Elf is the equivalent of a 30-year-old Human, then he or she would be 360 years old.

Elves are the guardians of the world and the places and beings within it.

They are often harsh or restricting, as a parent might be to a child, when dealing with the Younger Races. Though the Humans and Dwarves of the world may see this as a sign of the arrogance that is Elfdom, it is just a sign of the protectiveness the Elves feel for the Younger Races and the world around them.

This protectiveness does not extend to the Orcs or the Goblinoid races as a whole. Though they seem to treat Ogres with some deference, not always killing them on sight, Orcs gain no such luxury. Full blooded Orcs are the enemy of all that is good and right in the world and are treated as such. Their unfortunate offspring such as orc-bloods may not be treated quite as harshly, but neither are they trusted without proving themselves. That is a long road and Elves have all the time in the world.

Lastly the Elves are a caste-based society. Though they are fair and just to all their kind, and these beings are regal by any Human's standard, they have a ranking within their own structure of which those whom the right to rule was granted, and these are the Elves whose lineage is purest and closest to the original Spark.

The castes are the High Elves known as the Nol'Queldir. The Dawn Elf or the Que'Lyndir, the Dusk Elves known as the Illithari or Nol'Illithar in ancient texts, and the Sylvan Elves, often simply referred to as the Sylvan. Even though these beings of grace are a caste-based society, it is important to note all Elves are just that; Elves.

The Dawn Elf[R]:

Their caste is known as the Que'Lyndir by the Elven people and they are the most common of the Elves.

While typically smaller and weaker than Humans, the Elves excel at all they do.

Ethereal by nature, they live tranquil lives with all the time in the world for self-reflection and to perfect their chosen set of skills.

Do not be fooled by this inner quiet and peace, if called to action the Elves can be the deadliest and effective opponents on a battlefield anyone would ever have to face. Their Bladesingers are legendary, as is their mastery of magic.

The Elves have broken their society into three distinct types of people, each with their own background and unique role-playing experience.

The Que'Lyndir are the most common caste of Elves. Natural longevity causes most Elves to be patient and tranquil, but they are every bit as prone to the eccentricities of other races.

Pride is considered to be the greatest fault of the Elf and causes them the most problems. Even these commoners are regal by most other races standards

Make-Up Requirements:

The only make-up requirements for Dawn Elves are all characters must wear pointed ears, and male Dawn Elves do not have facial hair.

Inherent Disadvantages:

Frail physique prevents the Elf from purchasing the Two-Handed Blunt, Two-Handed Cleaving, or Two-Handed Master skills.

* Note: You must have a Marshall's approval to play a Dawn Elf

Note: All Players wishing to start a Dawn Elf must have achieved enough experience to be at minimum Level 10, in addition to Marshal approval before creating one of these beings.

The High Elf [R]:

These are the descendants of the first Elven nation. Known as the Nol'Queldir by all of Elfdom, theirs' is the right to rule.

If pride is said to be the greatest fault of the Dawn Elf, then perhaps arrogance would be the biggest weakness of the High Elves.

It is not that they are rude; it is simply that they simply know they are better than all the lesser races. This especially goes for the bestial and Goblinoid Races, but even Humans and Dwarves can be amazed at just how aloof High Elves can be.

The only make-up requirements for High Elves are all characters must wear pointed ears, and male High Elves do not have facial hair.

The Sylvan Elf [R]:

Often referred to as Wild Elves, these Elves have shed the trappings of civilization in favor of a simpler existence more in touch and tune with nature.

Often seen as unwise and rash by the High Elves, they have an understanding of the natural world envied by even most druids.

Make-Up Requirements:

All characters must wear pointed ears.

Sylvan Elves must dress in a more woodland manner; they tend to wear fetishes such as feathers and claws in their clothing. Though they do not always have to whenever a Sylvan Elf is knowingly going to battle, they tend to wear war paint style face paint.

Inherent Disadvantages:

Frail physique prevents the Sylvan Elf from purchasing the Two-Handed Blunt, Two-Handed Cleaving, or Two-Handed Master skills.

A second side effect of their lithe build is a penalty to their normal total of -5 to their profession's maximum hit point total

Note: All Players wishing to start a Sylvan Elf must have achieved enough experience to be at minimum Level 10 in addition to Marshal approval before creating one of these beings. See a Marshall or Staff on the ways this can be achieved.

The Dusk Elf [R]:

This enigmatic race is frequently presumed to be evil, though more accurate descriptions may be fierce and calculating.

The unforgiving deep forests and caves leading to the Underdark are their natural home. They will only venture into the light of day when they have great need.

The Dusk Elves once belonged to Elven society and though separate still have a place with in it. Though they have their own nobles and courts, these are not from the Spark as the houses of the High Elves are.

The Dusk Elf's sensitive eyes are caused pain by daylight, and they tend to avoid daytime or cover their faces with hoods. Furthermore, an open mind is a weakness and thus Dusk Elves go to great lengths to shroud their thoughts as well.

Make-Up Requirements:

The player must wear ashen, light gray to night black make-up on all exposed skin, the coloration may be highlighted as well to emphasize an Elven / alien look. Most Dusk Elves have gray, silver, or white hair, with a rare exception having flame red Hair. All Dusk Elves must wear pointed ears. Dusk Elf males do not have facial hair.

Dusk Elves tend to wear lots of dark hooded clothing, or blacks. Also, spiders, skulls, and other macabre images are common on their clothing.

When using a crossbow, all Dusk Elves gain a +2 damage bonus above any Weapon Damage and/or magic bonus they have with the crossbow.

Dusk Elves excel at the arts of war and have developed a Weapon Mastery to go along with their natural agility.

Dusk Elves may purchase the Weapon Damage (Both) skill and practitioners of this style of combat are known as Death Dancers.

Starting Dusk Elves may buy the Nobility skill if they wish.

Inherent Disadvantages:

Size and physique prevent the Dusk Elf from purchasing the Two-Handed Blunt, Two-Handed cleaving, or Two-Handed Master skills.

A Dusk Elf suffers from physical weakness in bright light or daylight. The Dusk Elf suffers a -10 hit points penalty at these times. This may cause weaker Dusk Elves to go comatose during these times, though they will not die and will recover once in darkness. Similarly, the Light spell (Terrestrial, 1st Level) causes a Dusk Elf to be blinded for 10 seconds. A Rune of Brightness (Rune, 1st Level) and an alchemical Light Elixir will have the same effect if activated within 5'.

The Eldar

The Eldar were formed by the original Spark. Some say they are the most civilized of all the peoples of the world, others the most feral, like a captive but still wild animal.

A dying race with perhaps only a thousand or less survivors left, they are often seen as dark, tragic in nature and a haunting race of people. A race that has survived a war of genocide and knows that their days are numbered regardless. For one day, there will be no more Eldar in the world.

All Eldar are extremely long lived, they have been known to live for thousands of years.

The Eldar, are now commonly broken into the Eldarine and Eldaran, but not to the survivors of this race. They only refer to others as the Eldar, never by the distinction of Eldarine and Eldaran

Note: All Players wishing to start an Eldar must have achieved enough experience to be at minimum Level 15 before creating one of these beings. See a Marshall or Staff on the ways this can be achieved. You must have a Marshall's approval to play any Eldar.

The Eldarine (Seelie Court Fey) [R]:

History has always suggested that the Eldarine are close relatives to the Elves, they are one of the Ancient Races, called the "Eldar" before the sundering some six centuries ago.

Many academics suspect that the Eldar are closer to the original Spark that all life shares.

The Eldarine were once creatures of light. Lovers of art, quick with a quip, and light of heart, these champion-poets are now often as skilled with an ink quill as with a rapier.

No longer, now they bear a great burden of heart. Though they are still fond of adventure, it now has a reason. You will always find an Eldarine in search for a cure for their blighted brothers and sisters, though they secretly fear there is none to be found.

Make-Up and Costuming Requirements:

An Eldarine doesn't have any specific costuming requirements, but they do tend toward Spring and Summer colors, and loose flowing clothing.

Eldarine are required to wear pointed ears. These must be longer than those of an Elf being at least 3 inches long. They may be curved or leaf like as well.

An Eldarine also must have something off about their look. Sometimes they have strange colored eyes, or tattoos around their eyes. They often also have horns, or even thorns. These may be of latex, sculpting clay, or foam.

Population: Three (3) per 100 players.

Profession Information

Preferred Professions: Sentinels & Cavaliers

Forbidden Professions: Marauders, Knights of Darkness, and Tinkerers

Preferred Magic: Healing

Forbidden Magic: Necromancy & Charm Magics

Affinities

Weapon: Rapier & Main Gauche, Hand Crossbow
(*DR with Main Gauche off hand)

Magic: Healing & Druid

Production: Scribe

Skill Information

Special Skills: Resist Mind Effecting & Resist Metabolic, Break Charm & Dominion

Special Masteries: Weapon Master Eldar (One handed Blades, Cross Bows & Spear)

must use Rapier & Main Gauche combo for DR*

Inherent Advantages:

This race has some command over mind controlling magics. Thus, they may purchase the Break Charm & Domination skill.

Seelie court fey may purchase the Resist Mind Effecting skill and Resist Metabolic skill five (5) times each as well.

Because of the wars they fought, the Eldarine are all skilled warriors. Thus, they may purchase any Weapon skill for -1 skill point. Because of their warrior natures, they may purchase Offensive Combat skills for -1 skill point. (i.e. Weapon Damages, Parry, Critical Strike, Riposte & Lethal Strike)

Creatures of light from birth, they may also purchase Greater Lore: Nature, Druid Arts, and Healing Arts skills for -1 (one) skill points each.

Starting Seelie Court fey may buy the Nobility skill if they wish.

Inherent Disadvantages:

The Eldarine do have some limits to the choice of combat arms. Two-Handed Cleaving, Two-Handed Blunt, and Two-Handed Master skills are unavailable to this race.

It is unknown why all Eldarine despise Necromancy and charming magic or effects so much, but they will NEVER use either.

The Eldaran (Unseelie Court Fey) [R]:

The Unseelie Court breed of Eldar is the result of an ancient struggle of the Seelie warriors against some darkness from other planes themselves.

Fully a third of the Eldar choose to corrupt themselves to combat this enemy. These Eldar were twisted into dark reflections of the light and renamed themselves the Eldaran.

There is a blackness pulsing through their very bodies, and visible are the scars and the dark heart that beats inside, giving life to these twisted beings.

Sages agree the Eldaran are dark, but are they truly inherently evil? Can a creature infused with this type of corruption be good? It is agreed that they became these monsters to defend their light brethren willingly and with the knowledge there would be no cure for their actions. Now it is as if they are the mirror antithesis of the Eldarine from which they were spawned.

Make-Up and Costuming Requirements:

An Eldaran doesn't have any specific costuming requirements, but they do tend toward dark, wintery, and Autumn colors, and loose flowing clothing, often tattered and angled.

Eldaran are required to wear pointed ears. These must be longer than those of an Elf being at least 3 inches long. They may be curved or leaf like as well.

An Eldaran also must have something off about their look.

Sometimes they have strange colored eyes, or tattoos around their eyes. They often also have blackened horns. These may be of latex, sculpting clay, or foam. They may look like antlers or ram's horns or whatever natural horns the player wishes. Consult a Race Marshall for tips on making your horns.

Unseelie court fey are required to use make up and have gray to black markings around their eyes to represent the darkness that flows through their veins, they sometimes continue these marks over the whole body as dark veins to show the darkness that corrupts their very beings.

Population: Three (3) per 100 players; with a minimum of 100 players before becoming available to play.

Profession Information

Preferred Professions: Warrior, Cavalier, Knight of Strife & Duelist

Forbidden Professions: Marauder, Knight of Valor, Knight of Darkness, Ranger, All Crafters, Magi and Artificer.

Preferred Magic: Wrath Magic

Forbidden Magic: Healer and Charm Spells

Affinities

Weapon: Rapier & Main Gauche, Hand Crossbow
*(DR with Main Gauche off hand)

Magic: Wrath

Production: Alchemy

Special Skills: Resist Mind Effecting & Resist Metabolic, Break Charm & Dominion

Special Masteries: Weapon Master Eldar (one handed Blades and Crossbows, Spears and Bows)

Inherent Advantages:

Because the Eldaran are essentially corrupted Eldar they may purchase the Break Charm and Domination skill.

Eldaran may purchase the Resist Mind Effecting skill & the Resist Metabolic skill up to five (5) times each.

The Eldaran are all skilled warriors. Thus, they may purchase any Weapon skill for -1 (minus one) skill point. Because of their warrior natures, they may purchase offensive Combat skills for -1 skill point. (i.e. Weapon Damages, Parry, Critical Strike, Riposte & Lethal Strike)

Starting Eldaran may buy the Nobility skill if they wish.

Inherent Disadvantages:

The Eldaran do have limits to the choice of combat arms. Two-Handed Cleaving, Two-Handed Blunt, and Two-Handed Master skills are unavailable.

Eldaran are permanently corrupted, and this corruption cannot be cleansed or removed by any known means. There is rumored to be a ritual magic that can restore these creatures to their former state, but no one claims to have witnessed it.

As creatures touched by the very forces of corruption any curative magic or effect or magic with the Light tagline effect, cast on a Eldaran will harm them. Any Darkness spell such as an Inflict type spell, will do nothing to them. The magics that can heal an Eldaran are only Heal, Cause & Corruption spells and effects.

Life, Death, and Revive spells and the like all work on Eldaran as they would any other creature

Unlike their Seelie brothers and sisters, the Eldaran have no problem with using Corruption magic or effects; in fact, they seem to have been indoctrinated and bred for them.

It is unknown why all Eldaran despise charming magic or effects so much, but they will NEVER use them.

* Note: You must have a Marshall's approval to play any Eldar. ****

Troll Brood [R]:

Trolls have a strange history that is somehow connected with the fey. They are often servants of both the Eldaran, and surprisingly the Eldarine as well. They seem strangely to be accepted by all the Ancient Races, though fairies fear them greatly. They are based on the trolls of Nordic and Germanic myths.

Trolls are not known for their sense of humor; they especially dislike practical jokes.

Often these brutes are seen as cannibals and kidnappers. Beings of scary reputation and disposition, who would just as soon murder a victim and eat them as anything else.

Trolls are said to practice dark rituals unlike anything that the other races and cultures have. It is rumored that they can divine the future from the bones of their victims

The troll brood is the smallest and most common of the various trolls. Some might argue they are also the most cunning if not the most intelligent.

Make-Up and Costuming Requirements:

Troll Broods have various blotchy green to sickly bluish skin and black, red, orange, blue or even purple hair. Remember, a player must cover all exposed skin with make-up.

Trolls also must wear a prosthetic nose that is at least 5 inches long. Troll brood also have 4 inch or longer pointed ears, which may be smooth, serrated or jagged.

Troll brood can wear any type of costuming, but usually prefer a more “jungle” look. Brightly colored ritual tattoos are very common

Population: Two (2) per 100 players; with a minimum of 100 players before becoming available to play.

Profession Information

Preferred Professions: Marauder

Forbidden Professions: Cavalier,

All Knights, Tinkerer, Apothecary,

Preferred Magic: Hearth Magics

Forbidden Magic: Healing

Affinities

Weapon: Bone or Bone Handled Weapons

Magic: None

Production: None

Special Skills: Divination – Roll the Bones

Special Masteries: None (Weapon Master: All is their favorite)

Inherent Advantages:

Weapon Masteries can be purchased for minus two (-2) Skill points.

Troll Broods are very strong and get a +2 Enhanced Strength bonus.

Furthermore, all troll brood may purchase their Enhanced Strength score up to +5 regardless of profession. Warriors, Smiths, and Marauders may purchase five additional strength points as per their profession, for a total +7 Enhanced Strength.

Quick Recovery: Trolls are often thought to naturally regenerate, and though this is true of some of the larger and stranger troll types, troll brood do not regenerate.

They do gain a special bonus from any form of healing they receive in that the spell, elixir or whatever does an additional 5 points of healing. This even applies to desecrated or corrupted trolls who are healed by Causes. (i.e. a troll would gain 7 points of healing from a Cure Light Wounds spell, or a desecrated troll would get 7 points of healing from a Cause Light Wounds spell.) The troll's constitution also gives them a +5 hit point bonus to their total. Thus, they may attain +5 hit points over their profession's hit points cap.

Trolls who buy the Fortify skill do gain double the regenerative powers of that skill (i.e. Fortify IV rather than regenerate 2 HP / 10 min a troll brood regenerates 4 HP / 10 min)

Inherent Disadvantages:

Many consider troll broods to be a stupid race. While there are no doubt less intelligent members of any race, the troll broods are anything but.

Trolls panache for dark rituals and toward cannibalism coupled with their ability to gain extra from any form of healing have led to their inability to ever learn any Healer magic spells. They simply see no reason; it doesn't fit their culture.

Troll Broods, like all trolls, are very susceptible to fire. Thus, when attacked by any Fire or Flame attack the troll brood takes an additional five (5) points of damage from the attack. (i.e. The Fiery Dart spell would do 10 points of damage to a troll brood)

It is unknown how long a troll brood can live, or even how they are born. They even have a legend that they are all the regenerated parts of an immortal giant troll being.

They also may not purchase the Nobility skill

* Note: All troll broods must have a fey (Eldaran or Eldarine) as their sponsor in play. They are attached to this character and their house

 Note: You must have the Eldar Race Marshall's permission to play this race, and be connected to an Eldar player character.

* All Players wishing to start a troll brood must have achieved enough experience to be at minimum Level 10 before creating one of these beings

The Goblinoids

The Goblinoid Races: Often considered the enemy of humankind, the Goblinoid races are, fierce, aggressive, and cunning; these creatures are found in all parts of our world.

Goblinoids come in a wide variety of races and sub species. The only thing that tend to hold them all in common is that they revel in bloodshed and destruction wherever they go. War is their guiding force, strife their purpose, and a passion for violence is almost universal amongst their entire ilk.

The player must decide how best to handle the savage nature of these beings. Though players may not start as a full-blooded member of these races, their ilk often have the same tendencies, even if they are just below the surface. They are regarded with suspicion and even hatred most place they go. They often turn to a life of adventure and travel as a means to never place roots down and always stay away from the bigotries that haunt their lives.

Will you be an outcast from an Orcish tribe, or a rampaging member of a pack of Ogres? These races provide a great role-playing opportunity and are a lot of fun.

Orc-Blood [R]:

Orcish history is drenched with blood especially Elven. It seems that their nature is to destroy; because of that, most people view these beings as evil destroyers with little redeeming qualities.

The full-blooded Orc is the adversary, but they do often leave a softer hearted progeny in their wake, namely the Orc-Bloods. Orc-Bloods make fierce champions and can become loyal companions.

Orc-Bloods are a relatively short lived race and usually don't live past sixty years of age.

Make-Up and Costuming Requirements:

Orc-Bloods have brownish dark green, splotchy black or graying skin and black, brown or dark red hair. Remember, a player must cover all exposed skin with make-up.

They are required to wear tusks at all times. Unless eating, of course!

Orc-Bloods also tend to have pointed ears, but unlike the gently sloping ears of Elves, an orc-blood's ears tend to be serrated or jagged.

Orc-Bloods can wear any type of costuming, but usually prefer a more "barbaric" look. Tattoos are another very common trait amongst the orc-bloods

Population: Six (6) per 100 players.

Special Masteries: Orcish Weapon Master (All Bladed and Cleaving Weapons)

Inherent Advantages:

Orcs are very strong, and their kin share that attribute. Orc-Bloods get a +1 Enhanced Strength bonus.

Furthermore, all orc-bloods may purchase their Enhanced Strength score up to +5 regardless of class. Champions and Smiths may purchase five strength points as per their profession, for a total +6 Enhanced Strength.

Orcish heritage is one full of war and strife. As such Orcs quickly learn that the more armor the better. This carries over to the orc-bloods as well. As such, orc-bloods may purchase the Wear Extra Armor skill at -1 skill points per level.

The Orcish constitution also gives them a +10 hit point bonus to their total. Thus, they may attain +10 hit points over their profession's hit points cap.

Orcs like to see things bleed, and they have developed a great fondness for edged weapons of all types. Orc-Bloods may purchase the Orcish Weapon Master skill, which includes all bladed weapons from a dagger to a two-handed sword and all forms of cleaving weapons both one and two handed.

Inherent Disadvantages:

Many consider orc-bloods to be a stupid race. While there are no doubt less intelligent members of any race, the orc-bloods are anything but.

Regardless, orc-bloods have a difficult time learning to read and write. Because of that, an orc-blood player must pay double (x2) skill point cost for any Ethereal Art or Read & Write skills.

They also may not purchase the Nobility skill

Orc-Bloods also pay double (x2) for any Informational Lore skill. Orc-Blood martial upbringing limits them in the ways of magic further. They may never purchase any of the Ritual Master skills or Magical Lore skills

Note: you must have a Marshall's approval to play an orc-blood.

The Ogrekin [R]:

Ogre-kin are less common than their full-blooded kin and often prefer to remain in solitude, even though they are well accepted into ogre society.

This does not preclude these behemoths from adventuring, however, and they can hold most any occupation. They have a hidden aggressive nature and can be more vicious than any orc.

Ogrekin also have a hard time understanding the concept of a weaker race being in charge. Might makes right and someone must generally prove to an Ogrekin why they should lead.

This often gets them into brawls, but if defeated, and then shown kindness or offered friendship one could never ask for a more loyal companion.

Ogrekin are relatively long-lived races some are known to have lived to be over 150 years of age.

Make-Up and Costuming Requirements:

Ogrekin have dark yellowish skin if they are related to the hill Ogres, and deep brown skin if they are more akin to the Ogres of the high mountains, both types can be highlighted with related colors like lighter browns or deep oranges. Remember, a player must cover all exposed skin with make-up.

Ogrekin can have hair of any natural color, but it is usually dark. They also are required to wear tusks at all times. Unless eating, of course!

Ogrekin can wear any type of costuming, but usually prefer animal skins or leather armor to any fancy dress or heavy plate armor.

Inherent Advantages:

Ogres are very strong and pass that attribute onto their kin through a +1 Enhanced Strength bonus. This bonus allows the character to deal an additional point of damage in combat.

Furthermore, all Ogrekin may purchase their Enhanced Strength score up to +5 regardless of class. Champions and Marauders may purchase five additional strength points as per their profession for a total +6 Enhanced Strength.

The ogre's constitution also gives them a +15 hit points bonus to their total. Thus, they may attain +15 hit points over their profession's hit point cap.

Ogre society praises strength and toughness above all else. As such, ogrekin can purchase the Fortify and Master Fortify skills for -1 skill point

Inherent Disadvantages:

Many consider ogrekin to be slower and less intelligent than the more "civilized" races.

Ogres and ogrekin do not seem to mind this impression as it tends to give them an advantage over the other races when it comes to getting away with things.

None the less, ogrekin, like orc-bloods, have a difficult time learning to read and write and must pay double (x2) skill point cost for any Ethereal Art and the Read & Write skill.

They also may not purchase the Nobility skill

An Ogrekin's bulk means they cannot effectively use a buckler shield, and thus can't purchase the Shield Use:Buckler or Shield Master skills.

Note: You must have a Marshall's Approval to play this race.

The Oni or Ogre Magi [R]:

Oni or ogre magi as they are commonly called are a strange race of ogre.

Warped by powerful Ethereal magics they share a similar history to normal Ogres, and sometimes the offspring of two normal Ogres can turn out to be a blue skinned ogre magi.

Oni are less common than their full-blooded kin, and it is rumored that there is a colony of these creature on a large volcanic island where they practice mighty Ethereal magics in solitude away from prying eyes.

This does not preclude these Ethereal champions from adventuring, however, and these cunning casters have a quick and devious mind.

Make-Up and Costuming Requirements:

Ogre magi have dark bluish skin that can be highlighted with colors like red and purples.

Oni can have hair of any color, but it is usually dark, and even can be of strange colors such as blue, or green. Very rarely female Oni are said to have silver, and the rare male metallic gold.

They are required to wear tusks at all times. Unless eating, of course!

Some Oni also grow horns like the Djinn-born or fey.

Ogre magi can wear any type of costuming, but usually prefer a more Oriental or Persian look.

Remember that a player must cover all exposed skin with make-up.

Special Skills: None

Special Masteries: None

Inherent Advantages:

Ogres are very strong and pass that attribute onto their Oni kin through a +1 Enhanced Strength Bonus. This bonus allows the character to deal an additional point of damage in combat.

Please Note their Enhanced Strength bonus is in addition to any Enhanced Strength their profession may allow them to buy but does not allow them to exceed that limit.

The ogre magi constitution also gives them a +10 hit point bonus, and thus +10 to their profession's maximum

Inherent Disadvantages:

Unlike Ogres, which many consider to be an unintelligent race, Oni are known to be very intelligent and are quite capable casters. While there are no doubt stupid members of any race, the Oni are anything but.

Unlike their ogre brethren; Oni can easily learn any Ethereal Magics. But due to the ogre society's lack of a written language they must still pay double (x2) to learn the Read & Write skill.

They are inherently Ethereal creatures though and can thus never learn Terrestrial magics of any sort. This means that they are also unable to become any of the Terrestrial magic based professions, which include: Ranger, or any Knight profession.

Furthermore, Oni lack the benefit that others of ogre descent gain in that they cannot learn additional Enhanced Strength beyond what their chosen profession would allow.

They also may not purchase the Nobility skill

An Oni's bulk means they cannot effectively use a buckler shield, and thus can't purchase the Shield Use:Buckler or Shield Master skills.

The Ethereal Races

The Ethereal Races: The list of other races and species that have visited us is long and varied. Djinn-born, the Brotherhood Arcanum, and the Sons & Daughters of Kyth, as well as, others more mysterious have all left their mark. War is usually the gift they bring, and death is left as a reminder.

Note: All players wishing to start an Ethereal race must have achieved enough experience to be at minimum Level 15 before creating one of these beings. See a Marshall or Staff on the ways this can be achieved. You must have a Marshall's approval to play any Ethereal.

The Daughters of Kyth [R]:

Long ago there was a great war on the Ethereal borders. Slaves of the Darkness rebelled. Their leader was the Great Kyth.

These sons and daughters fought for their freedom, and won, but at a great cost. Kyth was utterly destroyed in the battle, consumed as if she never existed.

The former slaves had always been kept separate from one another as far as male and female, and when the final backlash of titanic magical energy ripped the fabric of existence they were again cast far from one another.

Over millennia the Daughters of Kyth developed great skill at the Celestial arts, and traveled the planes in search of what had happened to their beloved mother Kyth. As they travelled they became one with the planes around them, and their appearances changed to reflect their new power.

Finally, they were reunited with their brothers, but too late, for the male of the species had made a horrible and unforgivable mistake. The arrogant males' legends held that Kyth was a male. Further they bent their lives toward the ways of Arcanist magic.

So, the debate began, and though the two are of one race they no longer have the same beliefs, and neither side is willing to give in as to the true identity of Kyth.

Daughters of Kyth are very long lived; they can endure for thousands of years

Make-Up and Costume Requirements:

Daughters of Kyth have yellow to bright gold skin with darker highlights and spots. The Daughters of Kyth's hair is usually a dark color, but may be any natural color. A daughter of Kyth often has only a top knot of hair and this can be achieved through a prosthetic cap. Daughters of Kyth have serrated ears as well. Nose prosthetics to make the players nostrils appear as slits are also encouraged.

Daughters of Kyth tend to wear costuming of a flowing nature, often adorned with magical symbols or glyphs. They also often cover their bodies with a cloak or hood to cover their obviously alien nature.

Population: One (1) per 100 players; with a minimum of 100 players before becoming available to play.

Preferred Professions: Artificer

Forbidden Professions: All Champions, All Knights, Ranger, & Duelist

Skill Information

Special Skills: Resist Arcanist (up to 5 times)

Special Masteries: None

Inherent Advantages:

Because of their otherworldly origins, the Daughters of Kyth have been exposed to the powerful ethereal forces of their hidden home. Thus, Daughters of Kyth may purchase the skill Resist Arcanist Magic up to 5 times regardless of their profession.

Daughters of Kyth who learn Celestial magic as their primary magic gain a special bonus of an additional spell at each level of magic they have learned. For example, if a daughter of Kyth has a 4,3,2,1 primary Celestial column they may cast 5,4,3,2 spells. These bonus spells MUST be a Celestial only spell.

Their special knowledge of Ethereal magic allows Daughters of Kyth to purchase the Celestial Arts skill for half skill point cost, rounded up.

Inherent Disadvantages:

Daughters of Kyth are completely unable to learn any Terrestrial Arts. So powerful is the Daughters of Kyth's pull toward Celestial Magic that they cannot learn the Arcanist Arts skill.

Sons and Daughters of Kyth can be great fun to role-play. Though they are technically the same race they have traveled in two completely different directions, and as such can no longer agree on their shared past. So, strong is this that though violence is typically forbidden against one another, long, and sometimes very loud heated arguments are common. All this strife is over whether Kyth was male or female.

They also may not purchase the Nobility skill

Note: All players wishing to start a daughter of Kith must have achieved enough experience to be at minimum Level 10 before creating one of these beings. See a Marshall or Staff on the ways this can be achieved.

The Djinn-born [R]:

Related to the Djinn such as the genies of air and the efreeti of fire, these elemental beings are masters of Elemental magics.

Their keeps seem to float around many of the most extreme environments of the world. Deserts, volcanoes, arctic plains all are home, and in fact relished by the Djinn-born

Djinn-born are very long lived, it is speculated they can endure for thousands of years powered by the magic they manipulate.

Population: Three (3) per 100 players; with a Minimum of 100 players before becoming available to play.

Profession Information

Preferred Professions: Sorcerer & Sentinel

Forbidden Professions: Marauder, Ranger, Knight of Valor, Knight of Darkness

Affinities

Weapon: Short Blade & Spear

Magic: Elemental

Production: Scribe

Skill Information

Special Skills: Resist Elemental (up to 5 times, plus any class Resists)

Special Masteries: None

Make-Up and Costume Requirements:

Djinn-born must wear various prosthetics like horns or ears or both and should be made to look like the element they are closest to, or multiple elements if approved by a Marshall.

Djinn-born have full body make-up that must reflect the nature of the element they are closest to, or even multiple elements. So, a fire Djinn-born might have red skin with bright orange and yellow veins, brown or gray like dirt or even marble would mark a Djinn-born close to earth. Prosthetics are encouraged and may be used for a more elemental face. A Djinn-born's hair is usually a dark color, but may be any color, or none.

As elemental beings, the Djinn-born can use prosthetics to add to their look. A player may want to have crystals or rocks coming out of their Djinn-born's arms or head. Several looks can be achieved to give the feeling of being one with the elements.

Djinn-born tend to wear costuming of a flowing nature, often adorned with magical symbols or glyphs. They also often cover their bodies in bright magical runes.

Inherent Advantages:

Djinn-born have been exposed to the powerful elemental forces of their planar exile. Thus, Djinn-born may purchase the skill Resist Elemental up to 5 times regardless of their profession or any skill in Elemental magic, these are in addition to any their profession or spell column allows.

Djinn-born who learn Elemental as their primary magic gain a special bonus of an additional spell at each level of magic they have learned. For example, if a Djinn-born has a 4,3,2,1 primary elemental column they may cast 5,4,3,2 spells. These bonus spells MUST be an Elemental spell. (I.e. Fire, Ice, Lightning)

Their special knowledge of Ethereal magic allows Djinn-born to purchase the Elemental Arts skill for half skill point cost, rounded up.

Djinn-born are said to be so hearty they are immune to elemental damage. Though this is not quite the case they do become more in tune with the elements as they progress. This translates into a damage reduction verse Elemental attacks and spells of minus one (-1) per level of the Djinn-born, regardless of his or her profession. This does not apply to the base damage of a weapon such that a sword calling 10 magical fire would still do its base 10 magic against the Djinn-born. But the fiery breath of a hell hound would be reduced by this defense. (Example a 7th Level Djinn-born rogue who is hit by a 10 fire packet from a hell hound or an Ice Blast spell from an elemental would only take three (3) points of damage from the attack.

Starting Djinn-born may buy the Nobility skill if they wish.

Inherent Disadvantages:

Djinn-born are completely unable to learn the Hearth Arts or Necromancy Arts skills.

In addition, a Djinn-born must pay an additional 1 skill point cost for each Spell Level purchased for any Terrestrial Art they can learn. (i.e. Knights of Strife now pay 3 for a 1st or 2nd level spell slot, 4 for a 3rd and so on.)

So powerful is the Djinn-born pull toward Elemental magic that it must always be their primary Ethereal Art, learned before Arcanist or Celestial.

Note: All Players wishing to start a Djinn-born must have achieved enough experience to be at minimum Level 15 before creating one of these beings. See a Marshall or Staff on the ways this can be achieved.

Note: You must have a Marshall's approval to play this race!

The Sons of Kyth [R]:

Long ago there was a great war on the Ethereal borders. Slaves rebelled against their masters and their leader was the Great Kyth.

These sons and daughters fought for their freedom, and won, but at a great cost. Kyth was utterly destroyed in the battle, consumed as if he never existed.

The former male and female slaves had always been kept in separate housing far from another. So, when the final backlash of titanic magical energy ripped the fabric of existence they were once again cast far from one another.

So, the debate began, and though the two are one race they no longer have the same history. Neither side is willing to give in as to the true identity of Kyth.

Mythic Adventures

Class Groups and Professions

Live Action Role-Playing Game

Chapter 5: Professions

Professions are first based on a Class or grouping such as Champions or Scoundrels which determine the basics of the group, such that all professions in a group gain hit points at the same rate and have the same maximum hit points.

Every player must choose what profession his/her persona will be. Professions do more than just determine what type of skills a person will be able to purchase, but also how much those skills will cost and even how much of certain skills one may buy.

Read through the list of professions, both for what they can and cannot do, what the cost of their skills are, and how many of any given skill they can buy.

Also note that not all professions are open to all of the playable races, such as Orcs cannot become Scholars, nor can a Shireling become a Warrior or Marauder.

Always keep in mind the role-playing aspect you wish to portray. By combining your race and your profession you will find that, no matter which profession you choose, your opportunities abound.

Here is a brief synopsis of the Classes and Professions of Mythic Adventures

Champions

- Warrior
 - Soldiers, brawlers and the premier combatants.

The Champions

Champion professions excel at martial skills, and they can easily dominate a melee combat.

Champions are also the toughest of the professions, adding to their survivability in almost any situation. They rely on strength of arm and armor to win the day.

Warriors

These Champions are the most basic form of combatant. This does not mean that they are all cookie cutters of one another quite the opposite.

Warriors form the back bone of any military force, and they can learn at least the basics of any martial skill in the game.

Classic examples of Warriors in history would be the Spartans, most of the Crusaders, even the Musketeers.

Hit Points: 5 per level up to 100 (adjusted by race)

Maximum Weapon Damage: +30 (Thirty)

Maximum Armor: 200

Weapon Restrictions: None

Max Backstab Damage: +9 (nine)

Maximum Spells: Four (4) column Primary

Magic Type: Any

Maximum Strength: +5 (five) adjusted by race

Racial Restrictions: No Shirelings, Gnomes, Sons of Kyth, Daughters of Kyth.

Warriors may learn to call more damage through skills at +30 (thirty) than any other profession. This also means they may learn as many Parries, Critical Strikes, Ripostes, and Lethal Strikes as their Weapon Damage will allow them, as well as Shield Blocks and Shield Bashes.

Warriors have no weapon restrictions and can learn any form of weapon combat including any Weapon Master their race allows.

When it comes to stealth, Warriors are not averse to these tactics, and though not as well suited for these tasks as a Rogue they can still excel and gain enough Backstab Damage at +9 (nine) to be able to also buy Assassinates, Dodge/Intercepts, Feints and Eviscerate attacks up to what their skill in Backstab Damage will allow.

Warriors can learn magic. They will never be as well suited for this as other professions, or even other types of armored combatants such as Knights of Valor or Rangers, but they can with time and great effort succeed in magic and are even able to learn from any discipline of magic, gaining up to a four (4) column in that magic type.

Runes, as with all professions, are available to Warriors and many a Warrior has learned these valuable skills to augment their combat prowess.

Crafts, Lores, and even Production skills can all be learned by the Warrior profession, and many can even be mastered.

Warriors form the backbone of any military group, they can wear as much armor as they can carry, gaining the benefit of every piece, up to 200 armor points.

As a member of the Warrior profession, seek out those who can further your martial skill. Join a Garrison or town guard, become part of a mercenary group, or strike it out with your trusty sword and shield, decked out in your best armor. The whole of the world beckons, and riches wait at the end of your blade.

Special Abilities:

5th Level: Weapon Specialization I (3 points) - A warrior may choose a fighting style to specialize in. They may choose a Basic Weapon Skill (One Handed Blunt, 2 Handed Cleaving, Medium Shield, etc.) for each hand. A 2 Handed Weapon Skill takes both hand selections. The effect of the Affinity is +1 Weapon Damage and -1 Physical DR per level of the Affinity when using those weapons. The damage may stack with other applicable affinities, but only the highest individual affinity DR will apply.

15th Level: Weapon Specialization II (3 Points) - The warrior may purchase the second level of their chosen affinity.

20th Level: Resolute Defense (5 points) purchased every 20 Levels (20, 40, 60, 80 & 100) This skill allows the user to take only 1 hit point of damage from any damaging spell, attack or effect. This includes special attacks or spells which normally would drop the character to critically wounded or worse status, such as Critical Strike, Lethal Strike, Assassinate, the Death or Condemn spells, and similar. To activate this ability, the user must loudly declare "Resolute Defense" once affected by an attack.

25th Level: Ferocious Strike (5 points) purchased every 25 levels (25, 50, 75, 100). This is a melee attack which if successful will cause the victim to take x3 (triple) damage from the attack (up to the weapon's maximum potential damage). User must state "Ferocious Strike <Damage/type>"

25th Level: Weapon Specialization III (3 Points) - The warrior may purchase the third level of their chosen affinity.

30th Level: Weak Points (Free) The Warrior may call the Magic Tagline when using their Specialization style to represent overcoming a target's inherent resistances. Requires Weapon Specialization 3.

40th Level: The Heat of Battle (5 points) purchased every 40 Levels (40,80)– Gain +3 Dam, -3 DR for 10 minutes. Activate by saying "The Heat of Battle!"

50th Level: Warcry (5 Points) purchased every 50 levels (50,100) 10' AoE Fear vs Enemies. Activate by saying "Warcry. Fear 10-foot radius"

Cavaliers

These Champions are often mistaken for those of the Knight professions.

Cavaliers are those Champions of privileged birth, and heavy arms who ride out to take on the enemies of family, land and pride. They often feel they are entitled to a life of valor and privilege long after their family fortunes have run dry.

Though many are arrogant and haughty, others still are noble and self-sacrificing for their land and people, feeling they must take on every burden, every slight, and carry out every judgment themselves, to show the people why the nobles justly rule the common class of people.

Classic examples of Cavaliers in history would be the Dragoons, Robber Barons, Knighted Nobles and even the Conquistadors

Maximum Weapon Damage: +24 (Twenty-four)

Maximum Armor: 200

Weapon Restrictions: Missile and Primitive

Max Backstab Damage: +0 (none)

Maximum Spells: Five (5) column Primary of any type, and a Four (4) column Secondary of any type of magic.

Magic Type: Any

Racial Restrictions: No Romanovi, Dawn Elves, Sylvan Elves, Gnome, Shireling, OGREkin, Orc-Blood, Oni, Troll-Brood, Son of Kith, Daughter of Kith, Wolven, Ursoni, Minotaur, Ima'Ghandi, Kili'Samdi or Duma'Handi can ever become a Cavalier

Cavaliers may learn to call up to +24 (twenty-four) points damage through skills, as the weapon type will allow. This also means they may learn as many Critical, Riposte, and Lethal Strikes as their damage skill will allow them, as well as Shield Blocks and Shield Bashes.

Cavaliers have few weapon restrictions, other than use of pole arms, staves, clubs and other commoner weapons. Otherwise they can learn any form of weapon combat including any Weapon Master their race allows.

When it comes to stealth, Cavaliers will not dirty their hands with it. They have subordinates for such things after all. They are not averse to these tactics, they just don't employ them themselves. Thus, they can never learn Ambush, or any Backstab Damage at all, and therefore may not learn any of the more advanced attacks either such as Eviscerate.

Cavaliers can learn any magic type. In fact, because a Cavalier is well educated they can learn more than one type of magic if they are so inclined. They can gain up to a five (5) column in their Primary spell column, and must learn this in a five (5) column format.

The Cavalier may also learn a Secondary magic and with time and great effort succeed, gaining up to a four (4) column.

Runes, as with all professions, are available to Cavalier and many a Cavalier has learned these valuable skills to augment their combat prowess.

Crafts, Lores, and even Production skills can all be learned by the Cavalier, and some can even be mastered.

Cavaliers must always wear the best armor, or clothing as befitting their station in life. This means that a player who does not meet the standards of costuming set forth by the Marshalls, will be stripped of his / her special abilities until they return to their costuming requirements, and a Marshall approves their reactivation.

A Cavalier's disdain for common things is such that even if the Cavalier had the skill to use an item such as a club, and found a magical club +5, double (x2) damage versus everything, they would not use it in favor of their own well-made non-magical mace.

Cavaliers form the elite cavalry of many a military group, the can wear as much armor as they can carry, gaining the benefit of every piece, up to 200 armor points

As a member of the Cavalier profession, seek out other nobles and those who can further your martial skill. Earn an officer rank or buy a commission in a military unit.

Cavaliers also have several special abilities they can learn throughout their careers. As with all professions which have special abilities, a Cavalier must purchase the abilities of a lower level before he/she may purchase the higher level ones.

Cavaliers must start out with the Nobility Skill. They must also purchase the Read & Write skill at creation. They must know a Melee Weapon skill and a Shield Use skill by 5th level.

Special Abilities:

Stipend: Cavaliers are the epitome of what the nobility thinks of itself. They gain a 50% bonus to their noble stipend for an event.

5th Level: Resist Disease (3 points) A Cavalier may purchase this skill up to 5 times, in addition to any Racial or Magical Resists

10th Level: Resist Mind Effects (5 points) A Cavalier may purchase this skill up to 5 times, in addition to any Racial or Magical Resists

15th Level: Resist Toxins (5 points) A Cavalier may purchase this skill up to 5 times, in addition to any Racial or Magical Resists

20th Level: Resolute Defense (5 points) purchased every 20 Levels (20, 40, 60, 80 & 100) This skill allows the user to take only 1 hit point of damage from any damaging spell, attack or effect. This includes special attacks or spells which normally would drop the character to critically wounded or worse status, such as Critical Strike, Lethal Strike, Assassinate, the Death or Condemn spells, and similar. To activate this ability, the user must loudly declare “Resolute Defense” once affected by an attack.

30th Level: Role-Playing Skill: Riding Airborne Mount <chose appropriate flying mount> (Free)

50th Level: Cloak of Bravery: (Free) Once per day a Cavalier’s mere presence can inspire all those around him/her on a battlefield. This ability removes all Fear, Horror and Terror effects used on anyone within a 10’ radius of the user and grants those within that radius a temporary Bravery effect (as the skill) for 10 minutes as well.

Marauders

More than just rugged and backwards warriors, Marauders come from cultures that may be quite sophisticated, but at its core have a strong distrust of the “civilized” world and view its wealth and trappings as theirs for the taking.

Historical examples of what the more civilized people of the world considered Marauders exist. The cut throat buccaneers of the high seas, tribal people such as the nomadic horse riders of the Mongols, the stalwart conquerors of the Huns, the zealot Conquistadors, and the seafaring conquerors of the Norse, known as the Vikings, are all examples of what the world has considered Marauders.

Hit Points: 5 per level up to 100 (adjusted by race)

Maximum Weapon Damage: +27 (twenty-seven)

Maximum Armor: 50

Weapon Restrictions: None

Max Backstab Damage: +15 (fifteen)

Maximum Spells: None (they may learn Runes)

Magic Type: None

Racial Restrictions: Only Kingdom Humans, Romanovi, Orc-Blood, OGREkin, Troll Brood, WOVLEN, Minotaur, Ursoni, and Ima’Ghandi may become Marauders.

Marauders are not trained to be warriors as much as they are born to be. They come from tribes of people who have always had to fight to survive, for whom raiding others is not just about gaining wealth, but often just about survival.

They grind out their living with their own two hands. Not some ethereal magical forces, which civilized people often use to protect their weakling selves from the stronger raiders.

As born warriors, Marauders excel at combat, just like their Warrior cousins. They can purchase twenty-seven (27) levels of Weapon Damage. This also means they may learn as many Critical, Riposte, and Lethal Strikes as their Weapon Damage skill will allow them, as well as Shield Blocks and Shield Bashes.

They may also learn any weapon skill that their race will allow.

Marauders are natural hunters and stalkers, and as such the concept of stealth is a normal part of life. They prefer to face their opponents head on, but when a blade in the back is needed or a stealthy attack upon an unsuspecting enemy is called for a Marauder is quite capable of such. As such they can learn Backstab Damage up to +15 (fifteen) and thus able to also buy Assassinates, Dodge/Intercepts, Feints and Eviscerates up to what their skill in Backstab Damage will allow.

Marauders have a strong distrust for Ethereal magic and Necromancy and will never learn spells.

Marauders can and often do learn Runes though. In fact, they often wear clothes with complicated geometric patterns or even tattoos with such.

Many Crafts and Lore skills are open to the Marauder as well as Production skills. Though they often have a problem learning those skills which seem to be the backbone of many more “civilized” cultures such as Engineering and higher end Poisons and Alchemies.

As Marauders cannot learn spells they also do not have the means to learn to make scrolls and become Scribes. It should go without saying no Marauder can ever learn any Ritual Master or Magical Lores.

Marauders can be fun to play, and have a lot of role-playing potential. Often taking the role of the outsider, who seems both superstitious and even naive to those around them.

They furthermore excel on a battlefield. Their high hit point potential combined with their ability to call great amounts of damage with their chosen weapons and the numerous special attacks they can learn make them a force to be reckoned with.

Marauders may be a dominating force on the battlefield, and they often take what they want from a point of strength, rather than negotiation, but they are not without their limitations.

Due to their nature as raiders they tend to travel light, as such they will only take those items with them that they can carry regularly on their person or mount.

Marauders have several special abilities they can learn throughout their careers. As with all professions which have special abilities, a Marauder must purchase the abilities of a lower level before he/she may purchase the higher level ones.

Special Abilities:

1st Level: Role-playing Skill: Survival <outdoor type> (Free)

1st Level: Craft: <appropriate choice> (Free)

10th Level: Resist Corruption/Darkness (5 points) this may be learned up to 5 times

20th Level: Resist Arcanist Magic (5 points) this may be learned up to 5 times

25th Level: Ferocious Strike: (5 points) purchased once every 25 levels (25, 50, 75, 100). This is a melee attack which if successful will cause the victim to take x3 (triple) damage from the attack (up to the weapon's maximum potential damage). User must state "Ferocious Strike <Damage/type> "

30th Level: Resist Elemental Magic (5 points) this may be learned up to 5 times

40th Level: Resist Celestial Magic (5 points) this may be learned up to 5 times

50th Level: Resist Magic (5 points) this may be learned up to 5 times

The Knights

Knight; the word brings up images of the flower of chivalry, heavily armored defenders of the realm. Those whose very deeds and actions have proven themselves to be a cut above the rest of the world.

Loyalty, valor and honor are the traits all Knights share regardless of their disposition toward light or darkness, toward love or hatred.

Not all Knights are heavily armored, indeed many a would be swashbuckler could be called a Knight, as could a noble Samurai of the Easterlings.

What all Knights do share is a certain state of grace that places them above the normal populace, inner nobility.

This special state is what grants the Knights their special skills and abilities, that which causes them to be able to complete feats that others simply could not, to stand in the face of insurmountable odds and never flinch, in fact to even attain a state of total and complete immunity to fear itself.

Who can be a Knight is a limited option, not everyone or even every race is cut out for such duty, but those that are a special and rare breed indeed.

Knights have very strict guidelines in their profession when it comes to titles as well as lineage.

A Knight who has yet to learn his or her path of grace is called a Squire regardless of his noble standing. Squires may not purchase any spell levels before learning their path of grace.

Once a Knight has learned his / her path of grace, they are known as a Knight Errant until they have learned all their special abilities and the requirements for them up to 25th Level, at which time they are considered a Full Knight, and often just use the title Knight.

A Knight Master is one who has gained +10 Weapon Damage, three (3) Parries, three (3) Critical Strikes, two (2) Ripostes and two (2) Lethal Strikes, as well as a 9th level spell in their Primary magic type, and all special abilities through level 50.

A Knight Marshall is one who has learned even more of the martial and magical skills, and has all of a Knight's special abilities. It requires +15 (fifteen) Weapon Damage, a 9th Level Spell in their Primary school, three (3) Parries, three (3) Critical Strikes, three (3) Riposte and three (3) Lethal Strikes.

Once a Knight reaches the rank of Knight Errant they may begin to train those of lesser skill. A Knight will always be able to recite his or her lineage of Knight Masters, and whom they have served, back to the beginning.

Knights are proud of where they came from and would rather face death than disgrace their lineage or their liege's honor.

Thus, no Knight will ever refuse an order that does not directly break a Knight's code. (Such as ordering a Knight of Valor to use an item to create undead)

No Knight will ever lie. In fact, all Knights will be forthrightly, some might even say brutally, honest. A Knight may refuse to answer a question though, especially if it would endanger or dishonor their master or liege.

Knights will always accept an honor challenge, and will always fight such challenges with honor, staying to any rules and conditions agreed upon in the challenge.

Knights will not attack from stealth themselves. They will always face an opponent directly. This does not mean once a battle is joined a Knight must call out to each individual they attack, as a mass battle is just that and everyone in the battle is keenly aware they are in a fight.

A Knight of any type is proud of his or her Knighthood. They will never omit the fact they are a knight, nor forget to tell someone. In fact, once they reach Knight Errant status all knights will always add Sir or Dame to their title as is appropriate. A knight will never let someone guess as to whether or not they are a knight. (i.e. if they don't ask they don't find out will earn a knight a one-way trip to a fall from grace)

A Knight does not care about another Knight's magics, in fact to even ask a Knight what type of Knight they are because of the magic they cast is a grave offense and grounds for an honor duel.

Each type of Knight, though they have differing play styles, will always adhere to the rules above. To not do so can cause the Knight to lose their special abilities and even fall from grace, becoming unable to ever learn any spells or special abilities other than combat skills, still staying within the limits of the class.

All Knights can sense a fallen Knight, and will shun such individuals. If a player ever falls from grace they must inform all other Knights that they encounter of their fall.

Special Note on Knights: While a professional Knight is still a Squire it is possible to change from one type to another. As a professional Knight treats all other Knights the same, regardless of their magical preferences, it is possible for a Squire of a Knight of Strife to choose upon attaining his Hand of Grace and Knight Errant position to be a Knight of Valor or even Darkness.

As a result. Knights may not purchase any spell levels until after they have chosen their knightly path at level 10.

As an additional note, Knights with a Magic Affinity may always select that magic as their secondary column in addition to the ones listed in each type.

Knights of Valor

The Knights of Valor give themselves to a higher ideal. They are the defenders of the weak, the champions of the realm, and those rare individuals whose higher calling benefits us all.

The Knight of Valor is often compared to a Paladin, or one of the Knights of the Round table.

They are the ones the masses go to for protection and the ones the masses willingly serve, because they have proven themselves time and again, and have earned the respect of the populace.

Hit Points: 4 per level up to 80 (adjusted by race)

Maximum Weapon Damage: +21 (twenty-one)

Maximum Armor: 150

Weapon Restrictions: Limited Missile Weapons

Max Backstab Damage: None

Maximum Spells: 9 Column in Healer, 4 Column Secondary, may also learn Runes

Magic Type: Healer Primary column, Secondary limited to Wrath or Magic Affinity (also see Prestige groups for exceptions)

Racial Restrictions: No Romanovi, Sylvan Elf, Eldaran, Shadow Dwarf, Shireling, Gnome, Orc-Blood, Oni, Troll Brood, Djinn-born, Sons of Kyth, Daughters of Kyth, Wolven, Minotaur or Ursoni may become Knights of Valor.

Special Note: Many Knights start off purchasing the Nobility skill, but it is not necessary

Knights of Valor may learn to call up to +21 (twenty-one) Weapon Damage with any weapon they can wield, and the weapon type will allow. This also means they may learn as many Critical, Riposte, and Lethal Strikes as their Weapon Damage will allow them, as well as Shield Blocks and Shield Bashes.

Knights of Valor have no weapon restrictions, beyond some missile weapons and can learn any form of weapon combat including any Weapon Master their race allows.

Knights of Valor may learn Bow or Crossbow depending on their race. High Elven Knights and Eldarine Knights may learn the Bow skill; Dwarves can learn the Crossbow skill, all Knights who are member of a Younger Race who chose to learn Engineering may learn to use Firearms as well. Any Knight may learn Thrown Weapon, but not the Weapon Master - Missile Weapons skill.

Stealth is a coward's tool, and one no Knight would ever resort to themselves. Knights of Valor know the value of intelligence and of scouts but they themselves could never resort to such tactics. They can never learn the ways of stealth such as Ambush and Backstab Damage. They are therefore unable to ever learn Assassinate, Dodge/Intercept, Feint or Eviscerate. To be plain, these skills are simply unacceptable and beneath them.

Knights of Valor must learn Healing magic. Because of their state of grace, their costs are far lower than that of a Warrior. Knights of Valor can gain up to a nine (9) column in their Healer spells and must learn this in a five (5) column format.

Knights of Valor may also learn Wrath magic as a Secondary magic and with time and great effort succeed, gaining up to a four (4) column in that magic type as well. (See Prestige Groups for exceptions)

Runes, as with all professions, are available to Knights of Valor and many a Knight has learned these valuable skills to augment their combat prowess.

Crafts, Lores, and even Production skills can all be learned by the Knight professions, but under great restriction, and some of these skills are simply barred from the Knight forever, such as Poisons.

Knights of Valor gain special abilities as their service deepens. Because of their special devotions and requirements Knights of Valor must have certain required skills by 3rd Level. These basic skills are Read & Write, First Aid, and a Weapon Skill

Knights of Valor gain the following special abilities. These abilities may each only be purchased one time unless otherwise specified, and they must be purchased in order, though in the case of multiple purchase skills, only one must be purchased before the next skill may be.

Special Abilities

1st Level: Role-Playing Skill: Riding <chose appropriate land mount> (Free)

1st Level: Role-Playing Skill: Heraldry (Free)

The Path of Valor

10th Level: Hand of Valor (Free) This skill is useable once every hour. Due to the self-sacrificing nature of the Knight of Valor he/she can access a healing power that no other can. This is the start of their unique path of grace. This skill will allow a Knight to sacrifice from their own hit points to heal another, limited by their level. For every hit point a Knight sacrifices in this manner the target is healed 2 hit points up to their regular maximum but not beyond. This skill can be used to heal someone in the Bleeding Out health status to bring them back to healthy, but has no effect on people in the Critically Wounded, Lethally Wounded or Dead health statuses.

As a further bonus for their Valor, a Knight may instead use this ability to heal themselves for one (1) hit point per level up to their maximum hit points but not exceeding them. Regardless this healing may only be utilized once per hour.

This skill is on a counter so "Healing 2 hit points, healing 4 hit points, ...and so on.

Example a level 12 Knight of Valor could heal a comrade 24 hit points by sacrificing 12 of his/her own hit points, or his/herself 12 hit points because of their state of Grace.

This skill has no effect on creatures without a life-force or the Undead.

Note: A Knight must complete a quest to gain this skill.

12th Level: Repel Undead 1/day (1 point) (Requires Healer Arts)

14th Level: Remove Disease 1/ day (1 point) (Requires Healer Arts)

15th Level: Bravery (Free) Complete immunity to Fear, Terror and Horror Spells and effects.

Note: A Knight must complete a quest to gain this skill.

16th Level: Turn Undead 1/day (2 points) (Requires Healer Spells Level 1)

17th Level: Remove Toxin 1/day (3 points) (Requires Healer Spells Level 2)

18th Level: Zone of Life 1/day (3 points) (Requires Healer Spells Level 3)

19th Level: Shield of Valor 1/day (4 Points) (Requires Healer Spells Level 4)

20th Level: Heal Lethal Wounds 1/day (4 points) (Requires Healer Spells Level 5)

20th Level: Additional Hand of Valor / hour (5 points), This skill is available to purchase again at levels 40, 60, 80 and 100

21st Level: Annihilate Undead 1/day (5 points) (Requires Healer Spells Level 6)

22nd Level: Heal 1/day (5 points) (Requires Healer Spells Level 6)

24th Level: Revive 1/ day (5 points) (Requires Healer Spells Level 7)

25th Level: Mace of Valor (5 points) May purchase up to 5 times.: This skill allows a Knight of Valor to add 2 points of Light damage per character level to a single attack against the Undead, creatures from the planes of Death, Hatred, Strife or Corruption, and the Dredd.

This attack counts as a Magic attack even if the Knight of Valor uses a non-magical weapon. It may not be used on creatures other than those of the Undead, creatures from the planes of Death, Hatred, Strife, Corruption, or the Dredd.

The attack would be regular damage + twice level in Light damage. The tagline would be Mace of Valor (Damage) Magical Light.

Example: A 25th level Knight of Valor who normally calls 10 Magic with their longsword would be able, for a single swing, to call "Mace of Valor - 60 Magical Light". If the attack hits it will affect the target. If missed, blocked, evaded, or parried it would still be used up, though it will not affect the target in those cases.

30th Level: Role-Playing Skill: Riding Airborne Mount <chose appropriate flying mount> (Free)

Note: A Knight must complete a quest to gain this skill

50th Level: Valor (Free) Complete immunity to all Undead Tagline effects. The Knight still takes damage, and is affected by spells, but does not suffer from the taglines of Undead such as, Nausea Venom or Dominate Gaze. For example: A melee attack of 7 Paralyze by an Undead would do 7 points of damage, but the Knight would be immune to the Paralyze effect.

Note: A Knight must complete a quest to gain this skill

Knights of Strife

Sometimes things must be done in the name of loyalty. Sometimes the weak must be shown who their betters are. Society needs leaders, and if those leaders must be harsh then so be it.

Knights of Strife, have often seen the face of war, and know that sometimes things must be done to save the world. Horrible things, but when your lord or master orders such, then his orders are to be followed to the letter.

Some Knights of Strife see themselves as the dominate force in a land. They are the land's protectors who lead troops in battle. Then win, even if they must sacrifice the whole of their forces to do so.

Many Knights of Strife are loyal servants of the people. They wish to build a perfect society, but to build that perfect society they must do terrible things, they must become monsters. They know they may never live in the society they helped build and protect, but someone must show all the monsters of the world that this society is protected by monsters as well. They will protect their perfect world at any cost.

The strong survive and the weak shall perish; it is the way of the world. This is the creed of the Knights of Strife.

Do not misunderstand these men and women. They are still extremely honorable. They live by a code the same as any knight. They follow this code to the letter. There is no room for misstep. They know the people fear them and that is good, because fear will keep the people strong; it will keep them alert and fear is a sign of respect.

Knights of Strife may purchase up to +21 (twenty-one) Weapon Damage This also means they may learn as many Critical, Riposte, and Lethal Strikes as their Weapon Damage will allow them, as well as Shield Blocks and Shield Bashes.

Knights of Strife have no weapon restrictions, beyond some missile weapons and can learn any form of weapon combat including any Weapon Master their race allows.

High Elven Knights and Eldarine Knights may learn the Bow skill; Dusk Elves and Dwarves can learn the Crossbow skill, all Knights who are member of a Younger Race who chose to learn Engineering may learn to use Firearms as well. Any Knight may learn Thrown Weapon, but not the Weapon Master - Missile Weapons skill.

Stealth is a coward's tool, and one no Knight would ever resort to themselves. Knights of Strife know the value of intelligence and of scouts but such information should be gathered by their subordinates not themselves as they are the leaders not the gathers. Thievery is dealt with harshly by these knights, and the hand of a thief may well be cut off as judgment for such acts.

Knights of Strife therefore can never learn the ways of stealth such as Ambush and Backstab Damage. They are therefore unable to ever Assassinate, Dodge/Intercept, Feint, or Eviscerate, as these skills are simply unacceptable and beneath them.

Knights of Strife must learn Wrath magic. Because of their state of grace, their costs are far lower than that of a Warrior. Knights of Strife can gain up to a nine (9) column in their Wrath spell and must learn this in a five (5) column format.

Knights of Strife may also learn from a limited pool of Secondary magics, learning only either Necromancy or Healing magics; gaining up to a four (4) column in that magic type as well. (See prestige groups for exceptions)

Runes, as with all professions, are available to Knights of Strife. They serve the purpose of augmenting their combat prowess, making them better combatants, and thus are quite common amongst the most powerful of these knights.

Crafts, Lores, and even Production skills can all be learned by the Knight professions, but under great restriction, and some of these skills are simply barred from the Knight forever, such as Poisons.

Knights of Strife gain special abilities as anger takes form and matures. Because of their special natures and requirements Knights of Strife must have certain required skills by 3rd Level. These basic skills are Read & Write, First Aid, and a Weapon Skill

Once these minimums have been met a Knight is free to learn any other allowable skill such as, Runes and Production.

Knights of Strife gain the following special abilities. These abilities may each only be purchased one time, and they must be purchased in order.

Special Abilities

The Path of Strife

10th Level: Hand of Strife (Free) Path of Strife. This skill is useable once every hour. Due to the war like nature of the Knight of Strife he/she can access a draining power that no other can. This is the start of their unique path of grace, The Path of Strife.

This skill will allow a Knight to drain from a target or their own hit points to heal another, limited by their level. For every hit point a Knight drains in this manner the target is healed 1 hit point up to their regular maximum but not beyond. This skill can be used to heal someone in the Bleeding Out health status to bring them back to healthy, but has no effect on people in the Critically Wounded, Lethally Wounded or Dead health statuses.

As a further bonus for their grace, a Knight of Strife may instead use this ability to heal themselves for one (1) hit point per level up to their maximum hit points, but not exceeding them, by draining a victim.

The victim must be willing or unable to resist the Knight of Strife. A victim can only be drained to 0 hit points at which time they will begin Bleeding Out and can provide no more health to the Knight or his target.

This skill is on a counter so “Draining 1 hit point, draining 2 hit points...” and so on.

Example: A level 12 Knight of Strife could heal a comrade 12 hit points by sacrificing 12 of his/her own hit points, heal a comrade 12 hit points by draining a victim and channeling the victim’s hit points to the target, or heal themselves 12 hit points by draining a victim. All because of their War like natures and Path of Strife.

This skill has no effect on creatures without a life-force or the Undead. Note: A Knight must complete a quest to gain this skill.

12th Level: Blessing of Wrath (1 point) (Requires Wrath Arts)

14th Level: Blades of Wrath 1/ day (1 point) (Requires Wrath Arts)

15th Level: Bravery (Free) Complete immunity to Fear, Terror and Horror Spells and effects. Note: A Knight must complete a quest to gain this skill.

16th Level: Blessing of War 1/day (2 points) (Requires Wrath spell level 1)

17th Level: Shield of War 1/day (3 points) (Requires Wrath spell level 2)

18th Level: Wrath of War 1/day (3 points) (Requires Wrath spell level 3)

19th Level: Shield of Rage 1/day (4 Points) (Requires Wrath spell level 4)

20th Level: Blades of Blood 1/day (4 points) (Requires Wrath spell level 5)

20th Level: Additional Hand of Strife / hour (5 points), This skill is available to purchase again at levels 40, 60, 80 and 100

21st Level: Armor of Heroes 1/day (5 points) (Requires Wrath Spells Level 6)

22nd Level: Emaciate 1/day (5 points) (Requires Wrath spell level 6)

24th Level: Death 1/day (5 points) (Requires Wrath Spell Level 7)

25th Level: Sword of Strife (5 points) May purchase up to 5 times.: This skill allows a Knight of Strife to add 1 point of Massive Damage per character level to a single attack against any enemy.

This attack counts as a Magic attack even if the Knight of Strife uses a non-magical weapon.

The attack would be regular damage + level in Massive damage. The tagline would be "Sword of Strife: (Damage) Massive.

Example: A 25th Level Knight of Strife who normally calls 10 magic with their mace would be able to, for a single swing, call "Sword of Strife - 35 Massive". If the attack hits it will affect the target. It may be missed, Evaded or Dodged, but may not be Parried or Blocked by normal means, either way it would still be used up.

30th Level: Role-Playing Skill: Riding Airborne Mount <chose appropriate flying mount> (Free) Note: A Knight must complete a quest to gain this skill

50th Level: Strife (Free) Complete immunity to all movement impairing tagline effects. The Knight will still take damage, and is affected by spells, but does not suffer from the taglines such as, Slow, Petrification and Paralyze. Example: A Melee attack of 7 Entangle by an Ent would do 7 points of damage, but the Knight would be immune to the entangling effect. Note: A Knight must complete a quest to gain this skill

Knights of Darkness

Power can slip through one's grasp. Old age can weaken one's sword arm. Wealth can all be spent. Honor and glory are the only things one can take to their grave, or are they?

Undeath has long been a power frightening and terrible, but with a promise as well. What if a Knight never had to sleep or eat? What if she could forever keep her vigil, and always remain strong, nay, be stronger for the service they have given their master.

Knights of Darkness serve the powers of Undeath, and they are rewarded for that service. These knights know that a never-ending supply of troops is just a graveyard away. That a battlefield's dead are just reinforcements waiting to be called upon.

That to serve Undeath is to cheat death and know that the role of an eternal Death Knight awaits them, if they strive hard enough, become powerful enough in life, and serve their master unendingly.

These are the true Anti-Paladins, servants of dark powers who promise eternal life in death. These Knights are the perverted reflections of the Knights of Valor.

Make no mistake these men and women are Knights. They are the ones who embrace the ways of honor and the Code of Knighthood to show they are superior to all others, and that in the end they do not fear death, they instead conquer it.

Hit Points: 4 per level up to 80 (adjusted by race)

Maximum Weapon Damage: +21 (twenty-one)

Maximum Armor: 150

Weapon Restrictions: Limited Missile Weapons

Max Backstab Damage: None

Maximum Spells: 9 Column Necromancy, 4 Column Secondary, may also learn Runes

Magic Type: Necromancy Primary column, Secondary limited to Wrath or Wrath or Magic Affinity, (also see Prestige groups for exceptions)

Racial Restrictions: Only Kingdom Humans, Farsini, Easterlings, Dusk Elves, Shadow Dwarves, Orc-Bloods, OGREkin, and the Shir'Khandi may become Knights of Darkness.

Special Note: Many Knights start off purchasing the Nobility skill, but it is not necessary,

Knights of Darkness may purchase up to +21 (twenty-one) Weapon Damage This also means they may learn as many Critical, Riposte, and Lethal Strikes as their Weapon Damage will allow them, as well as Shield Blocks and Shield Bashes.

Knights of Darkness have no weapon restrictions, beyond some missile weapons and can learn any form of weapon combat including any Weapon Master their race allows.

Knights of Darkness may learn Crossbow depending on their race. Dusk Elves and Dwarves can learn the Crossbow skill, all Knights who are member of a Younger Race who chose to learn Engineering may learn to use Firearms as well. Any Knight may learn Thrown Weapon, but not the Weapon Master - Missile Weapons skill.

Stealth is a fools' tool, and one no Knight would ever resort to themselves. Knights of Darkness know the value of intelligence and of scouts but also how easily the living can be thwarted by the undead, and the ability they have to sense one's life essence.

Knights of Darkness therefore can never learn the ways of stealth such as Ambush and Backstab Damage. They are therefore unable to ever Assassinate, Dodge/Intercept, Feint, or Eviscerate, as these skills are simply unacceptable and beneath them.

Knights of Darkness must learn Necromantic magic. Because of their state of darkness their costs are far lower than that of a Warrior. Knights of Darkness can gain up to a nine (9) column in their Necromancy spells and must learn this in a five (5) column format.

Knights of Darkness may also learn Wrath magic as a Secondary magic and with time and great effort succeed, gaining up to a four (4) column in that magic type as well. (see Prestige groups for exceptions)

Runes, as with all professions, are available to Knights of Darkness and many a Knight has learned these valuable skills to augment their combat prowess.

Crafts, Lores, and even Production skills can all be learned by the Knight profession, but under great restriction, and some of these skills are simply barred from the Knight forever, such as Poisons.

Knights of Darkness gain special abilities as their bond with Undeath matures. Because of their special natures and requirements Knights of Darkness must have certain required skills by 3rd Level. These basic skills are Read & Write, First Aid, and a Weapon Skill

Knights of Darkness gain the following special abilities. These abilities may each only be purchased one time unless otherwise specified, and they must be purchased in order, though in the case of multiple purchase skills, only one must be purchased before the next skill may be.

Special Abilities

1st Level: Role-Playing Skill: Riding <chose appropriate land mount> (Free)

The Path of Darkness

10th Level: Hand of Darkness (Free) This skill is useable once every hour. Due to the Necromantic nature of the Knight of Darkness he/she can access a draining power that no other can. This is the start of their unique path of grace, The Path of Darkness.

This skill will allow a Knight to drain from their targets hit points to heal themselves, limited by their level. For every Hit point a Knight drains in this manner they as healed 1 hit point up to their regular maximum but not beyond.

As a further bonus for their grace a Knight of Darkness may instead use this ability to heal an Undead for two (2) hit points per level up to their maximum hit points but not exceeding them, by draining a victim. This skill cannot bring an Undead back up from Dead.

The victim must be willing or unable to resist the Knight of Darkness. A victim can only be drained to 0 hit points at which time they will begin Bleeding Out and can provide no more health to the Knight or his target.

This skill is on a counter, so "Draining 1 hit point, draining 2 hit points..." and so on.

Example a level 12 Knight of Darkness could heal an Undead 24 hit points by draining 12 of his/her victims hit points or heal themselves 12 hit points by draining a victim. All because of their Necromantic like natures and Path of Darkness.

This skill has no effect on creatures without a life-force other than the Undead.

Note: A Knight must complete a quest to gain this skill.

12th Level: Elude Undead (1 point) (Requires Necromancy Arts)

A successful attack will further heal the Knight of Darkness 1 hit point per level of the Knight of Darkness. This skill will not heal the Knight beyond their normal hit points maximum.

This attack counts as a Magic attack even if the Knight of Darkness uses a non-magical weapon.

The attack would be regular damage + level in Draining damage. The tagline would be "Scythe of Darkness: (Damage) Magical Life Draining".

Example: A 25th level Knight of Darkness who normally calls 10 magic with their battle axe would be able to, for a single swing, call "Scythe of Darkness - 35 Magical Life Draining ". If the attack hits it will affect the target and would heal the Knight of Darkness 25 hit points (up to their hit point maximum but not exceeding it.). If the swing missed or was Blocked, Evaded, or Parried it would still be used up, though it will not affect the target in those cases.

30th Level: Level- Role-Playing Skill: Riding Airborne Mount <chose appropriate flying mount> (Free)

Note: A Knight must complete a quest to gain this skill

50th Level: Darkness (Free) Complete immunity to all tagline effects by creatures of Order and Life. The Knight will still take damage, and is affected by spells, but does not suffer from the taglines such as, Life Drain and Paralyze. For example: A melee attack of 7 Slow by a Life Elemental would do 7 points of damage, but the Knight would be immune to the slowing effect.

Note: A Knight must complete a quest to gain this skill

The Defenders

There are many people who throughout the History of the Realm have tried to combine the skills of a Warrior and those of the Magi into the ultimate hybrid combatant.

Rangers

Rangers are the wardens, protectors, caretakers, and defenders of nature and the natural balance of the world. Often seen as woodland champions, they are in fact from all natural climates, and regions.

Classic examples throughout history of Rangers would be men and women like Diana the Huntress, Robin Hood or Chingochgook & Hawkeye.

Maximum Armor: 75

Weapon Restrictions: None

Max Backstab Damage: +12 (twelve)

Maximum Spells: 7 column Druid, 5 column Elemental

Magic Type: Druid Primary column, Secondary limited to Elemental only.

Maximum Strength: +3 (three) adjusted by race

Racial Restrictions: No Shadow Dwarf, Gnome, Oni, Eldaran, Djinn-born, Sons of Kyth, or Daughters of Kyth may ever become Rangers.

Rangers tend to live a simple life, and though they may become or even start as nobles they tend to shed those trappings. They will only keep what money they can carry, and though they can own property such as a cabin in a forest, or even a family estate (though they may not be very attentive to it.) they tend to travel lightly, and never collect items just for personal wealth or greed's sake.

Therefore, a Ranger will donate to a higher cause such as his/her kingdom's troops, a band of healer's, or even to help maintain a small village's crops so they do not have to over hunt an area whenever possible. This is a role-playing trait which will be carefully monitored by Staff.

Greed is not a trait these defenders like or will indulge in themselves, they will only search for what they need, and often will leave a battlefield with only gathering the basics of life or information, leaving the gold to others who would be scavengers.

Rangers will act as guides often to others. They do this so that they can monitor those around them, and make sure they do not harm the natural environment. They often teach lessons to those who would over harvest or sport hunters, sometimes very violent lessons.

Abominations such as the Undead are never associated with, and are actively destroyed when they can be, and avoided if they must be.

Rangers often belong to the local Druid's Grove and act as wardens, but they are not required to join a Grove.

Rangers do not avoid elementally touched creatures such as the Djinn-born, and in fact have often become fast friends with various Elemental beings.

Rangers can and do serve others and often can be found as scouts for their race or members of the Kingdom's military and militias. They are still guided by conscious and will never willing do anything which would break their sense of justice, such as burn a forest.

Rangers may learn to call up to +18 (Eighteen) Weapon Damage with any weapon they can wield, and the weapon type will allow. This also means they may learn as many Critical, Riposte, and Lethal Strikes as their Weapon Damage will allow them, as well as Shield Blocks and Shield Bashes.

Rangers have no weapon restrictions and can learn any form of weapon combat including any Weapon Master their race allows.

When it comes to stealth, Rangers tend to embrace these skills. Many are skilled scouts and hunters who excel at stealthy maneuvering through the woodlands, and though not as well suited for these tasks as a Rogue they can still gain enough Backstab Damage at +12 (twelve) to be able to also buy Assassinates, Dodge/Intercepts, Feints and Eviscerate attacks up to what their skill in Backstab Damage will allow.

Rangers must learn Druidic magic. Rangers can gain up to a seven (7) column in their Druid magic and must learn this in a five (5) column format.

Rangers may also learn Elemental magics and with time and effort succeed, gaining up to a five (5) column in their Elemental column as well, learning these spells in a four (4) column format. (also, see Prestige groups for exceptions)

Runes, as with all professions, are available to Rangers and many a Ranger has learned these valuable skills to augment their combat prowess.

Crafts, Lores, and even Production skills can all be learned by the Ranger profession, and many can even be mastered.

Rangers gain special abilities as their bond with the natural world matures. Because of their special natures and requirements Rangers must have certain required skills by 3rd Level. These basic skills are Read & Write, First Aid, Druid Arts, and a Weapon Skill.

Rangers gain the following special abilities. These abilities may each only be purchased one time unless otherwise specified, and they must be purchased in order, though in the case of multiple purchase skills, only one must be purchased before the next skill may be. Though similar to a Knight's special abilities a Ranger learns his/hers based on level, basic skills, and prerequisites.

Special Abilities

1st Level: Role-Playing Skill Survival (Free) A Ranger must choose a natural environment such as Woodlands or Desert.

1st Level: Role-Playing Skill Tracking (Free)

1st Level: Greater Informational Lore: Nature (Free)

5th Level: Elude in Nature (3 points) up to 5 times. This skill allows the Ranger to Elude detection by creatures while in natural (non-urban) surroundings. This effect lasts ten (10) minutes and the Ranger must say "Elude" to the creatures he/she is avoiding during the duration of this skill. They cannot leave combat, attack, or cast during the Elude otherwise the effect is broken, and the creatures will act accordingly. (Requires Informational Lore: Nature)

Note: A Ranger does not have to learn this skill five times to buy their next skills of a higher level.

5th Level: Marksmanship (Free): +2 damage with any ranged weapons (Requires a ranged weapon skill)

10th Level: Speak with Animals 1/day (1 point) (Requires Druid Arts)

15th Level: Animal Friendship 1/day (3 points) (Requires Druid Arts) Animal Friendship causes a wild animal (Natural or Giant) to want to aid or assist the Ranger if they can, and to look at him/her in the most positive way. It does not grant the Ranger the ability to speak to the animal like the spell of the same name does.

15th Level: Greater Informational Lore: Elemental (Free)

20th Level: Elude Elemental (3 points) up to 5 times. This skill allows the Ranger to Elude detection by elemental creatures and beings connected to the elemental planes. This effect lasts ten (10) minutes and the Ranger must say "Elude" to the creatures he/she is avoiding during the duration of this skill. They cannot leave combat, attack, or cast during the Elude, otherwise the effect is broken, and the creatures will act accordingly. (Requires Elemental Arts)

Note: A Ranger does not have to learn this skill five times to buy their next skills of a higher level.

20th Level: Speak with Elemental 1/day (5 points) (Requires Elemental Arts)

50th Level: Gift of the Ents: Immunity to most toxins, including but not limited to Nausea and Poison taglines, as well as all ingested and gaseous Production skill poisons, but not Venom Coatings, Grand Master Poisons, or Poison spells. (Requires a Resist Toxin)

*Note: A Ranger may still learn the Resist Toxin skill up to what their Druid Spell Column will allow*

Avengers

Sometimes tragedy befalls those who can stand up and fight back. These people come forth, and bring terror back to those who would terrorize. Avengers are those people. Some tragic occurrence in their past drives them to defend others from that same tragedy, and bring judgment to the power that caused it, often delving into the same dark powers which were used against them to gather their revenge, other times learning the counter abilities to thwart their enemy.

Classic examples throughout history of Avengers would be men and women like Van Helsing, Hercules, Joan of Arc and even Samson.

Maximum Weapon Damage: +15 (fifteen)

Maximum Armor: 75

Weapon Restrictions: None

Max Backstab Damage: +15 (fifteen)

Maximum Spells: 7 column Primary, 6 column Secondary,

Magic Type: Any

Racial Restrictions: No High Elves or Gnomes may become Avengers.

Avengers may learn to call up to +15 (fifteen) Weapon Damage with any weapon they can wield, and the weapon type will allow. This also means they may learn as many Critical, Riposte, and Lethal Strikes as their Weapon Damage will allow them, as well as Shield Blocks and Shield Bashes.

When it comes to stealth, Avengers tend to embrace these skills. Many are skilled hunters and stalkers who excel at stealthy maneuvering through the woodlands, and though not as well suited for these tasks as a Rogue they can still gain enough Backstab Damage at +15 (fifteen) to be able to also buy Assassinates, Dodge/Intercepts, Feints and Eviscerate attacks up to what their skill in Backstab Damage will allow.

Avengers may learn any form of magic, and may achieve up to a seven (7) column in their Primary form of magic, learning this in a five (5) column format.

Avengers may also learn from a Secondary school of magic and with time and effort succeeds, gaining up to a six (6) column in their Secondary; learning this in a four (4) column format as well.

Runes, as with all professions, are available to Avengers and many an Avenger has learned these valuable skills to augment their combat prowess.

Crafts, Lores, and even Production skills can all be learned by the Avenger profession, and many can even be mastered.

Often, they learn skills or a magic which could counteract the power of those beings which were a part of their personal tragedy, but just as well they may learn the same skills and magics so they can better understand their enemy and use their own power against them. Often this may lead an Avenger down a dark or otherwise forbidden path. (Example: An Avenger who was the sole survivor of an undead attack on his/her village might learn Necromancy to use against the Undead.)

Avengers gain special abilities as they become more adept at hunting their monsters. Because of their special natures and requirements Avengers must have certain required skills by 3rd Level. These skills are Read & Write, and a Weapon Skill.

Avengers gain the following special abilities. These abilities may each only be purchased one time unless otherwise specified, and they must be purchased in order, though in the case of multiple purchase skills, only one must be purchased before the next skill may be. Though similar to a Knights special abilities an Avenger learns his/hers based on level.

Special Abilities

1st Level: Hated Enemy: <insert enemy> (Free) Avengers inflict an additional five (+5) damage with weapons and spells vs. their chosen enemy. This is their first enemy, the one that caused their tragic tale, but not necessarily the last foe to earn an Avenger's hatred.

Note: This may be coupled with Combat Lores as well

Note: An Avenger may only ever have one type of Hated Enemy, and it must correspond to a Lore Type (Greater or Lesser). These creatures, and their creators, have harmed an Avenger in such a manner they will never suffer them to live in their presence.

1st Level: Information Lore: <insert enemy> (Free)
Avengers gain an information lore in their chosen enemy for free.

5th Level: Combat Lore Effectiveness – Avengers gain half again as much damage for each level of Combat Lore purchased. This translates into three (+3) damage with Combat Lore I, six (+6) damage with Combat Lore II, and nine (+9) damage with Combat Lore III.

Thus, an Avenger with Combat Lore II vs. Undead would call an additional six (6) points of damage when fighting these creatures.

5th Level: Magical Lore Effectiveness – Avengers gain half again as much damage for each level of Magical Lore purchased. This translates into three (+3) damage at Magical Lore I, seven (+7) damage at Magical Lore II, and fifteen (+15) damage at Magical Lore III.

Thus, an Avenger with Magical Lore II vs. Undead would call an additional seven (7) points of damage when fighting these creatures with spells.

10th Level: Resist Metabolic (5 points) An Avenger may purchase up to five (5) Resist Metabolic in addition to any racial or magical resists.

15th Level: Resist Mind Effecting (5 points) An Avenger may purchase up to five (5) Resist Mind Effecting in addition to any racial or magical resists.

20th Level: Break Charm (5 points): An Avenger may learn the Break Charm skill regardless of the Avenger's race

20th Level: Evade vs. Lore Creatures (5 points): The Avenger may Evade an attack made by a Creature in which he/she has an Informational Lore. This skill acts like the Dodge skill. The player must state "Evade" loud enough for all to hear. When using this skill, any attack aimed at the character misses, he/she simply gets out of the way. This skill is not effective on area of effect attacks (Example Fire 10' Radius cannot be evaded).

This skill may be learned once every 20 levels by the Avenger (i.e. 20th, 40th, 60th, 80th and 100th level, each time costing 5 points)

25th Level: Non Romanovi Avengers can begin to learn the skill – Curse of the Evil Eye

30th Level: Vindictive Requite: (5 points) The Avenger may use his skill to reflect back any one spell or spell like attack, any damaging attack (i.e. number calling attack), or packet delivered tagline effect back at its source, if cast by any enemy which the Avenger has Combat Lore against. The Avenger must state "Requite, <the attack reflected>" loudly to use the special ability.

This skill may be learned once every 30 levels by the Avenger (i.e. 30th, 60th, and 90th level, each time costing 5 points)

100th Level: An Avenger may use his/her Vindictive Requite to reflect any form of attack made by an enemy in which they have a Combat Lore against. This includes specialty attacks and ritual magics (i.e. An Avenger trapped in a circle could reflect a Soul Wrack ritual)

Sentinels

Sentinels are those who would combine a Champion's skill at arms and a Magi's skill with spells into one profession. They excel at magic and war, but are slower to advance than either of their counterparts.

Many Orders of Mystics, Knights and Cavaliers come to mind. Historically there have been many who would try to combine the forces of the unknown into the martial skills. The Knights Templar with their unknown rituals and symbols for many represent the epitome of this type of figure.

In fiction and literature these players abound in heroes such as Gilthanas of Dragonlance, and Tomas the Valheru.

Maximum Armor: 75

Weapon Restrictions: None

Max Backstab Damage: +9 (nine)

Maximum Spells: 10 column Primary, 7 column Secondary, 5 column Tertiary Magic

Magic Type: Any

Maximum Strength: +3 (Three) adjusted by race

Racial Restrictions: Any race may be a Sentinel

Sentinels may learn to call up to +15 (fifteen) Weapon Damage with any weapon they can wield, and up to what the weapon type will allow. This also means they may learn as many Critical, Riposte, and Lethal Strikes as their Weapon Damage will allow them, as well as Shield Blocks and Shield Bashes.

Sentinels have no weapon restrictions and can learn any form of weapon combat including any Weapon Master their race allows.

When it comes to stealth, Sentinels find themselves on uneven ground with Rogues and Warriors, but as skilled martial characters they do grasp and can learn these skills. Sentinels can still gain enough Backstab Damage at +9 (nine) to be able to also buy Assassinates, Dodge/Intercepts, Feints and Eviscerate attacks up to what their skill in Backstab Damage will allow.

Sentinels excel as casters and can learn from any school of magic they choose and may become powerful casters with up to a ten (10) column in their Primary Magic; which they must learn in a six (6) column format.

Sentinels, like Magi, may even learn Secondary Magic out to a seven (7) column; which they learn in a five (5) column format, and even a Tertiary school of magic if they so desire up to a five (5) wide column; learned in a four (4) column format.

They also may learn to cast powerful Ritual magics and gain Ritual Masteries.

Runes, as with all professions, are available to Sentinels. Many a Sentinel has learned these valuable skills to augment their combat prowess.

Crafts, Lores, and even Production skills can all be learned by the Sentinel profession, and many can even be mastered.

Sentinels have no specific code they must follow for good or evil. Desired by every military and mercenary group for their diverse and power skills, Sentinels find work easy.

At higher levels a Sentinel gains the following special abilities

Level 10 Spellstrike: (5 points) Purchased every 10 levels (10, 20, 30..) this skill allows the Sentinel to channel a spell from his / her memory offensively through their weapon. The spell is activated upon contact and the user must simply state "Spellstrike <Spell name> "then the spell effect. The skill must be used offensively, and any spell shield will still be in effect, but this cannot be blocked by a Parry or Shield Block.

Level 20 Sentinel: (5 points) Purchased every 20 levels (20, 40, 60, 80 and 100) this skill allows the Sentinel to act as a guardian and peer through anyone using an Elude or Avoidance skill to pass unnoticed and unaffected by the Sentinel. To use this, the Sentinel must point to the Eluding/Avoiding target and state loudly enough for them to hear "As a Sentinel I disrupt your stealth."

Level 30 Enhance Spell: (5 points) Purchased every 30 levels (30, 60, and 90) this skill allows the Sentinel to add 20 damage to a single effect spell from their primary column. This is announced by adding the word "Enhanced" before the effect amount from the spell.

Level 40 Bulwark: (5 points) Purchased every 40 levels (40, 80) this skill allows the Sentinel to reduce the effect of an incoming damage effect by an amount equal to their level. This is announced by saying "Reduced Effect" to the damage effect.

Level 50 Vigilance: (Free) Upon reaching level 50 a Sentinel's enhanced perception allows them to perceive phased creatures. This is not full veil sight and does not allow them to identify such creatures, but they have a general sense of the direction and quantity (one, several, many, very many, etc) of the creatures around them. The closer the proximity, the more discerning a Sentinel's Vigilance becomes. There is a component of Role Play in the use of this ability.

The Scoundrels:

Scoundrels; the very word brings up the image of those who are on the edges of society. Those people who would break all the rules, and yet still find a place in our hearts, of course sometimes that place may be filled with their dagger.

Vagabonds

Wanderer, nomad, traveler; the master of nothing and beholden to none. These are the trademarks of the Vagabond profession. They move constantly, gathering what skills they need to do whatever it is they feel like at that moment.

Heralds, Skalds, swashbucklers, spies, cavaliers, and even lore masters are all images that can also be the Vagabond's role.

It is often said, and correctly so, that a Vagabond is a Jack of all trades, a dabbler extraordinaire, but a master of nothing. The loveable rake and the charming and dashing hero, ready to sweep people off their feet.

Never specialized, or ritually trained, most Vagabonds spend their time gathering the skills they like, until they have what they want then moving on to the next bit of fun, or new idea of interest.

Hit Points: 3 per level up to 60 (adjusted by race)

Maximum Weapon Damage: +9 (nine)

Maximum Armor: 30

Weapon Restrictions: No two-handed weapons, other than Staff and/or Spear.

Max Backstab Damage: +18 (Eighteen)

Magic Type: Any

Maximum Strength: +2 (two) adjusted by race

Racial Restrictions: High Elves, Oni, Ursoni, Shir'Khandi and Ima'Ghandi may not become Vagabonds

Vagabonds may learn to call up to +9 (nine) Weapon Damage with any weapon they can wield, and up to what the weapon type will allow. This also means they may learn as many Critical, Riposte, and Lethal Strikes as their Weapon Damage will allow them, as well as Shield Blocks and Shield Bashes.

Vagabonds have few weapon restrictions and can learn any form of one-handed weapon combat, as well as any Weapon Master their race allows.

When it comes to stealth, Vagabonds find themselves often resorting to its use without ever becoming the true masters that Rogues are. Vagabonds can still gain enough Backstab Damage at +18 (eighteen) to be considered a master at the art, and can also buy Assassinates, Dodge/Intercepts, Feints and Eviscerate attacks up to what their skill in Backstab Damage will allow.

Vagabonds are good if haphazard casters and can learn from any school of magic they choose and may become powerful casters with up to a 7 (seven) column in their Primary magic, which they learn in a five (5) column format.

Vagabonds may even learn a Secondary magic up to a 5 (five) column, learning this in a four (4) column format.

Runes, as with all professions, are available to Vagabonds. Many a Vagabond has learned these valuable skills to augment their chances at survival on the open road.

Crafts, Lores, and even Production skills can all be learned by the Vagabond profession, and many can even be mastered.

Vagabonds have no specific code they must follow for good or evil. Though given their diverse and skill set Vagabonds find work easy, in most places, even if only temporarily.

Unlike a Sentinel, a Vagabond should embrace the temptation to learn as many skills at once as they want, though this means they may be a long time waiting before they excel in any skill. Vagabonds are slow at start, but at middle and higher levels they are one of the most powerful professions available.

Because of their nomadic natures, Vagabonds must have certain required skills by 5th level. These basic skills are Read & Write, First Aid, a level 1 spell, an Apprentice Production skill, Ambush, and a Weapon Skill.

Vagabonds gain the following special abilities. All a Vagabonds special abilities are based on his or her knowledge, and therefore are tied directly to which Lore Skills the vagabond has. These abilities must be purchased in order, though in the case of multiple purchase skills, only one must be purchased before the next skill may be.

1st Level: Lesser Informational Lore Skill (Free), The vagabond may choose any one (1) Lesser Informational Lore skill for free. This skill should be worked into the Vagabonds background as well.

1st Level: Combat Lore Effectiveness - Vagabonds gain half again as much damage for each level of Combat Lore purchased. This translates into three (+3) damage with Combat Lore I, six (+6) damage with Combat Lore II, and nine (+9) damage with Combat Lore III.

1st Level: Magical Lore Effectiveness - Vagabonds gain half again as much damage for each level of Magical Lore purchased. This translates into three (+3) damage at Magical Lore I, seven (+7) damage at Magical Lore II, and fifteen (+15) damage at Magical Lore III.

5th Level: Elude vs. Lore Creatures (3 points), may purchase up to 3 times: The Vagabond may Elude detection by creatures he/she has an Informational Lore skill in. One lore group is chosen at activation and the effect lasts 10 minutes.

The vagabond must say “Elude” to the creatures he/she is avoiding during the duration of this skill. They cannot enter combat, attack or cast during the Elude otherwise the effect is broken, and the creatures will act accordingly. This skill may be stacked with other eludes, or with itself against an additional lore group with an additional expenditure of the skill.

10th Level: Evade vs. Lore Creatures (5 points) may purchase up to 3 times. A vagabond may Evade an attack made by a Creature in which he/she has an Informational Lore. This skill acts like the Dodge skill. The player must state “Evade” loud enough for all to hear. When using this skill, any attack aimed at the character misses, he/she simply gets out of the way. This skill is not effective on area of effect attacks (Example Fire 10’ Radius cannot be evaded).

15th Level: Resist vs. Lore Creatures (5 points) may be purchased up to 3 times. A vagabond may resist an attack made by a creature in which he/she has an Informational Lore skill in.

15th Level: Production Affinity I <Select base production skill> (2 points) The Vagabond gains an affinity in a production base skill (Herbalism, Blacksmithing, or Fermenting). This allows the Vagabond to create an extra recipe per event from any Production skill that requires that base skill. This item must be from a Production skill that the Vagabond knows and has a recipe for, and may only be of up to the skill that he or she has in that production (i.e. Apprentice, Journeyman, or Master) This skill only removes the need for the production points to create the recipe, not the required components or crown costs. This skill cannot be used to make additional Grand Master Recipes.

20th Level: Magical Affinity I vs. Lore Creatures (2 points). The Vagabond gains the ability to use one spell from any school he/she can cast, up to the maximum level of spell he/she may cast as a bonus spell against any creature they have an Informational Lore skill in. (i.e. if the Vagabond has a 4,3,2,1 Hearth column and a 3,2,1 Elemental column they may throw one bonus spell of up to 4th level in Hearth or 3rd level in Elemental per day) The spell used must be one in the Vagabond’s spell book. This skill may not be used with Ritual magics.

25th Level: Unparriable Critical Strike vs. Lore Creatures (5 points) Purchased once every 25 levels (25,50,75, &100). This melee attack allows the user to Critically Strike an opponent which the Vagabond has an Informational Lore Skill in, like the skill of that name. This attack cannot be parried by a Parry, Shield Block, or Shield Bash. It can be Dodged, Evaded, or protected against by spells. To activate this skill, the user states “Unparriable Critical Strike <tagline>”

25th Level: Pierce Spell vs. Lore Creature (5 points) purchased once every 25 Levels (25,50,75 &100). The Vagabond may empower any one spell he or she can cast from memory (not item) to bypass all magical protections and spell barriers of a target which the Vagabond has an Informational

Lore Skill in. The verbal is cast normally and then the “Pierce” tagline must be added to the spell. The pierce does not apply if it strikes a creature other than one the Vagabond has an Informational Lore skill in.

30th Level: Production Affinity II: <same base skill> (2 points) The Vagabond gains a second affinity in the previously selected Production base skill. This allows the Vagabond to create up to two (2) extra recipes per event from any Production skill that requires that base skill. This item must be from a Production skill that the Vagabond knows and has a recipe for, and may only be of up to the skill that he or she has in that production (i.e. Apprentice, Journeyman, or Master) This skill only removes the need for the production points to create the recipes, not the required components or crown costs. This skill cannot be used to make additional Grand Master Recipes.

35th Level: Lore of the Road (Free): The Vagabond has, in his travels, heard many rumors and innuendos from all over. This tends to keep them well informed especially on matters of creatures they have Informational Lore skills in. The Vagabond may at the beginning of each event session request a special rumor or bit of information regarding their selected enemy such as troop movements, staging areas, or even a new dungeon location. This is a role-playing skill.

40th Level: Magical Affinity II vs. Lore Creatures (2 points). The Vagabond gains the ability to use two (2) spells from any school he/she can cast, up to the maximum level of spell he/she may cast as bonus spells against any creature they have an Informational Lore skill in. (i.e. if the Vagabond has a 4,3,2,1 Hearth column and a 3,2,1 Elemental column they may throw one bonus spell of up to 4th level in Hearth or 3rd level in Elemental per day) The spell used must be one in the Vagabond’s spell book. This skill may not be used with Ritual magics.

50th Level: Double Magical Lore Effectiveness – Vagabonds gain twice as much damage for each level of Magical Lore purchased. This translates into four (+4) damage at Magical Lore I, ten (+10) damage at Magical Lore II, and twenty (+20) at Magical Lore III

50th Level: Double Combat Lore Effectiveness – Vagabonds gain twice as much damage for each level of Combat Lore purchased. This translates into four (+4) damage at Combat Lore I, eight (+8) damage at Combat Lore II, and twelve (+12) damage at Combat Lore III.

60th Level: Phasing (5 points) May be purchased up to three (3) times. The Vagabond gains the ability to phase out of reality on a five count. The player must state “Phasing one, phasing two, phasing three, phasing four, phasing five” to enter this state and place both arms crossed over his / her head. This effect can last up to 10 minutes. The player may not cross barriers such as wards or proscribes but may otherwise move undetected freely. To exit the player must use a five count of “Phasing in 1, phasing in 2...”

Duelists

Musketeer, swashbuckler, killer for hire, Assassin, and mercenary are all forms of Duelist, and there are more terms can be used when one describes the Duelist and his/her profession.

Duelists are masters of combat, and stealth. They strive to become the perfect weapon. Not relying on armor or magic as a crutch, but as just another weapon in their arsenal. In the end, though, nothing surpasses their drive for martial perfection, to make themselves one in mind, weapon and body.

Duelists do excel at stealth and misdirection. After all, what is the point in getting the kill; if you cannot get away with it?

Maximum Armor: 45

Weapon Restrictions: None

Max Backstab Damage: +21 (twenty-one)

Maximum Spells: 5 column Primary

Magic Type: Any

Racial Restrictions No Shirelings, Sons of Kyth, Daughters of Kyth, Pixies, Sprites or Gryll may become Duelists.

Duelists may learn to call up to +18 (eighteen) Weapon Damage with any weapon they can wield, and up to what the weapon type will allow. This also means they may learn as many Critical, Riposte, and Lethal Strikes as their Weapon Damage will allow them, as well as Shield Blocks and Shield Bashes.

Duelists have few weapon restrictions and can learn any form of weapon combat, as well as any Weapon Master their Race allows. Furthermore, all Duelists may purchase the Weapon Damage (Both) skill regardless of race, provided they learn the proper prerequisite skills.

When it comes to stealth, Duelists find themselves almost without equal. Their drive for perfection in combat extends to stealth as well. Duelists can gain up to +21 (twenty-one) Backstab Damage, and can also buy Assassinates, Dodge/Intercepts, Feints and Eviscerate attacks up to what their skill in Backstab Damage will allow.

Duelists are driven to physical and martial perfection and are thus weak casters. Though they can learn from any one school of magic they choose and may become powerful casters with up to a 5 (five) column in their Primary magic, which they learn in a four (4) column format.

Duelists drive for martial perfection means they will never bother to learn a Secondary or Tertiary school of magic.

Runes, as with all professions, are available to Duelists. Many a Duelist has learned these valuable skills to augment their chances at survival on the open road.

Crafts, Lores, and even Production skills can all be learned by the Duelist profession, and many can even be mastered. In fact, many a would-be killer for hire finds that their knowledge of poisons is invaluable in plying their craft.

Duelists have no specific code they must follow for good or evil. Duelists are intimidating even if they are good guys. Duelists are the perfect killers, whether to protect the weak or to profit from death is their choice, and they would not have it any other way. As a Duelist, you will often be approached to fight, and work should be easy to find. After all, your reputation will precede you.

Before level 5 all Duelists must know at least a Weapon Skill, Weapon Damage +1, Ambush and Backstab Damage +1. These are the only required skills a Duelist has.

Duelists do have some abilities which they gain as their Martial prowess increases. These are based on level rather than any particular skill set. Though two of the three skills enhance their ability with other skills, they are all available for free once a Duelist gains the appropriate level.

Special Abilities

10th Level: Deadly Knowledge (Free): Though not Avengers or Vagabonds, Duelist are still aware how powerful a little knowledge can be. A Duelist who purchases a Combat Lore gains half again as much damage for each time the Lore is Purchased. This translates into three (+3) damage at Combat Lore I, six (+6) damage at Combat Lore II, and nine (+9) at Combat Lore III.

20th Level: Protection (Free) A Duelist's drive for perfection also means they rely on speed and dexterity rather than heavy and cumbersome armor. They are in fact so good at wearing light armor that a Duelist gains additional benefit from the Improved Armor skill, gaining the ability to use the skill's damage reduction against armor piercing taglines such as Body and retaining the DR effect even after their armor has been reduced to 0.

30th Level: Hardiness (Free) Duelists are extremely tough to kill. He or she gains one (1) additional hit point per level. (Note: They may also buy Fortify normally to gain even more hit points)

This skill is not effective on area of effect attacks (Example Fire 10' Radius cannot be evaded).

50th Level: Unparriable Critical Strike vs. Lore Creatures (5 points) Purchased once every 50 levels (50, 100). This melee attack allows the user to Critically Strike an opponent which the Duelist has an Informational Lore Skill in, like the skill of that name. This attack cannot be parried by a Parry, Shield Block, or Shield Bash. It can be Dodged, Evaded, or protected against by spells. To activate this skill, the user states "Unparriable Critical Strike <tagline>"

Rogues

Scout, assassin, bandit, and thief are all forms of Rogue, but why stop there. Villain, hero, highwayman, lawyer, poisoner, infiltrator, and oh so many more terms can be used when one describes the Rogue and his/her profession.

Rogues are masters of stealth and redirection. In fact, the real sign of a good Rogue is that people often do not even know he or she is one. They may think they are a low-level Warrior, or Sentinel. That they are some sort of Vagabond, or a member of the military scouts like some Ranger. There have even been Rogues whom have been mistaken as squires for Knights of Valor.

No matter what, Rogues excel at stealth and misdirection. Be they a con-artist out to bilk others of a few gold or a thug out to take every silver from someone by force.

Hit Points: 3 per level up to 60 (adjusted by race)

Rogues have few weapon restrictions and can learn any form of one-handed weapon combat, as well as any Weapon Master their race allows. Furthermore, all Rogues may purchase the Weapon Damage (Both) skill regardless of race, provided they learn the proper prerequisite skills.

When it comes to stealth, Rogues find themselves without equal. No other ever becoming the true masters that Rogues are. Rogues can gain +36 (thirty-six) Backstab Damage, and can also buy Assassinates, Dodge/Intercepts Feints and Eviscerate attacks up to what their skill in Backstab Damage will allow.

Rogues are good if haphazard casters and can learn from any school of magic they choose and may become powerful casters with up to a 5 (five) column in their Primary magic, which they learn in a four (4) column format.

Rogues are not academics by any means, they live life more as it comes and rarely have time for the more scholarly pursuits. Thus, they can only ever learn one school of magic.

Runes, as with all professions, are available to Rogues. Many a Rogue has learned these valuable skills to augment their chances at survival on the open road.

Crafts, Lores, and even Production skills can all be learned by the Rogue profession, and many can even be mastered. In fact, many a would-be assassin finds that their knowledge of poisons is invaluable in plying their craft.

Rogues have no specific code they must follow for good or evil. Though given their diverse skill set, Rogues find work easy, in most places, even if only temporarily.

Unlike any other class, a Rogue should never be known as such. In fact, the best rogues are often mistaken for another profession.

Special Abilities

This bonus may also be added to the strength modifier for the purposes of the Ambush skill.

20th Level: Vanish vs. Lore Creatures: (5 points) May purchase once every 20 levels (20, 40, 60...): The Rogue may Vanish from creatures he/she has an Informational Lore skill in. The Crafters

Some people just like to build things, to create objects into more than just their component parts. These builders and scientist form the group we call the Crafters. They believe that though magic is a potent part of the world, and that warriors may rule the battlefield, that neither would be able to even begin to function without the items and resources that the Crafters make.

Apothecaries

Apothecaries believe that formulas, not magic, will be the rule of the future. Magic is powerful, and it has its place, but one day; soon if they have their way, research will make even more powerful tools than magic.

The choice of playing an Apothecary is one which can truly be a role-playing decision. To play a researcher in a magical world obviously can spawn endless debate and countless opportunities to engage the world around the player. Not only for the player, but for those around him.

Hit Points: 2 per level up to 50 (adjusted by race)

Maximum Weapon Damage: +6 (six)

Maximum Armor: 30

This also means they may learn as many Critical, Riposte, and Lethal Strikes as their Weapon Damage will allow them, as well as Shield Blocks and Shield Bashes.

Apothecaries have no weapon restrictions and can learn any form of weapon combat including any Weapon Master their race allows.

When it comes to stealth, Apothecaries find themselves on uneven ground with Rogues and Warriors, but as skilled martial characters they do grasp and can learn these tasks. Skilled Apothecaries can still gain enough Backstab Damage at +6 (six) to be able to buy Assassinates, Dodge/Intercepts, Feints and Eviscerate attacks

Apothecaries can be competent casters and can learn from any school of magic they choose up to a five (5) column in their Primary magic; which they learn in a five (5) column format

Apothecaries may even learn a Secondary magic up to a four (4) column.

Runes, as with all professions, are available to an Apothecary. Many an Apothecary has learned these valuable skills to augment their research into multiple fields.

Crafts and Lore skills can all be learned by the Apothecary profession. In fact, all skills which require Herbalism are the bread and butter of this class, to the point that an Apothecary may master all of them.

Apothecaries have no specific code they must follow for good or evil. Desired even if a little feared, by governments and scholars alike, a skilled Apothecary can find work easily.

Due to an Apothecary's constant use of research and their ability to deconstruct items, they do gain certain special skills at higher levels. An Apothecary must therefore have the following skills by 5th level. Read & Write, Herbalism, Apprentice Poisoner, Apprentice Alchemist, and Apprentice Elixir Crafter. Regardless of which of the three he/she decides to improve from there.

Special Abilities

5th Level: (Free) An Apothecary gains a +5 (five) effect when using a numeric effect herbalism production. For example, a weak acid would call 15 acid, or a lesser healing potion would heal 25 when administered by the apothecary.

10th Level: Examine Being: (Free) This skill allows the Apothecary to examine a body for 10 minutes after which they can determine several key things about the creature in question, such as race, plane of origin, and health at time of demise just to name a few. A body will not dissipate while this skill is being used on it but will if the Apothecary stops the examination.

15th Level: Production Affinity I: Herbalism (2 points) The Apothecary may create an extra recipe per event from any production skill they have which requires Herbalism. This item must be from a production skill that the Apothecary knows and has a recipe for and may only be of up to the skill that he or she has in that production (i.e. Apprentice, Journeyman or Master) This skill only removes the need for the production points to create the recipe, not the required components or crown costs. This skill cannot be used to make additional Grand Master Formulas.

15th Level: (Free) An Apothecary gains a +10 (ten) effect when using a numeric effect herbalism production. For example, a weak acid would call 20 acid, or a lesser healing potion would heal 30 when administered by the apothecary.

30th Level: Production Affinity II: Herbalism (2 points) The Apothecary may create up to two (2) extra recipes per event to use from any production skill they have which requires Herbalism. These items must be from a production skill that the Apothecary knows and has a recipe for and may only be of up to the skill that he or she has in that production (i.e. Apprentice, Journeyman or Master) This skill only removes the need for the production points to create the recipes, not the required components or crown costs. This skill cannot be used to make additional Grand Master Formulas.

30th Level: (Free) An Apothecary gains a +15 (fifteen) effect when using a numeric effect herbalism production. For example, a weak acid would call 25 acid, or a lesser healing potion would heal 35 when administered by the apothecary.

40th Level: Exploit the Weakness (Free): This is an extension of the Examine Being ability. It allows the Apothecary to determine if there are any flaws in a living or undead creature, and if so how to create a potion to exploit them. (This potion must be made from parts of the creature, takes 1 hour to create, and imbues the consumer with +10 damage vs. said creature with melee or magical attacks)

Obviously, these skills are pole-play enhancing skills, and do require some involvement with the Story team. They may or may not lead the Apothecary to finding out some special way to defeat an enemy or to neutralize a creature.

50th Level: Production Affinity III: Herbalism (2 points) The Apothecary may create up to three (3) extra recipes per event to use from any production skill they have which requires Herbalism. These items must be from a production skill that the Apothecary knows and has a recipe for, and may only be of up to the skill that he or she has in that production (i.e. Apprentice, Journeyman or Master) This skill only removes the need for the production points to create the recipes, not the required components or crown costs. This skill cannot be used to make additional Grand Master Formulas.

50th Level: (Free) An Apothecary gains a +20 (twenty) effect when using a numeric effect herbalism production. For example, a weak acid would call 30 acid, or a lesser healing potion would heal 40 when administered by the apothecary.

75th Level: (Free) An Apothecary gains a +25 (twenty-five) effect when using a numeric effect herbalism production. For example, a weak acid would call 35 acid, or a lesser healing potion would heal 45 when administered by the apothecary.

100th Level: (Free) An Apothecary gains a +30 (thirty) effect when using a numeric effect herbalism production. For example, a weak acid would call 40 acid, or a lesser healing potion would heal 50 when administered by the apothecary.

Tinkerers

Tinkerers believe that Engineering, not magic will be the savior of the day. Magic is the past, but one day; soon if they have their way, Engineering research will make even more powerful tools than magic.

The choice of playing a Tinkerer is one which can truly be a role-playing decision. To play an engineer who tinkers with machines and gadgets will create opportunities to engage the world around the player. Not only for the player, but for those around him.

Hit Points: 2 per level up to 50 (adjusted by race)

Maximum Weapon Damage: +9 (nine)

Maximum Armor: 30

Weapon Restrictions: None

Max Backstab Damage: +6 (six)

Maximum Spells: 5 column Primary

Magic Type: Celestial Only

Racial Restrictions: High Elves, Sylvan Elves, Eldaran, Eldarine, Ogrekin, Troll Brood, Wolven, Minotaur, Ursoni, Ima'Ghandi & Duma'Handi may not become Tinkerers.

Tinkerers may learn to call up to +9 (nine) Weapon Damage with any weapon they can wield, and up to what the weapon type will allow. This also means they may learn as many Critical, Riposte, and Lethal Strikes as their Weapon Damage will allow them, as well as Shield Blocks and Shield Bashes.

Tinkerers have no weapon restrictions and can learn any form of weapon combat including any Weapon Master their race allows.

When it comes to stealth, Tinkerers find themselves on uneven ground with Rogues and Warriors, but as skilled martial characters they do grasp and can learn these tasks. Skilled Tinkerers can still gain enough Backstab Damage at +6 (six) to be able to also buy Assassinates, Dodge/Intercepts, Feints, and Eviscerate attacks

Tinkerers can be competent casters and can learn from the Celestial school of magic up to a five (5) column; which they learn in a four (4) column format.

Tinkerers are focused on how technology can, and, in their mind, will outperform magic. Thus, they do not have the will or desire to learn more than just the Celestial type of magic, because of its ability to augment their engineering.

Runes, as with all professions, are available to a Tinkerer. Many a Tinkerer has learned these valuable skills to augment their research into multiple fields.

Crafts, Lore, and Production skills can all be learned by the Tinkerer profession. Engineering is their most beloved production and though most people are put off or even a little scared of it, Tinkerers revel in any new designs, plans, or ideas they come across.

Tinkerers have no specific code they must follow for good or evil. Desired, even if a little feared, by governments and scholars alike a skilled Tinkerer can find work easily.

Due to a Tinkerer's constant use of research and their ability to deconstruct items, they do gain certain special skills at higher levels. For this reason, a Tinkerer must learn the following skills by level 3. Read & Write, Blacksmithing, Apprentice Engineer, and Flintlock Weapon skill (any type)

Special Abilities

5th Level: (Free) Tinkerers gain +1 (one) damage when wielding a firearm. This is in addition to any Weapon Damage or other bonuses they may have.

10th Level: Examine Item/Construct: (Free) This skill allows the Tinkerer to examine an item for 10 minutes after which they can determine several key things about the item in question, such as plane of origin, what species created it, and its basic functionality.

15th Level: (Free) Tinkerers gain +2 (two) damage when wielding a firearm. This is in addition to any Weapon Damage or other bonuses they may have.

20th Level: Determine Structural Integrity: (Free) This is an enhancement to the Examine Item/Construct ability. This allows the Tinkerer to determine any special weakness an item or construct examined may have, such as a vulnerability to lightning, or that a certain metal is more destructive to a construct.

25th Level Ranged Shattering Strike (5 points): When using his/her firearm to attack a construct the Tinkerer can deliver a blow which causes 50 points of damage to the construct itself. The Tinkerer may learn this skill once every 25 levels (so again at 50th level, 75th level and 100th level)

The verbal for this attack is “Shattering strike”.

This attack will do 50 points of damage to a golem or construct, and in addition to the damage it renders any golem or construct under 250 HP, including if creature is reduced below 250 HP by the strike, immobile for 1 minute

30th Level: (Free) Tinkerers gain +3 (three) damage when wielding a firearm. This is in addition to any Weapon Damage or other bonuses they may have.

40th Level: Find the Design Flaw: (Free) This is an enhancement to the Examine Item/Construct ability. This allows the Tinkerer to determine if there are any flaws in an item, and if so how to exploit them.

Obviously, some of these skills are role-play enhancing skills, and do require some involvement with the Story team. They may or may not lead the Tinkerer to finding out some special way to defeat an enemy or to neutralize an item being used against him/her.

50th Level: (Free) Tinkerers gain +4 (four) damage when wielding a firearm. This is in addition to any Weapon Damage or other bonuses they may have.

75th Level: (Free) Tinkerers gain +5 (five) damage when wielding a firearm. This is in addition to any Weapon Damage or other bonuses they may have.

100th Level: (Free) Tinkerers gain +6 (six) damage when wielding a firearm. This is in addition to any Weapon Damage or other bonuses they may have.

Smiths

Smiths are the backbone of almost every society. Always needed for their skills to craft items, from the mundane, everyday essentials to the truly spectacular.

The choice of playing a smith is one which can truly enhance role-playing not only for the player, but for those around him.

Also, let's face it, people need items, and if you're the only one who can make them, well you stand to be able to accumulate a large pile of wealth and prestige. Though this may seem to be an attraction to those who would rob the smith, the threat of the loss of service counter balances this and makes for great role-playing.

Hit Points: 2 per level up to 50 (adjusted by race)

Maximum Armor: 150

Weapon Restrictions: None

Max Backstab Damage: +3 (Three)

Magic Type: Any

Maximum Strength: +5(five) adjusted by race

Racial Restrictions: High Elves, Sylvan Elves, Eldaran, Ogrekin, Ursoni, Kili'Samdi & Duma'Handi may not become Smiths.

Smiths may learn to call up to +18 (eighteen) Weapon Damage with any weapon they can wield, and up to what the weapon type will allow. This also means they may learn as many Critical, Riposte, and Lethal Strikes as their Weapon Damage will allow them, as well as Shield Blocks and Shield Bashes.

Smiths have no weapon restrictions and can learn any form of weapon combat including any Weapon Master their Race allows.

When it comes to stealth, Smiths' are no Rogue. A skilled Smith can still gain enough Backstab Damage at +3 (three) to be able to buy an Assassinate and Dodge/Intercept, but because of their limited skill can never buy Feints or Eviscerate attacks

Smiths can be competent casters and can learn from any school of magic they choose up to a five (5) column in their Primary magic; which they learn in a four (4) column format.

Smith's see magic as a way to enhance their production, but not so much as a life path. Thus, they can only ever learn one type of magic.

Runes, as with all professions, are available to Smiths. Many a Smith has learned these valuable skills to augment their combat prowess.

Crafts, Lores, and Production skills can all be learned by the Smith profession. The Blacksmithing skills of Armorsmith, Weaponsmith, and Jewel Crafting are all the meat and drink of those who follow the path of the Smith. A Smith may master all three of them.

Smiths have no specific code they must follow for good or evil. Desired by every military and township; Smiths find work easy.

Due to a Smith's constant use of hammers in their chosen field they gain certain special bonuses when wielding a hammer in combat as well. Therefore, they must learn a weapon skill which includes the use of hammers, such as, One Handed Blunt Weapons.

A Smith must also have the following skills by level 5. Read & Write, Blacksmithing, Apprentice Armorsmithing, Apprentice Weaponsmithing, and Apprentice Jewel Crafter. A Smith is required to know all three regardless of which they decide to pursue further.

Special Abilities

(10, 20 & 30) When purchased for the first time, the Weapon Knowledge may be assigned to any single, base Weapon Skill the Smith knows. (i.e. 1 Handed Blades, Bows, 2 Handed Crushing, etc. but no Weapon Masteries). Weapon Knowledge provides a damage bonus per level when using the chosen weapon. This is also considered to be part of a Smith's specialization for their Weaponsmithing production skill. There are certain Grand Master recipes that require this knowledge or an affinity and only a Smith with the correct specialization can create them.

15th Level: (Free) Smiths gain an additional point of damage for a total of +2 (two) when wielding a hammer. This is in addition to any Weapon Damage, Enhanced Strength, or magical bonuses they may have.

20th Level: Shield Breaker (5 points): When using his/her hammer, the Smith can deliver a strike to an opponent's shield which will destroy any non-magical shield and will render a magical shield inert, and unable to call up its magical properties, for 10 minutes after the strike.

The tagline "Shield Breaker" is added to the Smith's normal damage for this strike to take effect, and the strike must hit the opponent or its shield.

A Smith may learn this skill once every 20 levels, so they may learn a second at 40th level, another at 60th level, 80th level and again at 100th level if they so desire, for a maximum of five (5) per day.

25th Level Shattering Hammer Strike (5 points): When using his/her hammer the Smith can deliver a blow directly to an opponent's armor, which causes 50 points of damage to the armor itself, but not the opponent.

The verbal for this attack is "Shattering strike".

This attack will do 50 points of damage to a golem or construct, and in addition to the damage it renders any golem or construct under 250 HP, including if creature is reduced below 250 HP by the strike, immobile for 1 minute.

A Smith may learn this skill once every 25 levels, so they may learn a second at 50th level, another at 75th level, and again at 100th level if they so desire, for a maximum of four (4) per day.

Note: A Smith's extra points of damage with a hammer do not count toward the purchase of any special abilities such as Critical Strikes.

The Scholars

Wizards, magic-users, members of academia all are descriptive of the Scholarly professions. Though many might say magic is the bread and butter of these professions, it is in fact knowledge that makes the Scholar. Forbidden knowledge, that rare bit of powerful information that can turn the entire world upon its ear.

Scholars are more likely to find their noses in a book, while sitting behind a protective barrier referencing some bit of lore they just gained from a greater power, then swinging a sword at a target dummy trying to learn the basics of combat, any day.

Magi

The Magi are those who would control the forces of the universe, through channeling outside powers or the force of their own will.

They excel at magic and some would say they live and breathe their craft. Given to long bouts of research; to find that one clue that will unlock even more mysteries and power.

Historically there have been many who would have been seen as Magi. Merlin, Archimedes, even Nostradamus.

In fiction and literature these players abound and are in fact a cornerstone of such literature.

Hit Points: 2 per level up to 40 (adjusted by race)

Maximum Weapon Damage: +3 (Three)

Maximum Armor: 20

Weapon Restrictions: No two-handed weapons other than Staff

Max Backstab Damage: +3 (Three)

Maximum Spells: 12 column of Primary Magic, 12 column of Secondary Magic, 9 column of Tertiary Magic

Magic Type: Any

Racial Restrictions: No Dwarves, Eldaran, Orc-Blood or OGREkin may become Magi.

The Magi is not a great warrior by any stretch, preferring studious work, experiments, and research to the sword and shield. Thus, they may learn to call only up to +3 (three) Weapon Damage with any weapon they can wield, and up to what the weapon type will allow. This also means they may learn only one Parry and Critical Strike, but never have access to Riposte or Lethal Strikes. Also, only one Shield Block and Shield Bash.

Magi's have many weapon restrictions and can learn only a select few martial weapons, of course the staff and dagger are chief among these items.

When it comes to stealth, Magi's find themselves on poor footing compared to Rogues and Warriors. They do grasp and can learn these skills, but only limitedly at best. Magi can still gain enough Backstab Damage at +3 (three) to be able to also buy a single Assassinate and Dodge/Intercept. They can never learn Feints or Eviscerate attacks.

Magi are first and foremost casters and can learn from any school of magic they choose and may become powerful casters with up to a 12 (twelve) column in their Primary magic; which they learn in a six (6) column format.

Magi may learn a Secondary magic if they so desire. Learning their Secondary out to a twelve (12) as well in a five (5) column format.

Magi may even have a Tertiary magic in which they can learn up to a nine (9) column in a four (4) column format.

They are extremely powerful Ritual magic practitioners if they wish and can gain Masteries of those Ritual magics.

Runes, as with all professions, are available to Magi. Many a Magi has learned these valuable skills to augment their curiosity and skill in research as well as their personal survival.

Crafts, Lores, and even Production skills can all be learned by the Magi profession, and many can even be mastered. In fact, a Magi's keen mind can grasp even the newest of "magics" technology. They excel in Engineering and have found it a great augmentation to their magics in the form of firearms, rustic as they may be.

Magi have no specific code they must follow for good or evil. Desired as counsel to nobles yet feared as dealing with powers beyond the common people's scope, and even superstitious natures.

Master your primary art of magic, and then decide how to proceed, Magic is a dominating force upon a battle field, wielding immense power, but once his/her spells run out a magus has little martial experience. Intelligence and wisdom serve better than sword or axe.

Special Ability:

10th Level: Reduce Magic (2 points) Purchased every 10 levels (10,20,30...): This skill reduces the effect of any damaging spell or magical effect which hits the caster by an amount equal to the Casters Level in points.. The user states “Reduced” to indicate the effect of the spell they were hit with was reduced.

15th Level: Empower Spell (3 points) Purchased every 15 levels (15,30,45, 60,75, & 90): This skill increases the effectiveness of any damaging or healing spell which is Empowered by an amount equal to the Casters Level in points. Thus, a Damaging spell would deal more points and a healing spell would heal for additional hit points. The user casts the spell normally and just as standard if the spell hits would declare the damage or healing but must state loudly “<level + spell damage/healing> Empowered”

20th Level: Augment Magic (5 points) Purchased every 20 levels (20,40,60...): This skill grants the Magi +5 Damage in one of the follow damaging spell effect taglines (Heal, Cure, Cause, Inflict, Fire, Ice, Stone, Lightning, Magic, or Body).

30th Level: Resist Magic (5 points) A Magi may purchase this skill up to 5 times.

40th Level: Extend Spell Area (5 points) Purchased every 40 levels (40,80) The Magi may add 10’ AoE effect to one casting of one spell that targes One Creature. The user casts the spell normally and declare the effect and must state loudly “<effect> 10 foot AoE”

50th Level: Broad Augmentation (5 points) Purchased every 50 levels (50,100): This skill grants the Magi +5 Damage in the remaining damaging spell effect taglines not chosen for their their Augment Magic skill. (Heal, Cure, Cause, Inflict, Fire, Ice, Stone, Lightning, Magic, or Body).

Sorcerers

There are those who wish to study in books, test in laboratories, and see the fruits of long studious hours of labor come to fruition. Then there are those who want to see the raw power they have learned put to the test, to push their power and personal limits to the edge and even beyond.

When a caster would rather hurl magic then sit and study a book, when they would like to see just how much energy their incantations can release, how many enemies they can fell, or how many allies they can pick up from the jaws of death itself, and even better yet both, we have a name for them. We can call them Sorcerers.

Let others learn to control Ritual magics, let them spend their time learning how to summon this, augment that, and create a delicate piece of magic. Those types of Scholars are missing out on the real reason you wield magic in the first place. To wield magic itself, their needs be no greater reasoning than that.

Historically the basics of a sorcerer are the same as the Magi, though often more reckless images such as Morgan le Fey come to mind.

Hit Points: 2 per level up to 40 (adjusted by race)

Maximum Weapon Damage: +3 (Three)

Maximum Armor: 20

Weapon Restrictions: No two-handed weapons other than Staff

Max Backstab Damage: +3 (Three)

Maximum Spells: 15 column of Primary magic, 13 column of Secondary magic, 12 column of Tertiary magic

Magic Type: Any

Racial Restrictions: No Dwarves, Orc-Blood or Ogrikin may become Sorcerers.

The Sorcerer is not a great warrior by any stretch, but who needs sword and shield when the very fabric of magic itself is at your fingertips. Thus, they may learn to call only up to +3 (three) Weapon Damage with any weapon they can wield, and up to what the weapon type will allow. This also means they may learn only one Parry and Critical strike, but never have access to Ripostes or Lethal Strikes. Also, only one Shield Block and Shield Bash.

Sorcerers have many weapon restrictions, just as all Scholars and can learn only a select few martial weapons, of course the staff and dagger are chief among these items.

When it comes to Stealth many a Sorcerer would ask “why bother?” They find themselves unwilling to try to learn this as it takes too much time away from hurling magic. They do grasp and can learn these skills, but only limitedly at best Sorcerer’s can still gain enough Backstab Damage at +3 (three) to be able to also buy a single Assassinate and Dodge/Intercept. They can never learn Feints or Eviscerate attacks.

Sorcerer’s are first and foremost casters and can learn from any school of magic they choose, in fact therein lays their most powerful strength. Sorcerers hurl spells, they learn how to do this at an amazing rate, and can grasp many types of magic all at once. They may become powerful casters with up to a 15 (fifteen) column in their Primary magic. They must learn their Primary magic in a six (6) column format.

Sorcerers often learn a Secondary magic and may do so up to a 13 (Thirteen) column. When learning a Secondary magic, they learn in a five (5) column format.

A Sorcerer so excels at casting spells that they can, and more often than not do, learn a Tertiary school of magic. A Sorcerer must learn his or her Tertiary school of magic in a four (4) column format and may learn up to a twelve (12) column in this school of magic.

They are extremely powerful, and can grasp Ritual magic, but as Ritual magic practitioners, they are not as dedicated as other Scholars, thus they can only learn Ritual magic in their primary form of magic. If they wish, they can gain Masteries of the Ritual magic they learn.

Runes, as with all professions, are available to Sorcerer. Many a Sorcerer has learned these valuable skills to augment their curiosity and skill in research as well as their personal survival.

Crafts, Lores, and even Production skills can all be learned by the Sorcerer profession, and many can even be mastered. In fact, a Sorcerer’s keen mind can grasp even the newest of “magics” technology. They excel in Engineering and have found it a great augmentation to their magics in the form of firearms, rustic as they may be.

Sorcerer’s have no specific code they must follow for good or evil. Desired as counsel to nobles yet feared as dealing with powers beyond the common people’s scope, and even superstitious natures.

Master your Primary type of magic, and then continue on. Your basic column format in three types of magic (i.e. 6 in primary, 5 in secondary and 4 in tertiary) will only cost you little more than a twelve (12) column might cost a Magi. Magic is the dominate force upon a battle field, wielding immense power, but remember once your spells run out a Sorcerer has little martial experience. Just like a Magi, intelligence and wisdom will serve you better than sword or axe.

Special Ability:

10th Level: Magical Affinity, <Primary Column>: (3 points) purchased every 10 Levels (10, 20, and 30) up to a maximum of three (3) times: The character gains the ability to use one (1) spell per day from his or her Primary school of magic, up to the maximum level of spell he/she may cast as a bonus spell. (i.e. if a Sorcerer has a 4,3,2,1 Hearth Primary column and a 3,2,1 Elemental Secondary column they may throw one (1) bonus spell of up to 4th Level in Hearth but gains no bonus in Elemental Spells.)

The spell used must be one in the character's spell book. This skill may not be used with Ritual magics.

20th Level: Magical Affinity, <Secondary Column>: (3 points) purchased every 20 levels (20, 40, and 60) up to a maximum of three (3) times. The character gains the ability to use one (1) spell per day from his or her Secondary column, up to the maximum spell level he or she may cast as a bonus spell.

The spell used must be one in the character's spell book. This skill may not be used with Ritual magics.

30th Level: Magical Affinity, <Tertiary Column>: (3 points) purchased every 30 levels (30, 60, and 90) up to a maximum of three (3) times. The character gains the ability to use one (1) spell per day from his or her Tertiary column, up to the maximum level of spell he/she may cast as a bonus spell.

The spell used must be one in the character's spell book. This skill may not be used with Ritual magics.

40th Level: Quick Cast Spell (5 Points) purchased every 40 levels (40, 80) The caster may quick cast one spell per day by stating "Quick Cast <Spell Name> "

50th Level: Piercing Spell (5 Points) purchased every 50 levels (50, 100) The Sorcerer may add the pierce tagline to one casting of one spell per day. Add "Pierce" to the end of the effect description when cast. Ex. "...Fiery Devastation. 150 Fire Pierce"

Artificers

Academia sometimes means leaving the outside world to its own devices while the scholar quietly experiments and gathers unto him/herself as much information and knowledge as possible.

Let others rush to fight with sword and shield, yours is the ability they need to enchant those items. Allow the Magi and the Sorcerer to think they have mastered magic; neither can compete with the Artificer's knowledge of the true potential of Ritual magic.

You create, you can destroy, you summon and conjure things from the thin air to do your bidding. This is the true nature of magic; this is what an Artificer does.

Historically similar to the other Scholars, but with a bent toward finding hidden knowledge, many liken them to monks or freemasons for examples.

Hit Points: 2 per level up to 40 (adjusted by race)

Maximum Weapon Damage: +3 (Three)

Maximum Armor: 20

Weapon Restrictions: No two-handed weapons other than Staff

Max Backstab Damage: +3 (Three)

Magic Type: Any

Racial Restrictions: No Sylvan Elf, Eldaran, Orc-Blood or Ogrekin may become Artificers.

The Artificer is not a great warrior by any stretch, preferring the Ritual circle and items to the world of combat any day. Thus, they may learn to call only up to +3 (three) Weapon Damage with any weapon they can wield, and up to what the weapon type will allow. This also means they may learn only one Parry and Critical strike, but never have access to Ripostes or Lethal Strikes. Also, only one Shield Block and Shield Bash.

Artificers have many weapon restrictions and can learn only a select few martial weapons, of course the staff and dagger are chief among these items.

Artificers are members of academia, not common street thugs, and so find themselves on poor footing for any form of stealth combat. They can learn these tasks, but only limitedly at best. Artificers can still gain Backstab Damage at +3 (three) to be able to also buy a single Assassinate and Dodge/Intercept. They can never learn Feints or Eviscerate attacks.

Artificers are Scholarly casters and can learn from any school of magic they choose and may become powerful casters with up to a 12 (twelve) column in their Primary magic. They learn their Primary column as a Magi does in a six (6) column format.

Artificers may learn Secondary magic up to a 10 (ten) column if they so desire. This school of magic is learned in a five (5) column format.

Also, they may learn a Tertiary school of magic if they so desire. This last column of magic may be as high as 7 (seven) spells wide and is learned in a four (4) column format.

No other profession is as powerful a Ritual magics practitioner as an Artificer. They can grasp Ritual magics as easily as most Scholars grasp their primary magic. Masteries of those Ritual Magics are common amongst this ilk.

Runes, as with all professions, are available to Artificer. Many an Artificer has learned these valuable skills to augment their curiosity and skill in research as well as their personal survival.

Crafts, Lores, and even Production skills can all be learned by the Artificer profession, and many can even be mastered. In fact, an Artificer's keen mind can grasp even the newest of "magics" technology. They excel in Engineering and have found it a great augmentation to their magics in the form of firearms, rustic as they may be.

Artificer's have no specific code they must follow for good or evil. Desired as counsel to nobles yet feared as dealing with powers beyond the common people's scope, and even superstitious natures.

As an Artificer, your Ritual magic skills will be in demand almost constantly, so master your basics and then as soon as you can begin to learn your Ritual magics.

Be wise and learn those Lores and Ritual Magic Masteries which help augment your profession and improve your role-playing.

Special Ability:

20th Level: Ritual Expertise <Primary Ritual Magic>: (2 points) Purchased every 10 levels (20, 30, 40...) up to a maximum of Five (5) times: The character gains the ability to augment rituals performed in such a way that they add a 10% bonus to that rituals success.

After five (5) times this practically guarantees that a ritual performed by an Artificer in its entirety, and with the basic components needed, will be successful every time.

This ability also acts as a bonus to any push or augmentation that an Artificer may be trying to achieve during a ritual.

20th Level: Ritual Expertise <Secondary Ritual Magic>: (4 points) purchased every 20 levels (20, 40, 60...) up to a maximum of five (5) times: The character gains the ability to augment rituals performed in such a way that they add a 10% bonus to that rituals success.

After five (5) times this practically guarantees that a ritual performed by an Artificer in its entirety, and with the basic components needed, will be successful every time.

This ability also acts as a bonus to any push or augmentation that an Artificer may be trying to achieve during a ritual.

30th Level: Ritual Resistance <Primary Ritual Magic>:
(Free) Artificers may purchase twice as many resists based on their primary ritual type as normal.

For example, an Artificer with Ethereal Ritual 6 as their primary ritual may purchase four (4) Resist Ethereal instead of the normal two.

40th Level: Ritual Resistance <Secondary Ritual Magic>:
(Free) Artificers may purchase twice as many resists based on their secondary ritual type as normal.

For example, an Artificer with Ethereal Ritual 6 as their secondary ritual may purchase four (4) Resist Ethereal instead of the normal two.

50th Level: Ritual Speed (Free) (50,100) this ability allows an Artificer to reduce the casting time of their Primary Specialty rituals by 5 minutes, minimum 1 minute. At 100 this applies to their Secondary specialty rituals.

Mythic Adventures

Prestige Groups

Live Action Role-Playing Game

Chapter 6: Prestige Groups

One of the more unique aspects of Mythic Adventures is the inclusion of Prestige Groups. These groups can add extra depth to character as well as a sense of group cohesion and belonging.

Prestige Groups all have certain common properties in an effort to keep them balanced and fair.

First all these, groups are all optional, you may choose to attempt to join one or not as you wish.

These groups all have abilities which may be desirable, but they all also cost a lot of skill points. In fact, to achieve a fully realized Prestige Group character you would be spending at least 85 to 110 points just on gaining the groups abilities, over the course of a character's progression. Plainly put, that means an average of 10 levels will be dedicated just to the progression of one's prestige group, rather than focusing on one's other skills.

Second, all Prestige Groups have certain pre-requisites to join the group, many of which are not something you might purchase otherwise, such as Military Lore, or Farming. Some may even be counter intuitive for your chosen profession, such as a Read & Write or Healer Arts for a Warrior, or One-Handed Blades and Shield Use for a Magi.

Third, all Prestige Groups are just that, a group. To join, you must impress the group enough for them to let your character in and have all the pre-requisites to join, before you can become an initiate.

Fourth, no Prestige Group allows anyone to join regardless of their abilities before that character has reached a minimum of level 15, and maybe even higher for some professions. The fact is that some of these groups do not even allow members of certain professions or races to join at all.

Further, and maybe most importantly, joining one of these groups is a commitment to not only the group, but a certain style of role-playing. One must meet the expectations of the image and standards the group has. It is a commitment. Once a member, always a member. Even should the character say retire from active duty, they would still be responsible to act as a member of their Prestige Group would.

The punishments for acting against one's group are like a professional Knight breaking their code. Loss of any special abilities associated with the group and being shunned by any members of the group. (You would have to inform any member of your former group that you are a fallen member out of play so that they can react accordingly, even if they had never met you). Further, the skill points you spent on the group's abilities would be unusable and not refundable and could not be used to purchase something else.

The character would also lose any spell use that is not normally a part of their professions make up. (Example: A Knight of Valor, Fallen Member of the Sisterhood of the Phoenix who chose to learn an Elemental Secondary Column would lose access to those spells.)

A being who loses their Prestige Group may try to redeem themselves though quest or deed. They may even join a new group and while they would not gain back the points spent on his or her original group, they would be able to learn the new group's skills. This is an expensive option, but if a player decides it is the right role-playing opportunity it can be worth the experience.

In any case a player character may only ever belong to one (1) Prestige Group at a time, and never combine powers.

All that being said, these groups are a fun way to further extend your character's progression and can add a real sense of accomplishment to anyone who joins. It can also provide a sense of community and of belonging to something bigger than just the quest for gold, power, riches or glory.

Prestige Groups are demanding, but the rewards in role-playing can be great and make for an exciting time at any Mythic Adventures game.

Lastly, though it may vary by campaign, the standard rule is that a group's membership cannot gain its abilities until there are at least 10 different members in play.

These members must all assemble at one time to be granted the start of their progression as a Prestige Group.

There will often be a leader character that is in place and is a player character who can teach the new group members their skills, and most likely will be the exception in that they will already have these skills to display to new members before the 10th member joins.

Military Service and Alliance Military Orderes

The Kingdom's military has several divisions in addition to Alliance Military Orders. The men and women of these groups protect the Kingdom and Alliance with their lives and are often the front lines of the defense which has allowed the Kingdom to prosper through this last age.

Basic military troops are divided into separate divisions and their duties are even further divided into duty types of which any member can be rotated.

Garrison duty is most common and involves being stationed at a fort or town in which a military fortification has been built. Garrisons defend the town and surrounding countryside and can even be asked to help any local law enforcement in helping keep the peace or apprehend fugitives if the local sheriff needs the help. Garrisons do not answer to the local sheriff; but they may simply be requested for aid. Their primary job is defense.

Field operations would be next. These are anywhere from small border patrols going from border fort to border fort, to major troop movements of whole divisions. This is when a soldier may see the most "action" and are often considered the more dangerous assignments.

The Kingdom at the time of this writing has nine divisions of soldiers. The common designations for a soldier within any division are Heavy Calvary, Light Cavalry, Heavy Infantry, Light Infantry, Siege and Engineering, and Command.

Often referred to as the 10th Division are the Alliance Military Orders which, while not officially part of the Kingdom Military, can be assigned to Garrisons, Field Operations or even their own installations.

The Golden Lions

The Order of the Golden Lions was founded over a century ago. Originally founded by a Knight of Valor to protect healers who could not otherwise protect themselves, they caught the eye of the old king and were elevated to a proper Military Order.

They are specially trained to combat the Undead and are a mixed unit of Heavy & Light Infantry of exceptional valor and bravery.

The Golden Lions are known to inspire bravery in the common people. Be it the old heavily armored traditional guard or the newer members who are flashier and sometimes called swashbucklers.

To be a Golden Lion is to be brave in the face of any danger, to be first on the front lines, and to be the last out of any situation. They are well known for taking on missions that others simply would have to refuse.

The Golden Lions have had a member of their order hold the position of Lord General for over 100 years, and it is a certainty the next Lord General will come from their ranks as well.

Knights of the Order of the Dragon

“Nobility serves the People”

Not all those who are of the nobility are willing to just set on their family fortunes and simply argue in Parliament, or play games and grow fat. Some stand up in the face of all that might harm the week, all that might disrupt the Kingdom, her allies, and the people whom they believe they serve.

As the Creed for this Order shows the Knights of the Dragon believe they must defend and serve the common man in order to not only gain their respect, but to build a more perfect society in which the people can prosper. If that means they must bleed, or even die, to protect those under them than so be it! It is a sacrifice they are willing to make for the better of all.

Fellows of the Herbal College of Botanical Researchers

“Explore the World, discover new creatures, and kill them! For Science!”

The Fellows of the Herbal College of Botanical Researchers is a refined association of scholars and natural philosophers seeking knowledge through discussion and discrete empirical research. Or so they would have the world believe. They are often actually found either within a maze of glass tubes and beakers containing strange looking liquids or in dangerous lands far from their homes thigh deep in the local flora and fauna, in both cases attempting to wrest another secret from the bosom of the natural world by main force. While their campuses allow them to collaborate more easily, and they do take their teaching responsibilities seriously, they are almost as often “On Sabbatical” furthering their own pet projects.

This has, on occasion, brought them into conflict with the local keepers of those lands. However, the benefit of their discoveries to all has enjoined several Sylvan Elves and others to join their ranks, both to seek knowledge, and to better guide their younger colleagues’ boisterous exploration.

This group of elite craftsmen guard and refine the Kingdom's knowledge of ores, alloys, and metallic products. They split their focus between finding more efficient ways to make their wares, and new wares to make and bring to market. This focus on the novel can make some of dwarves who have joined the Guilders uncomfortable, but they generally feel the benefits are worth it.

This means that even should the victim be healed by a 6th level or better spell, they would still be diseased as per the tagline until removed or 10 minutes has passed. This attack can be parried by normal means though a spell defense will still leave the victim Diseased. To activate this skill, the user states "Infectious Critical Strike <taglines>"

Racial Special Orders

The races of the world also have their own special Prestige Groups that are not available to all the races of the Kingdom and her allies, but are specific to just their own race.

A sense of pride can be held by those who represent the best of their race that these Prestige Groups offer.

Each is an elite group, which protects the way of life and individuality of the race they belong to. This does not mean they don't get along with some of the Kingdom groups, in fact groups like the Elves' Grove Guard and the Royal Scouts often work in concert, and have a great affection for one another.

The Dwarves of the Goldhammer Brigade on the other hand have little to no use for any of the Scholarly Prestige Groups, and even less for the Oni who belong to the Academy Celestial of Wu Jhae. They simply like to bash things with hammers, and they are very, very good at it.

Part of the design of these groups is to give players an option to really shine as an Elf, Dwarf or even an Oni. To help make the player feel more connected with their choices of race and profession that these races prefer to be.

The Prestige Groups hopefully will add depth of character, sometimes through tension, and other times through co-operation that would otherwise not exist in Mythic Adventures.

Like all Prestige Groups though, a minimum of 10 players is required before members of any group can begin to learn their special skills and abilities.

You may also find that the Racial Prestige Groups have even more pre-requisites than the normal Prestige Groups, and that they take even more skill points away from a character.

Again, joining a Prestige Group is a choice to belong to something bigger than oneself, but also a demand on one's resources (in the form of skill points) and time.

Once a member of a group, always a member, and the player must act accordingly or be penalized by the Marshalls, and even by members of their group.

Elves have three distinct groups. The High Elves' have the Aman'Mythal, Bladesingers whose skill and dedication to their craft is unparalleled by any save the Dusk Elf's Barzum-Ishean Death Dancers. What strange pact exists that binds these two together?

The Elves also share a prestige group with their Fey allies the Eldarine. The Grove Guard travels the lands and deep forests on the backs of great stags and wild horses. They keep trespassers at bay, from lands they should not enter.

Not to be outdone the Dwarves also have their Prestige Groups. Like all things Dwarven they are based around Clan and the arts of smithing and war.

Clan Trillium's Smiths may be the greatest Armor and Weapon Smiths in the world. Producing items of great beauty, and considerable power.

The warriors of the Goldhammer Brigade never back down from a fight or from starting one with a mage if no one is looking.

What secrets do the Shadow Dwarves of the Nightfell Reavers hide deep under the mountain?

The Oni share their Academy with the few Easterlings who can grasp the power that the Ethereal Island of Wu Jhae contains.

The Crimson Praetorian of the Djinn-born act as the elite guard of House Crimson and the front guard of that strange and powerful race. Do they seek to protect the world, further their Prince's goals or even destroy the fabric of the very planes?

The Jal'Khandian have no form of spy network. Well at least that is what they will always tell you. The Jal'Parr ibn Klem? Oh, they are simply a house guard. Which house you ask? I am sorry what was the question? Oh, spies amongst the Jal'Khandian. No, they simply do not exist. After all, why would they need spies now that the wars are over and they have their hard-won freedoms?

Take note and a deep look at these groups before deciding to start on the path toward joining one of these. Each of these options requires an extra commitment from the player.

If you decide you wish to pursue one of these groups, start learning the basic skills needed, make absolutely sure that your make-up is spot on at all times, and you must go the extra mile for all your costuming as well.

Remember your group helps define how others see these fantasy races in Mythic Adventures.

Aman'Mythal

The tragic history of the Bladesingers is well known to most Elves. Almost wiped out, only one master Bladesinger remained after the massacre over a century ago. Even this master was exiled by the Noble Council in an effort to quiet him for speaking out against the court and its manipulations, which led to the destruction of all the lodges.

By tradition, all who practice Bladesong must answer to a master, over any noble, save their princess of course. This has been taken further with the resurgence of the Aman'Mythal. Not all Bladesinger's can be Aman'Mythal, but all Aman'Mythal are Bladesingers. Bladesingers who only answer to the now Blade Master of all the Elves.

The Grove Guardians

Deep in the forest the Elves and their Fey brethren protect the deep places people should not tread. The Groves of old, the lands of the Ent and Dryad; and the ways of leaf and branch are the purview of the Guardians.

Yet ponder this; the Groves have been silent now for over two centuries, the Mythals all laid to waste by the Darkness and then finished off by Necromancy and the Great Betrayal.

So, what do these Guardians do, what do they guard? Do they protect the old places, hoping for their return, or do they actively seek out and try to restore that which once was?

The world has changed. The Ancient Races; decimated in the wars, have not been able to recover. The Groves of the fey were long lived and powerful beyond measure, like a sequoia. Humans are like the fast-growing pine. What will happen to the world if, or even when, they take over the ways of nature from the ancients? The Khaliss Sahad

At the beginning, there was nothing, only a darkness so prevailing, so all encompassing, that existence itself was in question.

Then came all that we know, the spark of all things ignited existence, and the nothingness recoiled and screamed at the start of all things.

The darkness, the void, would not be quelled long though and from its eternal dark arose the Dredd. These are beings of nightmare whose sole purpose is to destroy everything and return all to darkness. To undo all that exists so that everything can again be nothing.

A thousand realities may have fallen to these beings before they encountered and started their war with the Eldar. Goldhammer Brigade

Founded by the last member of Clan Goldhammer, almost 3 centuries ago during the Great Insurrection Under the Mountains, to fight the encroaching darkness from the Depths from overrunning Dun Khadzir and the other Dwarven Karacks.

This Brigade has grown in size and power throughout the centuries. The Goldhammer Brigade stands proud as one of the most dedicated and fearsome group of Dwarven warriors ever seen. They stop at nothing to get to their goal. Magic, what a waste; Science, only good for making things go boom.

“Never hit a Dwarf in the head, it only pisses us off.”

Words spoken by their founder and recited by every Dwarf of this Brigade, as they shrug off wounds that would kill lesser beings

30th Level:

Shield Breaker (5 points): Purchased every 30 levels (30,60,90) When using his/her hammer, the Brigadier is able to deliver a strike to an opponent's shield which will destroy any non-magical shield and will render a magical shield inert, and unable to call up its magical properties, for 10 minutes after the strike. The tagline “Shield Breaker” is added to the Brigadier's normal damage for this strike to take effect, and the strike must hit the opponent or its shield.

40th Level:

Resolute Defense (5 points) purchased every 40 levels (40,80) This skill allows the user to take only 1 hit point of damage from any damaging spell, attack or effect. This includes special attacks or spells which normally would drop the character to critically wounded or worse status, such as Critical Strike, Lethal Strike, Assassinate, the Death or Condemn spells, and similar. To activate this ability, the user must loudly declare “Resolute Defense” once affected by an attack.

50th Level:

Cloak of Bravery : (5 points) purchased once every 50 levels (50,100). This ability removes all Fear, Horror and Terror effects used on anyone within a 10' radius of the user and grants those within that radius a temporary Bravery effect (as the skill) for 10 minutes as well.

Nightfell Reavers

What goes bump in the darkness of the deep places where mortals should not tread? The Shadow Dwarves know and have been the victim of those dark beings, the Mind Flayers, for centuries.

That was until the Reavers decided to bump back. They have the means and the skills to strike back at these abominations and make them suffer, and suffer they shall. For countless centuries of torment and pain inflicted on their race, the Reavers will destroy all things the Mind Flayers have ever created, until they are but a nightmare for children's fairytales and nothing more.

Preferred Races: Shadow Dwarf

This includes special attacks or spells which normally would drop the character to critically wounded or worse status, such as Critical Strike, Lethal Strike, Assassinate, the Death or Condemn spells, and similar. To activate this ability, the user must loudly declare "Resolute Defense" once affected by an attack.

30th Level:

This skill strikes the target with a bolt of energy which does 50 points of damage to the target. This ability bypasses armor and goes directly to the targets hit points, and so uses the Body tagline.

Note: They may place a 2nd Rune of the Reflective Barrier on their shield as well. To activate this Rune the bearer must state "Rune of the Reflective Barrier" to let the attacker know the attack was reflected at the attacker by the Rune.

Academy Celestial of Wu Jen

There is an island shrouded in mist hidden off the coast of Nippon. This island is said to call to all Oni, to travel there and realize the full potential of what it means to be an Ogre Magi.

The race itself has some deep secret, and only these casters of the Academy of Wu Jhae know the secret which binds them together.

Rarely, an exceptional Humans of Easterling decent is allowed to join the ranks of the Academy as well. Though only the bravest or foolish to even try, for to fail is to risk obliteration.

The Crimon Praetorian

Volatile mages whom wield death and destruction at every turn with but a wave of their hand. The very elements seem to be at their sinister command. The Crimon Praetorian are not these Djinn-born. It is not that they don't hurl the elements at their whim, but they are far more dangerous, far more deceptive, far more organized, and far more Djinn-born than that of the image above.

"Non esse Dib" this is their Creed though only their members know why. They are honorable, stealthy, and deadly with spell, sword, vial, and well-placed dagger from the shadows. The Hearth Guard

The old ways of the First Men are being lost, much that once was is now just faded memory and soon, if the Dunedin, the first humans of the Kingdom of Edamn, disappear from this world, shall be nothing more at all.

None know this as well as the woman of the Survivors of the Old Kingdom. To offset this, and to make sure they never repeat the mistakes of the first Kingdom of Mann, the Hearth Guard was established.

The Hearth Guard have chosen a life of service. They will remember, they will learn, and they will protect all that remains of the Dunedin and their world.

Not every House has a Hearth Guard, in fact most outside of Aeldirmann do not. They are rising in Berowick and Vallenwood.

These women are more than just retainers of noble houses. They know that they may be the last defense against those who would harm their charges and their lands.

The Hearth Guard are each fiercely loyal to their House. Started in the First Kingdom, then brought to the Free Kingdom; first to the lands of Aeldirmann, this tradition has spread throughout many lands.

They revere the Houses of Rickshire, Van Neste, Arundel, and those few who can still trace their lineage back to the first Kingdom. Though rare that those blood lines are blessed with the power of True Dunedin any longer.

The Hearth Guard will protect those things and the last of their charges unto their dying day. Once chosen a House may never be changed, and to break an Oath to a House would mean to forfeit all status as a Hearth Guard, with no refund of Points.

Zealot Orders

Servants of the Dawn

The Servants of the Dawn came from the ashes of a previous order of Healers who were overrun. The Survivors of this Order found themselves in two separate camps. The other camp believed Healers should learn to defend themselves and violence sometimes must happen.

There is a long history between the Order and the Military Order of the Golden Lions, and in fact The Lions often act as protectors and escorts for the Servants of the Dawn.

The Cowled Wizards

The Great Sundering came, and with it the world almost shook off the threat of the mortal races, but then she stopped. For though the betrayal on the mountain stopped the heroes of the world from completing their task, Necromancy's hold on the land was broken. Or so it was thought. Mindless undead, and more powerful spirits still stalk the land, but few in number and far between. An age of peace has allowed the stain of necromancy to disappear from the minds of men.

Some things, though, should not be forgotten, and the Cowled still practice their dark arts away from prying eyes. Stupid Necromancers die by showing their power in front of others. Cultist of Entropy

The Cultists of Entropy, sometimes called Priestess of Entropy, are not in fact Necromancers. They tend to be all Women, no males have been met yet, and they are often Fey. Their magics tend to be Healer and Druid, with occasional Hearth casters as well.

The Cultists have accepted Entropy's taking of the Mantle of Queen of Undeath (circa 200ish?) and as a Cult of Suffering have seen this as one more burden on their shoulders, leading to their path of Oblivion.

They are those whose lives have been so pained they would rather simply cease to exist than take such pain and burdens into eternity. To them Entropy offers a release from an Eternity of memories, and possible harm to the Spark.

To prove themselves to be worthy of Oblivion they travel the lands trying to ease others suffering, by simply removing the memories of that suffering. They can not change or replace those memories, but they instead leave a blank hole where the painful memory was.

It is a double-edged sword.

The most commonly encountered Cultists are Fey, and Dryads, Faun and Eldar are among the most common as the losses they suffered during the Dredd Wars are so great as to leave only a melancholy existence until they finally fade from this world. They hope by easing the suffering of others they will leave the world a fairer place before they accept

“The Old Grove was like the Red Oak, the new one will not be as the Old, it will be as the Pine tree, quick and fast to grow. The same but forever different.”

The Old Ways of Nature are but at times fading memories in these troubled times. Yet even years of peace can make memories fade.

The Seekers wish to preserve and even restore the ways of Old. They follow the path of Serenity, the Oldest of the Matron sisters. Looking for ways to save the calm glades, the simple world where a place of peace on the side of a brook or stream are valued. Simple places of the Old Ways such as Fairie rings of Mushrooms, and the Standing stones of the Old Groves are a joy to them, and yet proof that in the world there is more, yet to come.

Skills & Charts

Chapter 7: Skills

Mythic Adventures is a skill based game. As you gain Skill Points and levels you can spend those points on the skills you want to help develop your character.

The cost of each skill is based on your character's profession. Naturally, Warriors have a harder time then Scholars at learning magic and easier time learning combat skills. The reverse is true as well.

Weapon skills may be upgraded from a basic skill to a corresponding Weapon Master by finding a teacher and paying the difference in the costs to upgrade, if your race and profession allows you to learn a new skill.

Example: One handed Blades could be upgraded to either Weapon Master: One Handed Weapons, Weapon Master: Blades, or even Weapon Master: All

Please note that not all skills are available to all professions and races, so be careful when you select your profession and race to make sure that they contain the skills you will want as you develop your character.

Most skills require that you find someone with the skill and the appropriate Teaching skill to train your character the first time they learn it. Additional purchases of the same skill such as Weapon Damage+2 or Scribe:11 do not require another teacher.

Each Spell Level, Ritual Level, and Grand Master Production Level are considered individual skills and so require a teacher for each purchase.

Some skills like Crafts, Lores, Affinities, and Role Playing skills are broad categories that contain a multitude of specific skills. Each specific Craft, Lore, Affinity, and RP skill requires that you find a willing teacher who has that specific skill before being able to learn it. If there are multiple levels of the skill such as Craft: Mining or Combat Lore: Orcs, you may buy the additional levels without a teacher. This does not include upgrading an Informational Lore from Lesser to Greater.

Many skills have prerequisite skills that you must attain prior to purchasing that skill. Skills are also self-regulating in that the prerequisites of a skill must be met before that skill can be purchased, and any prerequisites the prerequisite has and so on.

Lastly, some skills like Nobility may only be selected at the creation of the character.

Be sure to check over the skill descriptions and skill list charts to make sure you can purchase your desired skills.

Weapons and Attacks

Weapon Skills

Weapon Skills are the basic skills needed to wield a particular kind of weapon in combat and call its base damage.

Without knowledge of the basics a person may not wield a weapon in combat, nor may they activate any magical properties a weapon or shield has without the proper skill to use that item.

Certain races gain additional bonuses with a particular weapon or group of weapons. This may be in the form of additional damage bonus when using a weapon such as the +1 damage bonus some Jal'Khandian gain with Scimitars, or a reduced cost to buy a weapon skill such as Easterling characters who can buy Bladed Weapon Master for -2 skill points.

Please review the charts on weapon types which will give you the base damage a weapon calls, this maximum damage a weapon can call, if the weapon can be used with the Backstab Damage skill, and if it has a higher potential maximum when combined with that skill.

The Bow skill allows the character to use the normal style of bow & arrows in combat. Bows must be less than 25lbs of draw weight. This skill does not allow the player to use a crossbow.

The Bow skill may be coupled with the Weapon Damage skill so that the user may call additional damage when using his/her bow, but only the Weapon Damage skill in the primary hand can be applied to a two-handed weapon, such that if a player had Weapon Damage +3 in their primary hand and +2 in their offhand only the +3 would apply to any two-handed weapon they may use. Most Elves gain additional bonuses when using the bow.

Weapon Master – Racial Weapons

Prerequisites: None

The Weapon Master – Racial Weapons skill allows the character to use any racial weapon in combat effectively combining the race's preferred weapons as described in the section on that Race. This can include Bladed, Blunt and Cleaving weapon Skills, as well as Pole Arms and Staff skill all into one Master skill.

All weapon requirements and restrictions still apply as listed in the individual skill descriptions above.

Any weapon used must meet the safety standards of Mythic Adventures, and pass a safety check each and every event, before it may be used.

The Racial Master skill may be coupled with the Weapon Damage skill so that the user may call additional damage when using his/her racial weapons, but only the Weapon Damage skill in the primary hand can be applied to a two-handed weapon, such that if a player had Weapon Damage +3 in their primary hand and +2 in their offhand only the +3 would apply to any two-handed weapon they may use.

A note on Master skills, all Master skills allow any additional Weapon Damage or skills to be coupled with any weapon skill in their category.

Backstab Damage attacks may be applied to the weapon normally, by weapon type.

Note: This skill may be purchased by any character for their Race's weapons, if any, and all weapons covered by this skill can be used by that character. This supercedes any Profession related weapon restrictions. For example, an Elven Knight may use a Bow if they purchase this skill, but only if they purchase this skill. They may not purchase the Bow skill separately.

Weapon Master – Bladed Weapon

Prerequisites: None

The Weapon Master– Bladed Weapons skill allows the character to use any bladed weapon in combat effectively combining the Bladed One Handed and Two Handed Blades weapon skills. He or she may even use throwing daggers.

All weapon requirements and restrictions still apply as listed in the individual skill descriptions above.

Any weapon used must meet the safety standards of Mythic Adventures, and pass a safety check each and every event, before it may be used.

The Bladed Master skill may be coupled with the Weapon Damage skill so that the user may call additional damage when using his/her Bladed Weapon, but only the Weapon Damage skill in the primary hand can be applied to a two-handed weapon, such that if a player had Weapon Damage +3 in their primary hand and +2 in their offhand only the +3 would apply to any two-handed weapon they may use.

A note on Master skills, all Master skills allow any additional Weapon Damage or skills to be coupled with any weapon skill in their category.

Backstab Damage attacks may be applied to the weapon normally, by weapon type.

The use of the Weapon Master – Bladed Weapons is restricted for all Scoundrel and Scholar professions. Please see the profession description for more information.

Weapon Master – Cleaving Weapons

Prerequisites: None

The Weapon Master – Cleaving Weapons skill allows the character to use any cleaving weapon in combat effectively combining the Cleaving One Handed and Two Handed Cleaving weapon skills. He or she would even be able to use throwing axes.

All weapon requirements and restrictions still apply as listed in the individual skill descriptions above.

Any weapon used must meet the safety standards of Mythic Adventures, and pass a safety check each and every event, before it may be used.

The Cleaving Master skill may be coupled with the Weapon Damage skill so that the user may call additional damage when using his/her cleaving weapon, but only the Weapon Damage skill in the primary hand can be applied to a two-handed weapon, such that if a player had Weapon Damage +3 in their primary hand and +2 in their offhand only the +3 would apply to any two-handed weapon they may use.

A Note on Master skills, all Master skills allow any additional Weapon Damage or skills to be coupled with any weapon skill in their category.

Backstab Damage attacks may be applied to the weapon normally, by weapon type.

The use of the Weapon Master – Cleaving Weapons is restricted for all Scoundrel and Scholar professions. Please see the profession description for more information.

Weapon Master – Blunt Weapons

Prerequisites: None

The Weapon Master – Blunt Weapons skill allows the character to use any blunt weapon in combat effectively combining the Blunt One Handed and Two Handed Blunt weapon skills. He or she would even be able to use throwing hammers.

All weapon requirements and restrictions still apply as listed in the individual skill descriptions above.

Any weapon used must meet the safety standards of Mythic Adventures, and pass a safety check each and every event, before it may be used.

The Blunt Master skill may be coupled with the Weapon Damage skill so that the user may call additional damage when using his/her blunt weapon, but only the Weapon Damage skill in the primary hand can be applied to a two-handed weapon, such that if a player had Weapon Damage +3 in their primary hand and +2 in their offhand only the +3 would apply to any two-handed weapon they may use.

A note on Master skills, all Master skills allow any additional Weapon Damage or skills to be coupled with any weapon skill in their category.

Backstab Damage attacks may be applied to the weapon normally, by weapon type.

The use of the Weapon Master – Blunt Weapons is restricted for all Scoundrel and Scholar Professions. Please see the Profession description for more information.

Combat Proficiencies

Combat Proficiencies are those skills which allow for additional damage and special skills used in weapon oriented combat.

These skills are always coupled with a Weapon skill.

Shield Use: Medium Shield

Prerequisites: None

This skill allows the player to use a shield in combat. The Shield skill is needed to activate any magical abilities a shield may have.

A Medium Shield is defined as all shields which fall between the maximum of a Buckler Shield and minimum of a Tower Shield. So, any shield whose longest dimension is greater 18" but less than 36"

Just as a weapon, a shield must pass a safety check and may only be of a certain size for safety purposes. A shield must be of either all foam construction or of wood construction with a padded edge of no less than ¾".

A shield may be used to block physical damage in melee, and tagline effects that are direct attacks such as a packet thrown for "10 fire". The shield must intercept the attack to block it, simply wearing a shield does not grant its protection; one must be actively holding and trying to use it.

A Medium Shield will not protect against area of effect tagline effects such as "20 Fire 10-foot radius".

For more on Taglines and their effects please refer to the Combat chapter.

A shield will not block spells. If a spell strikes a shield, then it counts the same as if the packet had struck the player.

There are certain spells which are combined with Shield use, as well as various Runes which can only be used with a Shield. These spells and Runes require the bearer have skill in their shield to use and may require additional skills as well to activate. See the Chapter on Spells and Magic for more information regarding Spells and Runes.

Shield Use: Buckler Shield

Prerequisites: None

This skill allows the player to use a Buckler Shield in combat. The Shield Use skill is needed to activate any magical abilities a Shield may have.

A Buckler is defined as a shield whose longest dimension does not exceed 18", and total square inches does not exceed 300.

Just as a weapon, a shield must pass a safety check and may only be of a certain size for safety purposes. A shield must be of either all foam construction or of wood construction with a padded edge of no less than ¾".

A shield may be used to block physical damage in melee, and tagline effects that are direct attacks such as a packet thrown for "10 fire". The shield must intercept the attack to block it, simply wearing a shield does not grant its protection; one must be actively holding and trying to use it.

A Buckler Shield will not protect against area of effect Tagline effects such as "20 Fire 10-foot radius".

A properly made Buckler Shield may be used by archers as well, while using their Bows or Crossbows

For more on Taglines and their effects please refer to the chapter on Combat in this book.

A shield will not block spells in fact if a spell strikes a Shield then it counts the same as if the packet had struck the player.

There are certain spells which are combined with Shield use, as well as various Runes which can only be used with a Shield. These spells and Runes require the bearer have skill in their shield to use and may require additional skills as well to activate. See the Chapter on Spells and Magic for more information regarding Spells and Runes.

Shield Use: Tower Shield

Prerequisites: None

This skill allows the player to use a Tower Shield in combat. The Shield skill is needed to activate any magical abilities a Shield may have.

Tower shields are defined as any shield where one dimension is longer than 36". For safety reasons, a tower shield may not have a width that exceeds 36", a longest dimension that exceeds 48", or an area that exceeds 1600 in².

Just as a weapon, a shield must pass a safety check and may only be of a certain size for safety purposes. A shield must be of either all foam construction or of wood construction with a padded edge of no less than ¾".

A Tower Shield may be used to block physical damage in melee, and tagline effects that are direct attacks such as a packet thrown for "10 fire". The shield must intercept the attack to block it, simply wearing a shield does not grant its protection; one must be actively holding and trying to use it.

The Tower Shield will protect the user against area of effect Tagline effects such as "20 Fire 10-foot radius" when the originating attack strikes the users Tower Shield. Not when it strikes elsewhere.

This benefit obviously does not protect against area of effect attacks centered on the attacker such as a Phoenix Maiden's Inferno, or Lethal Strikes 10ft Radius.

For more on Taglines and their effects please refer to the chapter on Combat in this book.

A shield will not block spells in fact if a spell strikes a Shield then it counts the same as if the packet had struck the player.

There are certain spells which are combined with Shield use, as well as various Runes which can only be used with a Shield. These spells and Runes require the bearer have skill in their shield to use and may require additional skills as well to activate. See the Chapter on Spells and Magic for more information regarding Spells and Runes.

Shield Use: Master (All)

Prerequisites: None

This skill allows the player to use any Shield in combat. The Shield skill is needed to activate any magical abilities a Shield may have.

Just as a weapon, a shield must pass a safety check and may only be of a certain size for safety purposes. A shield must be of either all foam construction or of wood construction with a padded edge of no less than ¾".

A shield may be used to block physical damage in melee, and tagline effects that are direct attacks such as a packet thrown for "10 fire". The shield must intercept the attack to block it, simply wearing a shield does not grant its protection; one must be actively holding and trying to use it.

Depending on the size type of the shield as to what types of taglines (including radius for Tower Shields) it may protect against, as well as if it can be used for Archers (i.e. Bucklers)

For more on Taglines and their effects please refer to the chapter on Combat in this book.

A shield will not block spells in fact if a spell strikes a Shield then it counts the same as if the packet had struck the player.

There are certain spells which are combined with Shield use, as well as various Runes which can only be used with a Shield. These spells and Runes require the bearer have skill in their shield to use and may require additional skills as well to activate. See the Chapter on Spells and Magic for more information regarding Spells and Runes.

Dual Wield Fighting Style

Prerequisites: Small Weapons/ One Handed Weapon skill.

This skill allows the player to use a second one-handed weapon in his/her offhand in addition to using a one-handed weapon in his/her primary hand in combat.

Note: Bastard Swords fall under the Two Handed Bladed skill, and so can not be used with the Dual Wield skill.

An offhand weapon may be used to block physical damage in melee, and may be coupled with the Weapon Damage skill to gain additional damage to the offhand attack.

All skills which enhance the offhand must be purchased separately from and in addition to the primary hand skills and in the typical order.

Example: If a player has One Handed Bladed weapons skill and Dual Wield Fighting Style, they would purchase their Weapon Damage, Strikes and such separately for both hands. So, you could see a Warrior with +5 Weapon Damage (Right), two Parries (Right), one Critical Strike (Right), +2 Weapon Damage (Left), and a Parry (Left)

Strength, Affinities, Backstab Damage and Sneak Attacks may be applied to the offhand weapon normally.

Certain races, professions, and prestige groups may couple this skill with the Weapon Damage (Both) skill to apply their primary hand's Weapon Damage skills to both hands and their other combat skills to either hand. These races are Elves, Eldar, and Jal'Khandian. The Rogue and Duelist professions may as well, along with members of the Order of the Azure Rose prestige group.

Weapon Damage

Prerequisites: Weapon skill

This skill must be purchased with the designator Left, Right or for some characters, Both.

This skill may be bought multiple times, limited only by the character's profession. All purchased levels apply to all Weapon skills the player has purchased for their character.

Example: If you have Weapon Damage(Left) +2 and Weapon Master: One Handed Weapons as well as the Bow skill you would add +2 damage to any of the weapons listed in those skills when using your left hand.

Each time this skill is purchased it allows the player to call an additional point of damage with their Weapon Skills. For example, if the player purchased the Weapon Damage skill twice and had the Simple Weapons skill, they would add +2 damage when using a dagger, thus calling 3 normal, 1 base and +2 for this skill.

Furthermore, the Weapon Damage skill only applies to the hand chosen at time of purchase, thus right or left. Such that if a player has the skills to use two weapons and is fighting with two daggers, but has only purchased Weapon Damage +2 in the right hand and none in the left hand they would call 3 normal when striking with the right-hand dagger, but 1 normal when striking with the left. (1 base +2 right hand/ 1 base +0 left hand)

The Elven, Eldar, and Jal'Khandian races, the Duelist and Rogue professions, and the Order of the Azure Rose prestige group have the option to purchase the Weapon Damage skill in both hands simultaneously instead of left or right. These levels are added to any existing left or right hand damage as necessary and to determine the maximum number of times the Weapon Damage skill can be purchased. Strikes purchased for both hands can be used in either hand.

This skill qualifies as a prerequisite for the more advanced strike attacks such as Critical Strike.

A player may buy up each hand separately as they desire when using this skill such as buying +2 Weapon Damage in the right hand and +4 Weapon Damage in the left hand. Any Special Strikes would be governed by the number of Weapon Damage for that hand, and not over all Weapon Damage. Thus, in the above example the player could purchase 1 Parry for his/her right hand and 2 for the left hand, but would not yet qualify to purchase the Lethal Strike skill for either hand.

Finally, this skill only allows the player's main hand damage to apply to any skill they have with a two-handed weapon. For example, in the case of the player above who has +2 damage in the right hand and +4 damage in the left hand, they would only be able to apply the damage from their main hand, in this case the left, to any skill they have such as Weapon Master – Bladed when using a two-handed weapon. (i.e. When using a normal two handed sword (base5) they would call 9 (nine) normal [5base +4 Weapon Damage(Left)])

Parry

Prerequisites: Weapon skill, Weapon Damage (one per +2 damage).

The Parry skill is a special defense skill, which allows the character to negate a damaging weapon attack, by simply stating "Critical Parry" thus using up the skill.

A Parry will defend against any attack which the weapon itself could defend against other than a Sneak Attack such as an Assassinate. In general, this means 90 degrees from forward center on the offside, and 135 degrees from forward center on the weapon side. Please keep good sportsmanship in mind.

Certain Taglines such as the "Massive" tagline cannot be defended against when using a Parry.

Certain attacks have an "Unparriable" portion to their tagline. Those attacks cannot be Parried or Blocked, but they can be Dodged or Evaded.

The player may purchase this skill once after gaining two (2) levels of the Weapon Damage skill and other prerequisites. They may then purchase this skill each time they gain an additional two (2) levels of the Weapon Damage skill. Thus, it is possible for a player with Weapon Damage +13 to have 6.

Critical Strike

Prerequisites: Weapon skill, Parry, Weapon Damage (one per +3 damage).

The Critical Strike skill is a special attack skill, which allows the character to call a damaging attack which unless properly defended against will cause the defender to fall and be placed at the Critically Wounded status.

To launch this attack, the character must say at minimum “Critical Strike” plus the weapon damage type, and if needed the hand which the strike is coming from. This attack is only good for the one (1) swing in which it is made.

For example, it would be feasible to hear, “Critical Strike Magic, Right Hand” from a player using a magical weapon for the attack. The skill is used up whether it is successful or not at that time.

The strike must land on the player and make contact with their person. If physically blocked by a weapon or shield the attack is used up with no effect. Also, there are spell shields which will defend against this attack, as well as any of the Parry, Block or Dodge skills.

Some creatures and even some characters can develop a natural defense against this attack. These characters will take damage based on their Master Fortify skill.

The player may purchase this skill once after gaining three (3) levels of the Weapon Damage skill and other prerequisites. They may then purchase this skill each time they gain an additional three (3) levels of the Weapon Damage skill. Thus, it is possible for a player with Weapon Damage +13 to have 4.

Shield Block

Prerequisites: Shield Use skill, Parry, Weapon Damage (one per +2 damage)

The Shield Block skill is a special defensive skill; A Shield Block will cancel any attack which the shield itself could defend against other than a Sneak Attack such as an Assassinate. In general, this means 90 degreed from forward center on the offside, and 135 degrees from forward center on the weapon side. Please keep good sportsmanship in mind. The Shield Block can also be used against a Critical Strike, Riposte, or Lethal Strike, and the strike would still be used up by the opposing player.

It may also be used to block things such as a 20 fire packet. If used against a spell, the player would take whatever the spell effect would be normally, though all spell defenses would still apply.

To use this skill, the character would simply state “Shield Block” loudly enough for all those including the attacker to hear. The skill is used up whether it is successful or not at that time.

Certain Taglines such as the “Massive” tagline can be defended against when using a Shield Block.

The player may purchase this skill once after gaining the Parry skill and then they may purchase this skill again each time they gain an addition two levels of Weapon Damage skill in their primary hand. Thus, it is possible for a player with Weapon Damage +6 in their right hand to have only one Parry but three (3) Shield Blocks.

If that player also had Weapon Damage +3 in their left hand this would not count toward the total number of Shield Blocks they could have, and they would still be limited to three (3) in the above example.

Certain attacks have an “Unparriable” portion to their tagline Those attacks cannot be Parried or Blocked, but they can be Dodged or Evaded.

The player may purchase this skill once after gaining two (2) levels of the Weapon Damage skill and other prerequisites. They may then purchase this skill each time they gain an additional two (2) levels of the Weapon Damage skill. Thus, it is possible for a player with Weapon Damage +13 to have 6.

Riposte

Prerequisites: Weapon skill (other than Bow, Crossbow, Thrown Weapons, or Firearms), Parry, Critical Strike, and Weapon Damage skill (one per +4 damage)

The Riposte skill is a special attack skill, which allows the character to Parry (as described in the skill of the same name) an incoming attack while also calling a damaging attack which unless properly defended against will cause the defender to take the Riposte user's normal weapon damage. This skill cannot be augmented by another ability like Lethal Strike or Eviscerate

To launch this attack, the character must say at minimum "Riposte <damage and tagline>", and if needed the hand which the strike is coming from. This attack is only good for the one (1) parry in which it is made.

For example, it would be feasible to hear, "Riposte 15 Magic" from a player using a magical weapon for the attack.

The strike must parry an incoming melee attack on the player and have been able to make physical contact with the initial attacker. If blocked by any of the Parry, Block or Dodge skills, the Riposte Strike's damage will be nullified

There are certain limitations to the damage that can be caused by this attack. The first is the damage which the player would normally call, such that if a player would normally call "5 normal" they would be able to call "Riposte 5 normal" when using this skill. The skill is used up whether it is successful or not at that time.

The second would be the maximum that the weapon itself can call, thus a dagger with its maximum of 15 damage would only ever be able to call 15 points of damage from a frontal attack when using this skill.

Some creatures and even some characters can develop a natural defense against this attack and certain attacks such as Lethal Strike, where in they only take a limited amount of damage. As the Riposte skill is a straight damaging skill the creature would take whatever the damage called against them would be, so long as the attack is successful. Damage Reductions and Absorptions still would be applied normally to counter act any damage from the Riposte.

There is no form of personal spell shield that can be used against a Riposte Strike.

The projectile weapons skills, Bow, Crossbow, Thrown Weapons and Firearms, cannot be used to learn the Riposte skill and the Riposte skill cannot be used with these weapons.

Certain attacks have an "Unparriable" portion to their tagline. Those attacks cannot be Parried or Blocked, but they can be Dodged or Evaded.

The player may purchase this skill once after gaining four (4) levels of the Weapon Damage skill and other prerequisites. They may then purchase this skill each time they gain an additional four (4) levels of the Weapon Damage skill. Thus, it is possible for a player with Weapon Damage +13 to have 3.

Lethal Strike

Prerequisites: Weapon skill, Weapon Damage skill (one per +5), Parry, Critical Strike, and Riposte Strike.

The Lethal Strike skill is a special attack skill which allows the character to call a damaging attack which unless properly defended against will cause the defender to fall and be placed at Lethally Wounded status.

To launch this, attack the character must say at minimum “Lethal Strike” plus the weapon damage type, and if needed the hand which the strike is coming from. This attack is only good for the one (1) swing in which it is made.

For example, it would be feasible to hear, “Lethal Strike Magic, Right Hand” from a player using a magical weapon for the attack. The skill is used up whether it is successful or not at that time.

The strike must land on the player and make contact with their person. If physically blocked by a weapon or shield the attack is used up. Also, there are spell shields which will defend against this attack, as well as skills such as Parry, Shield Block or Dodge skills.

Some creatures and even some characters can develop a natural defense against this attack. These Creatures will take damage based on their Master Fortify Skill.

The player may purchase this skill once after gaining five (5) levels of the Weapon Damage skill and other prerequisites. They may then purchase this skill each time they gain an additional five (5) levels of the Weapon Damage skill. Thus, it is possible for a player with Weapon Damage +13 to have 2.

Shield Bash

Prerequisites: Shield Block, Shield Use Skill, Weapon Damage (one per +3)

The Shield Bash skill is a special defensive skill, which can be used to harm an attacker.

A Shield Bash may be used to stop any attack a Shield Block would, but also has the bonus of possibly doing damage back to the attacker. (See the Shield Block skill for a list of possible attacks stopped.)

In addition, the Shield Bash skill allows the user to return Crushing damage equal to 2 for a Buckler or Medium Shield, or 3 for Tower Shield plus his / her Weapon Damage and Enhanced Strength skills to an attacker if possible, thus a melee attack which is blocked by a Shield Bash where the user has a Medium Shield, Weapon Damage of +5 and Enhanced Strength of +1 would do 8 points of physical damage to the attacker and block the melee attack. (This skill can only cause damage if the attacker is within “arms reach” of the defender, but the user doesn’t actually strike the attacker with the shield.)

To use this skill, the character would simply state “Shield Bash, <amount of Shield, Weapon Damage and Enhanced Strength skill> crushing” loudly enough for all those including the attacker to hear. The skill is used up whether it is successful or not at that time.

Example would be the above defender blocking an incoming attack would state loudly “Shield Bash 8 crushing”. The Shield Bash may be couple with certain Shield Block spells as well.

Certain attacks have an "Unparriable" portion to their tagline Those attacks cannot be Parried or Blocked, but they can be Dodged or Evaded.

The player may purchase this skill once after gaining three (3) levels of the Weapon Damage skill and other prerequisites. They may then purchase this skill each time they gain an additional three (3) levels of the Weapon Damage skill. Thus, it is possible for a player with Weapon Damage +13 to have 4.

Enhanced Strength

Prerequisites: None

This skill may be bought multiple times, limited only by the character's profession and race.

Each time this skill is purchased allows the player to call an additional point of damage with any melee or thrown weapon they have skill in.

It is rumored there are special bows and crossbows that can take advantage of a user's strength as well, but it normally does not apply.

Strength does not apply to firearms.

For example, if the player purchased the Enhanced Strength skill twice they would add +2 damage when using a dagger, thus calling 3 normal, 1 base and +2 for this skill.

Furthermore, the Enhanced Strength skill always applies to both hands, thus right or left. Such that if a player has the skills to use two weapons, and is fighting with two daggers, and has only Enhanced Strength +2 they would call 3 normal when striking with daggers in both hands. (1 base +2 enhanced strength)

This skill, unlike all the damage skills, does not count for the prerequisites for the more advanced attacks such as Critical Strike.

This skill will stack with any other strength enhancing skills, talents or natural abilities such as an Ogrekin's natural +1 Strength. It is limited by the character's profession. Please note certain races can bypass the Enhanced strength limitation of a profession such as Orc blood and Ogrekin.

Enhanced strength may be used in other ways as well.

Confinements may be broken in the following manner:

+1 Strength may break all natural confining effects and taglines such as spider webs, on a 10 count, and a +2 Enhanced Strength will allow breaking them on a 5 count.

Enhanced Strength will allow a character to break confining magics of a level equal to or less than their total Enhanced Strength value on a 10 count, (i.e. Breaking 1, Breaking 2...) If their total Enhanced Strength score is double the spell level, then they can break the spell on a 5 count. For example, a Warrior with an Enhanced Strength of +5 and a +1 Strength Amulet would be able to break 6th level or less confining magics on a 10 count and 3rd level or less confining magics on a 5 count.

Beings with Enhanced Strength may also perform certain feats such as running with a being rather than dragging them.

This is done as follows:

+1 Strength: Small creatures such as Hobbling and Faeries.

+2 Strength: Human Sized Creatures such as Dwarves, Elves and Men.

+3 Strength: Large Humanoids such as Minotaur and Ogrekin.

+4 Strength: Huge Humanoids / Lesser Constructs such as Full Ogres and Straw Golems

+5 Strength: Giant Humanoids / Greater Constructs such as Hill giants and Iron Golems.

A character that has Enhanced Strength may use it to throw a subdued or willing Human-sized or smaller creature 10 feet + 5 feet for each level of Enhanced Strength beyond the first. For larger creatures, having the base Enhanced Strength necessary to run with them will allow the character to throw them 10 feet, plus an additional 5 feet per Enhanced Strength beyond the minimum.

For Example: An Orc-Blooded Warrior with a total of +5 Strength could throw a Human or lesser sized creature 30 feet (10+5x4), a Large Humanoid 20 feet (10+(5-3) x5), a Huge Humanoid 15 feet (10+(5-4) x5), and a Giant Humanoid 10 feet.

There are other role-playing applications as well as adventure applications in which Enhanced Strength may be used. Such as bashing in a wooden door or moving a boulder blocking a passage. Always remember safety first and that the Staff/Story member running an adventure has final judgment on such uses of Enhanced Strength.

Sneak Attacks

Sneak Attacks are those skills which allow for the additional damage and special attacks used in weapon-oriented combat, when the attacker has the advantage of being physically behind the target.

To define being behind a target, if the aerial view of the attacker was the same as a clock, with 12 O'clock being forward the attacker must be between 4:30 O'clock and 7:30 O'clock, and the weapon must also strike the target within that area. This is the rear 90 degrees, or rear quarter, centered directly behind the target. This determination will rely on the good sportsmanship of both the target and attacker. Eviscerate is an exception to this requirement.

These skills are always coupled with a Weapon skill.

Ambush

Prerequisites: Weapon skill

This skill may be limited only by the character's profession.

When this skill is purchased it allows the player to stun a target with a weapon skill it is being coupled with. The Attacker must be striking the target from behind. An Ambush must also strike the back of the target from below the neck to above the waistline.

This skill may be coupled with the Enhanced Strength skill to help aid it in by-passing a targets Damage Reduction (DR) by being equal to or higher than the target's DR.

The Attacker must strike the target from behind while stating "Ambush" plus any Enhanced Strength modifiers the attacker may have. Thus, an Orc Blood Rogue with a +5 Enhanced Strength score would state "Ambush +5 Strength"

A stunned target cannot move and is unconscious for a duration of one (1) minute. Any harm inflicted on the target during that time will awaken the target normally. In addition, if the target is subjected to a Killing blow, the target will awaken on "Killing One" and be considered defending themselves from the Killing attack.

This Skill does no actual damage to the target it only incapacitates them.

Some creatures and even some characters can develop a natural defense against this attack. These creatures will be unaffected by an Ambush unless their defenses can somehow be overcome.

Backstab Damage

Prerequisites: Weapon skill

This skill may be bought multiple times, limited only by the character's profession.

Each time this skill is purchased it allows the player to call an additional point of damage with any weapon skill the user has when striking from behind the target as defined above, if the weapon can benefit from Backstab Damage (See weapon chart for details)

For example, if the player purchased the Backstab Damage skill twice and had the Simple Weapons skill, they would add +2 damage when using a dagger and striking the target from behind, thus calling 3 normal, 1 base and +2 for this skill.

Furthermore, the Backstab Damage applies equally to both hands. For example, if the player purchased the Backstab Damage skill twice and had the Simple Weapons and Dual Wield Fighting Style skills, they would add +2 damage when using a dagger for each hand. Thus calling 3 normal; 1 base and +2 for this skill, with both the right-hand dagger and the left-hand dagger, when striking from behind the target. Though if the attacker somehow got in front of the target they would only be calling 1 normal.

This skill may be coupled with the Weapon Damage skill and will stack with that skill.

For example, if the player purchased the Weapon Damage (Both) skill twice, they would add +2 damage when using a dagger for each hand, and if they also then purchased Backstab Damage +2 they would when attacking from behind be calling 5 normal; 1 base and +2 for the Backstab Damage skill, and +2 for the Weapon Damage (Both) skill with both the right-hand dagger and the left-hand dagger. Once again though if the target somehow managed to get the attacker in front of them the damage would drop to 3 normal (1 base +2 Weapon Damage (Both) skill, and +0 Backstab Damage for being out of position.)

This skill is the prerequisites for the more advanced strikes attacks such as the Assassinate, Feint and Eviscerate skills.

This skill is not used to purchase any of the Combat Proficiency skills.

Assassinate

Prerequisites: Backstab Damage (One per +3), Dodge/Intercept.

The Assassinate skill is a special attack skill which allows the character to call a damaging attack from behind a target which unless properly defended against will cause the defender to fall and be placed at Lethally Wounded status. This attack can only be made if the attacker is behind the target as defined previously.

To launch this, attack the character must say at minimum "Assassinate" plus the weapon damage type, and if needed the hand which the strike is coming from. This attack is only good for the one (1) swing in which it is made.

For example, it would be feasible to hear, "Assassinate Magic" from a player using a magical weapon for the attack. The skill is used up whether it is successful or not at that time.

The strike must land on the player and make contact with their person. If physically blocked by a weapon or shield, the attack fails and is used up. Also, there are spell shields (Mage's Armor of the Spirit, Armor of the Spirit, Rune of Impenetrable Armor) which will defend against this attack, as well as the Cheat Death, Evade, Resolute Defense, Dodge, or Feint skills.

Some creatures and even some characters can develop a natural defense against this attack. These creatures will take damage based on their Master Fortify skill.

The player may purchase this skill once after gaining three (3) levels of the Backstab Damage skill and other prerequisites. They may then purchase this skill each time they gain an additional three (3) levels of the Backstab Damage skill. Thus, it is possible for a player with Backstab Damage +13 to have 4.

Feint Attack

Prerequisites: Backstab Damage (one per. +4), Assassinate.

The Feint skill is a special attack skill which allows the character to Dodge (as described in the skill of the same name) an incoming attack while also calling a damaging attack which unless properly defended against will cause the defender to take the Feint Attack user's normal weapon damage, including Backstab Damage. This skill cannot be augmented by another ability like Lethal Strike or Eviscerate.

To launch this attack, the character must say at minimum "Feint Attack" plus the weapon damage and type. This attack is only good for the one (1) Dodge in which it is made.

For example, it would be feasible to hear, "Feint Attack 12 Magic" from a player using a magical weapon for the attack.

The strike must dodge an incoming melee attack on the player and have been able to make physical contact with the initial attacker. If blocked by any of the Parry, Block or Dodge skills, the Feint's damage will be nullified

There are certain limitations to the damage that can be caused by this attack. The first is obviously the damage which the player would normally call with Backstab Damage, such that if a player would normally call "5 normal" from the front, but "10 normal" from behind they would be able to call "Feint Attack 10 normal" when using this skill. The skill is used up whether it is successful or not at that time.

The second would be the maximum that the weapon itself can call, thus a dagger with its maximum of 15 damage from the front but 40 from backstab would only ever be able to call 40 points of damage from an attack when using this skill.

Some creatures and even some characters can develop a natural defense against certain attacks such as Lethal Strike, where in they only take a limited amount of damage. As the Feint Attack skill is a straight damaging skill the creature would take whatever the damage called against them would be, so long as the attack is successful. Damage Reductions and Absorptions still would be applied normally to counter act any damage from the Feint Attack.

There is no form of personal spell shield which can be used against a Feint Attack.

The projectile weapons skills Bow, Crossbow, Thrown Weapons and Firearms, cannot be used to learn the Feint Attack skill and the Feint Attack skill cannot be used with these weapons.

Certain attacks have an "Unavoidable" portion to their tagline Those attacks cannot be Dodged or Evaded, but they can be Intercepted.

The player may purchase this skill once after gaining four (4) levels of the Backstab Damage skill and the other prerequisites. They may then purchase this skill each time they gain an additional four (+4) levels of the Backstab Damage skill. Thus, it is possible for a player with Backstab Damage +9 to have 2.

Eviscerate

Prerequisites: Backstab Damage (One per. +5), Feint Attack.

The Eviscerate skill is a special attack skill, which allows the character to call a damaging attack which unless properly defended against will cause the defender to take quadruple (x4) the attackers sneak attack damage. This attack is an exception to the sneak attack targeting rules and can be called from any position.

To launch this, attack the character must say at minimum "Eviscerate" plus the weapon damage and type. This attack is only good for the one (1) swing in which it is made and is used whether it is successful or not.

For example, it would be feasible to hear, "Eviscerate 24 Magic" from a player using a magical weapon for the attack.

The strike must land on the player and make contact with their person. If physically blocked by a weapon or shield the attack is used up. Also, any of the Parry, Block or Dodge skills, will defend against this attack, if the target is aware of the attacker's presence.

There are certain limitations to the damage that can be caused by this attack. The first is obviously the damage which the player would normally call, such that if a player would normally call "5 normal" they would be able to call up to "Eviscerate 20 normal" when using this skill. The skill is used up whether it is successful or not at that time.

The second would be the maximum potential of the weapon. The damage from this skill can never exceed a weapon's maximum potential damage regardless of the combination used with this weapon, such that a player who calls 40s from behind with a dagger would still be limited to 150 points of damage with this skill.

Even if the player had a magical weapon which allows double (x2) damage against certain creatures, this skill is still limited to the weapon's maximum potential damage.

Some creatures and even some characters can develop a natural defense against certain attacks such as Lethal Strike, where in they only take a limited amount of damage. As the Eviscerate skill is a straight damaging skill the creature would take whatever the damage called against them would be, so long as the attack is successful. There is no form of personal spell shield which can be used against an Eviscerate.

The player may purchase this skill once after gaining five (5) levels of the Backstab Damage skill and other prerequisites. They may then purchase this skill each time they gain an additional five (5) levels of the Backstab Damage skill. Thus, it is possible for a player with Backstab Damage +13 to have 2.

Dodge / Intercept

Prerequisites: Backstab Damage (one per +2), Ambush.

A player may use his / her Dodge skill to get out of the way of any attack. Thus, they may dodge any spell, Strike or packet attack so long as they are conscious. It is generally considered good sportsmanship not to use a dodge if you are truly surprised by an attack or strike, but this determination is left to the defender.

Even Taglines such as the "Massive" tagline can successfully be defended against when using a Dodge. Even those attacks which have an Area of Effect such as "10 Fire 10-foot Radius" can be defended against using this skill. Dodge is the ultimate get out of trouble free skill.

To use the Dodge skill, the player simply needs to state "Dodge" loudly enough for those around including the original attacker to hear.

Alternatively, a Dodge skill may be used instead as an Intercept skill, to take on an attack which would have otherwise struck another being. To use the Intercept skill, the player must be within arm's reach of the original target of the attack and can reach out and touch the target stating "Intercept" loudly enough for those around the player including the attacker to hear. The attack is deemed to have successfully struck the interceptor, so facing doesn't matter in the case of an Assassinate or other Sneak Attack. After that, the interceptor may use a valid defense against the attack, other than Dodge, Evade, or Feint. For example, a Parry or Shield Block could not defend against an intercepted Assassinate but could defend against an intercepted Critical Strike. An applicable Spell Shield or Cheat death could be used against an intercepted Assassinate.

Certain attacks have an "Unavoidable" portion to their tagline. Those attacks cannot be Dodged or Evaded, but they can be Intercepted.

The player may purchase this skill once after gaining two levels of the Backstab Damage skill and the Ambush skill. They may then purchase this skill each time they gain an additional two (+2) levels of the Backstab Damage skill. Thus, it is possible for a player with Backstab Damage +9 to have 4. The player may purchase this skill once after gaining two levels of the Backstab Damage skill and the Ambush skill. They may then purchase this skill each time they gain an additional two (+2) levels of the Backstab Damage skill. Thus, it is possible for a player with Backstab Damage +9 to have 4.

Spell Levels

These are the spells which a player can cast.

A player must have a larger Primary column than Secondary, and a larger Secondary column than Tertiary. A character may never learn more than three schools of magic.

Spells columns themselves are limited by the profession chosen by the player and many professions can only ever learn one or two schools of magic.

Lastly, the ways to buy your spell column for schools of magic is dictated by your chosen profession. For example, a Sorcerer must learn their primary column in a 6 wide format thus getting out to 6 spells of each level, they can stop at six or then continue to their maximum.

Each profession has limits on how many if any spells they can learn to cast per day. For reference the basic Four (4) Column purchase order is included below.

The basic pattern would remain the same if it is a five (5), six (6), or seven (7) wide column. (i.e. 5,4,3,2,1 / 6,5,4,3,2,1 / or 7,6,5,4,3,2,1)

Once the Learning as columns are complete, additional columns are learned vertically. (i.e. 1,2,3,4,5,6,7,8,9, 1)

Production Skills

Production Skills are those needed to make items “In Play” which can prove useful to the player and others in the game.

All Production Skills follow a similar format, thus keeping consistency in the game.

There is the basic knowledge needed to start a production skill, such as Herbalism or Blacksmithing, then once a player has the basics he or she may then learn to become an Apprentice in a production type. They must gain Level Ten (10) in a production skill to be able to purchase Journeyman rank in that skill, if their race and profession allows, and they must then gain Level Twenty (20) in a production skill before they may purchase the Master rank skill in that form of Production, again if their race and/or Profession allows.

All Production Skills have Grand Master levels which are similar to Rituals and a Grand Master Recipe may take months to find all the needed components and gather the additional skills to create.

Production Skills are the “meat and drink” of the Crafter professions, but all professions can learn some amount of Production Skills.

Production Skills are primarily used between events, which is represented by the Production Check-In procedure. During Check-in at an event a character receives a number of Production Points to use based on their skills.

The Production Point total is equal to a multiplier based on skill rank in that production skill applied to the skill levels in that production skill. The skill ranks and multipliers are Apprentice at x1, Journeyman at x2, and Master at x3. A higher rank replaces the lower multiplier and is not in addition to it. The Grand Master skill rank does not provide an increased multiplier.

For example, a character with the Journeyman Jewel Crafter skill and 16 levels of Jewel Crafting would receive 32 (16x2) Production Points at check in.

Every Recipe, other than Grand Master Recipes, has a required Production Skill Rank, Production Point cost, Crown cost, and potentially required or optional components necessary to create them. At Check-in, a player may create, and receive the item tags for, any combination of Recipes, or multiples of the same Recipe, that they have the Recipes for as well as the Skill Ranks, Crowns and Components necessary to create, so long as the sum of the Production Point costs for those Recipes is less than or equal to their Production Point total for that skill.

First Aid

Prerequisites: None

This healing skill can be used to change a wounded persons Status to the next better Status with one minute (60 count) of use. Ex. “First Aid 1, First Aid 2,...”

Once First Aid has begun the wounded character resets their own count for the level they are at to zero.

Thus, a Lethally Wounded character could be brought back to Critically Wounded Status after one minute, and then from Critically Wounded Status to Bleeding Out with an additional minute of First Aid. First Aid may even be used to bring someone from Bleeding Out back to Healthy with exactly 1 hit point.

First Aid will not restore any additional hit points, beyond bring a character from Bleeding Out to Healthy with 1 hit point.

The character can also determine the status of a target, by placing a hand or packet on the shoulder of the target creature and stating, “First Aid, what is your status?” This will allow the character to determine if a willing / subdued target is Bleeding Out, Critically Wounded, Lethally Wounded, Dead, Petrified or even Paralyzed. It will also allow the character to determine how many hit points of damage the target has suffered. Though it will not tell the character what the present hit points of the target are, nor what the maximum hit points of the target is.

Note: If a player wishes to they may state their status by type rather than an exact amount. For example, they may state Full, Wounded, Hurt Badly, Lightly Injured and so on. Of course, when doing so this should be stated in a sportsman-like manner and never rudely.

This ability will not count hit points gained through magical means such as a Bless spell.

For example, if the target was at 45 hit points of 50 hit points, but had a 5 points magical bonus to hit points from a spell prior to taking a 10-point damaging attack the target would state “Down 5 hit points”

First Aid has no effect on characters at Dead Status. First Aid will not tell the character how many hit points a target has, nor will it allow the character to heal a target in any way other than from Bleeding Out Status to 1 hit point and Healthy.

This is one of the Prerequisites for the Surgery Production Skill.

Herbalism

Prerequisites: Read & Write

This is the basic skill which will allow a person to identify herbs and plants in the wild and their use for Elixirs, Poisons, Alchemies, Inks for Scribes or even in Surgery.

This skill will allow a character to determine if a vial is a Poison, Elixir or Alchemy, and even how powerful it may be (i.e. if it is an Apprentice, Journeyman or even a Master Recipe). It does not allow the user to detect that a poison has been used, such as determining if food, drink, or a blade has been poisoned.

This skill will not allow the Herbalist to know what a written recipe will produce, only what type the finished product is.

Herbalism is the primary starting skill for the Production Skills of Alchemy, Elixir Crafting, and Poisons, Scribe, and Surgery.

Blacksmithing

Prerequisites: Read & Write

This is the basic skill which will allow a person to identify raw materials and their use for Armorsmithing, Weaponsmithing, Jewel Crafting, and Engineering.

This skill will allow a character to determine if an item is an Armor, Weapon, Jewel or Engineering Contraption, and even how powerful it may be (i.e. if it is an Apprentice, Journeyman, or Master Recipe).

This skill will allow a character to determine if a mixture is a Wine, Brew, Distilled Spirit or Alcoholic Beverage, and even know what quality it is (i.e. if it is an Apprentice, Journeyman or even a Master Recipe).

This skill will not allow the Fermenter to know what a written recipe will produce, only what type the finished product is.

Fermenting is the primary starting skill for the Production Skills of Vinting, Distilling and Brewing.

Ink Making

Prerequisites: Read & Write

This is the basic skill which will allow a person to identify herbs, minerals, plants, and animals in the wild and their use in Inks for Scribes.

This skill will allow a character to determine if an Ink is useful to a Scribe, and even how powerful it may be (i.e. if it is an Apprentice, Journeyman or even a Master Recipe).

Ink Making is one of the required skills to learn to be a Scribe.

The Apprentice can create any Apprentice recipe that they learn and can also use up to any Journeyman recipe they may come across in its finished form.

An Apprentice gains one (1) Production Point for every level of Alchemy they have attained. For example, an Apprentice Alchemist with Alchemy Level 7 would have seven (7) production points which to create any Apprentice recipe he or she knows.

This skill will allow the Alchemist to know what a written Apprentice recipe is, as well as what the use of any finished product is.

Journeyman Alchemist

Prerequisites: Alchemy Level 10

This skill allows the character to begin to learn the more advanced techniques of Alchemy. It is the skill needed to purchase Alchemy Levels eleven (11) through twenty (20).

The Journeyman can create any Journeyman recipe that they learn and can also use up to any Master recipe they may come across in its finished form.

A Journeyman gains two (2) production points for every Level of Alchemy they have attained. For example, a Journeyman Alchemist with Alchemy Level 17 would have thirty-four (34) production points which to create any Apprentice or Journeyman recipes he or she knows.

This skill will allow the Alchemist to know what a written Journeyman recipe is, as well as what the use of any finished product is.

Master Alchemist

Prerequisites: Alchemy Level 20

This skill allows the character to begin to learn the most advanced techniques of Alchemy. It is the skill needed to purchase Alchemy Levels twenty-one (21) through thirty (30).

The Master can create any Master recipe that they learn and can also use any Alchemy recipe they may come across in its finished form.

A Master gains three (3) production points for every Level of Alchemy they have attained. For example, a Master Alchemist with Alchemy Level 27 would have eighty-one (81) production points which to create any Apprentice, Journeyman, or Master recipe he or she knows.

This skill will allow the Alchemist to know what a written Master recipe is, as well as what the use of any finished product is.

Alchemy Levels One (1) through Ten (10)

Prerequisites: Apprentice Alchemist

This skill is used to determine how many production points an Alchemist has per event to craft recipes.

An Apprentice Alchemist gains one (1) production point for every time a Level in this skill is purchased. The Journeyman Alchemist gains two (2) production points for every Level of Alchemist purchased. Finally, a Master gains three (3) production points for each Level of Alchemist they have.

Alchemy Levels Eleven (11) through Twenty (20)

Surgery

This Production Skill allows the character to save lives on the field. It can heal or enhance others around them and though not as common or powerful as magical healing, it can be performed at any time and many a Healer has learned this skill for when his or her spells have run out. Additionally, Surgery can come in multiple forms; healing, strengthening and even protecting their users, through its uses.

Apprentice Surgeon

Prerequisites: Herbalism & First Aid

This skill allows the character to begin to learn the basics of Surgery. It is a basic skill needed to purchase Surgery Levels one (1) through ten (10).

The Apprentice can create any Apprentice recipe that they learn and can also use up to any Journeyman Surgery recipe they may come across in its finished form.

An Apprentice gains one (1) production point for every Level of Surgery they have attained. For example, an Apprentice Surgeon with Surgery Level 7 would have seven (7) production points which to create any Apprentice recipe he or she knows.

This skill will allow the Surgeon to know what a written Apprentice recipe is, as well as what the use of any finished product is.

An Apprentice Surgeon may also practice Triage, which is like First Aid but used on multiple targets simultaneously. An Apprentice may perform Triage on up to two (2) beings at a time. All beings must stay within 10 feet of the Apprentice Surgeon during the triage, or restart their counts.

This skill will allow the character to determine a willing or subdued target's Health Status. These include Unconscious, Bleeding Out, Critically Wounded, Lethally Wounded, Dead, Petrified, and Paralyzed among others.

Furthermore, for a target at Healthy status, the character can determine the health level of a target, by placing a hand or packet on the shoulder of the target creature and stating "Triage". In this manner, the character can determine how many hit points of damage the target has suffered. Though it will not tell the character what the present hit point value nor the maximum hit point value of the target is.

This healing skill can be used to change wounded targets' Health Status to the next better Health Status with one minute of attention (60 count).

Once Triage has begun the wounded character(s) resets their own count for their wound level to zero (0).

Thus, up to two (2) Lethally Wounded characters could be brought back to Critically Wounded after one minute, and then from Critically Wounded to Bleeding Out with an additional minute of Triage. Triage may even be used to bring someone from Bleeding Out back to Healthy with 1 hit point.

Triage has no effect on characters at Dead status.

Triage cannot be used to grant a target hit points any way other than raising them from Bleeding Out status to 1 hit point, and consciousness.

For every level of Surgery an Apprentice has he or she may heal in the field ten (10) hit point of damage done to a living being per day. Up to a maximum per day equal to their total potential of healing skill. Thus, an Apprentice with Surgery Level 7 could heal up to seventy (70) hit points of damage per day. If he or she healed one being for fifty-five (55) hit points and another came in down twenty (20) hit points the Apprentice could only heal fifteen (15) hit points to that being leaving it still down five (5) hit points. Each hit point restored in this manner takes a five (5) count.

A Surgeon cannot perform this type of healing while maintaining Triage on any others.

Furthermore, for a target at Healthy status, the character can determine the health level of a target, by placing a hand or packet on the shoulder of the target creature and stating "Triage". In this manner, the character can determine how many hit points of damage the target has suffered. Though it will not tell the character what the present hit point value nor the maximum hit point value of the target is.

This healing skill can be used to change wounded targets' Health Status to the next better Health Status with one minute of attention (60 count).

Thus, up to four (4) Lethally Wounded characters could be brought back to Critically Wounded after one minute, and then from Critically Wounded to Bleeding Out with an additional minute of Triage. Triage may even be used to bring someone from Bleeding Out back to Healthy with 1 hit point.

This skill will allow the character to determine a willing or subdued target's Health Status. These include Unconscious, Bleeding Out, Critically Wounded, Lethally Wounded, Dead, Petrified, and Paralyzed among others.

Armorsmithing

This Production Skill allows the character to make, repair, and even enhance armors and shields used in the game.

Apprentice Armorsmith

Prerequisites: Blacksmithing

This skill allows the character to begin to learn the basics of Armorsmithing. It is a basic skill needed to purchase Armorsmithing Levels one (1) through ten (10).

The Apprentice can create any Apprentice recipe that they learn and can also use up to any Journeyman recipe they may come across in its finished form.

An Apprentice gains one (1) production point for every Level of Armorsmithing they have attained. For example, an Apprentice Armorsmith with Armorsmithing Level 7 would have seven (7) production points which to create any Apprentice recipe he or she knows.

This skill will allow the Armorsmith to know what a written Apprentice recipe is, as well as what the use of any finished product is.

With this skill, the character can determine the status of a target's armor by placing a hand or packet on the shoulder of the target creature and stating, "Armor Check". In this manner, the character can determine how many armor points of damage the target has suffered. It will tell the character what maximum armor points of the target's armor is, but not what the maximum number of armor points the target can wear due to race, profession or skills such as Wear Extra Armor or Improved Armor.

This ability will not count armor points gained through magical means such as a Shield spell.

For Example, if the target was at 45 armor points of 50 armor points, but had a 5 points magical bonus to armor points from a spell prior to taking a 10-point damaging attack the target would state "Down 5 armor points"

An Armorsmith can also tell if an armor has been enhanced, such as if it has been reinforced or has a Damage Reduction of some type through Armorsmithing.

For every level of Armorsmithing an Apprentice has he or she may repair in the field ten (10) armor points of damage done to an armor per day. Up to a maximum per day equal to their total. Thus, an Apprentice with Armorsmithing Level 7 could repair up to seventy (70) armor points of damage per day. If he or she repaired one set for fifty (50) armor points and another came in down twenty-two (22) armor points the Apprentice could only repair twenty (20) armor points to that damaged set of armor leaving it still down two (2) armor points. Each point of armor repaired this way requires a five (5) count.

Journeyman Armorsmith

Prerequisites: Armorsmithing Level 10

This skill allows the character to begin to learn the more advanced techniques of Armorsmithing. It is the skill needed to purchase Armorsmithing Levels eleven (11) through twenty (20).

The Journeyman can create any Journeyman recipe that they learn and can also use up to any Master recipe they may come across in its finished form.

A Journeyman gains two (2) production points for every Level of Armorsmithing they have attained. For example, a Journeyman Armorsmith with Armorsmithing Level 17 would have thirty-four (34) production points which to create any Apprentice or Journeyman recipes he or she knows.

This skill will allow the Armorsmith to know what a written Journeyman recipe is, as well as what the use of any finished product is.

For every level of Armorsmithing a Journeyman has, he or she may repair in the field twenty (20) armor points of damage done to an armor per day. Up to a maximum per day equal to their total. Thus, a Journeyman with Armorsmithing Level 17 could repair up to three hundred forty (340) armor points of damage per day. If he or she repaired one set for 150 armor points and another came in down twenty (200) armor points the Journeyman could only repair 190 armor points to that damaged set of armor leaving it still down ten (10) armor points. Each point of armor repaired in this way requires a five (5) count.

Master Armorsmith

Prerequisites: Armorsmithing Level 20

This skill allows the character to begin to learn the most advanced techniques of Armorsmithing. It is the skill needed to purchase Armorsmithing Levels twenty-one (21) through thirty (30).

The Master can create any Master recipe that they learn and can also use any recipe they may come across in its finished form.

A Master gains three (3) production points for every Level of Armorsmithing they have attained. For example, a Master Armorsmith with Armorsmithing Level 27 would have eighty-one (81) production points which to create any Apprentice, Journeyman, or Master recipes he or she knows.

This skill will allow the Armorsmith to know what a written Master recipe is, as well as what the use of any finished product is.

Furthermore, for every level of Armorsmithing a Master has he or she may repair in the field thirty (30) armor point of damage done to an armor per day. Up to a maximum per day equal to their total. Thus, a Master with Armorsmithing Level

27 could repair up to eight hundred ten (810) armor points of damage per day. Each point of armor repaired in this way requires a five (5) count.

Vinting

This Production Skill allows the character to make, even enhance Wines of all types, Reds, Whites, Ice Wines and so on. Engineering

This Production Skill allows the character to make, repair, and even enhance Engineering items, such as Constructs, Firearms, Mechanical Traps, and Siege Weapons used in the game.

An Engineer may repair a shattered or broken non-magical, standard quality firearm. It takes 10 minutes of their time, and does require they be at an Engineering station, but they may do this an unlimited number of times.

As the Engineer gets better they can fix higher quality weapons in this way.

An Apprentice may fix an Apprentice Firearm.

A Journeyman may fix a Journeyman Firearm.

A Master may fix a Master Firearm.

Grandmaster I and beyond repairs require a recipe and components.

Apprentice Engineer

Prerequisites: Blacksmithing

This skill allows the character to begin to learn the basics of Engineering. It is a basic skill needed to purchase Engineering Levels one (1) through ten (10).

The Apprentice can create any Apprentice recipe that they learn and can also use up to any Journeyman item they may come across in its finished form.

An Apprentice gains one (1) production point for every Level of Engineering they have attained. For example, an Apprentice Engineer with Engineering Level 7 would have seven (7) production points which to create any Apprentice recipe he or she knows.

This skill will allow the Engineer to know what a written Apprentice recipe is, as well as what the use of any finished product is.

With this skill, the character can determine the status of a Construct's hit points & armor points, by placing a hand or packet on the shoulder of the target creature and stating "Engineering Check". In this manner, the character can determine how many hit points and armor points of damage the target has suffered. It will tell the character what maximum hit & armor points of the target's is, but not what the maximum number of armor points the target can wear due to magic or Augmentations. (i.e. This ability will not count armor points gained through magical means such as a Shield spell.)

For example, if the target was at 45 hit points and 50 armor points, but had a 5 points magical bonus to armor points from a spell prior to taking a 10-point damaging attack the target would state "Down 5 armor points"

An Engineer can also tell if a Construct has been enhanced, such as if it has been reinforced or has a damage reduction of some type through Engineering.

For every level of Engineering an Apprentice has he or she may repair in the field ten (10) points of damage done to a construct per day. Up to a maximum per day equal to their total. Thus, an Apprentice with Engineering Level 7 could repair up to seventy (70) points of damage per day. If he or she repaired one construct for fifty (50) points and another came in having taken thirty (30) points of damage the Apprentice could only repair twenty (20) armor points to that damaged construct; leaving it still down ten (10) armor points. Each point repaired in this manner takes a five (5) count.

Journeyman Engineer

Prerequisites: Engineering Level 10

This skill allows the character to begin to learn the more advanced techniques of Engineering. It is the skill needed to purchase Engineering Levels eleven (11) through twenty (20).

The Journeyman can create any Journeyman recipe that they learn and can also use up to any Master recipe they may come across in its finished form.

A Journeyman gains two (2) production points for every Level of Engineering they have attained. For example, a Journeyman Engineer with Engineering Level 17 would have thirty-four (34) production points which to create any Apprentice or Journeyman recipes he or she knows.

This skill will allow the Engineer to know what a written Journeyman recipe is, as well as what the use of any finished product is.

Furthermore, for every level of Engineering a Journeyman has he or she may repair in the field twenty (20) Hit or Armor points of damage done to a Construct per day. Up to a maximum per day equal to their total. Thus, a Journeyman with Engineering Level 17 could repair up to three hundred forty (340) points of damage per day. If he or she repaired one construct for one hundred fifty (150) points and another came in down two hundred (200) points the Journeyman could only repair one hundred ninety (190) points to that damaged Construct leaving it still down ten (10) point. Each point repaired this way takes a five (5) count.

Master Engineer

Prerequisites: Engineering Level 20

This skill allows the character to begin to learn the most advanced techniques of Engineering. It is the skill needed to purchase Engineering Levels twenty-one (21) through thirty (30).

The Master can create any Master recipe that they learn and can also use any recipe they may come across in its finished form.

A Master gains three (3) production points for every Level of Engineering they have attained. For example, a Master Engineer with Engineering Level 27 would have eighty-one (81) production points which to create any Apprentice, Journeyman, or Master recipes he or she knows.

This skill will allow the Engineer to know what a written Master recipe is, as well as what the use of any finished product is.

Furthermore, for every level of Engineering a Master has he or she may repair in the field thirty (30) hit or armor points of damage done to a Construct per day. Up to a maximum per day equal to their total. Thus, a Master with Engineering Level 27 could repair up to eight hundred ten (810) points of damage per day. If he or she repaired one set for seven hundred (700) points and another came in down two hundred (200) points the Master could only repair one hundred ten (110) points to that damaged Construct leaving it still down ninety (90) points. Each point of armor repaired this way requires a five (5) count.

Engineering Levels One (1) through Ten (10)

Prerequisites: Apprentice Engineer

This skill is used to determine how many production points an Engineer has per event to craft recipes.

The Apprentice Engineer gains one (1) production point for every time a Level in this skill is purchased. The Journeyman Engineer gains two (2) production points for every Level of Engineering purchased. Finally, A Master gains three (3) production points for each Level of Engineering they have.

Engineering Levels Eleven (11) through Twenty (20)

Prerequisites: Journeyman Engineer

This skill is used to determine how many production points an Engineer has per event to craft recipes.

The Journeyman Engineer gains two (2) production points for every Level of Engineering purchased. A Master gains three (3) production points for each Level of Engineering they have.

Engineering Levels Twenty-One (21) through Thirty (30)

Prerequisites: Master Engineer

This skill is used to determine how many production points an Engineer has per event to craft recipes.

The Master Engineer gains three (3) skill points for each Level of Engineering they have.

Grand Master Engineering I

Prerequisites: Engineering Level 30

This skill allows the Engineer to decipher Grand Master Engineering Recipes of the first degree.

The Engineer may also read other Grand Master Engineering Recipes but may not create any item of higher degree than the first level.

Note: These recipes will have many components to them; some may require not only physical materials to complete, but certain knowledge, such as Lores or Crafts. Even physical requirements such as Enhanced Strength or a belonging to a particular race or profession are not uncommon

Grand Master Engineering II

Prerequisites: Grand Master Engineering Level I

This skill allows the Engineer to decipher Grand Master Engineering Recipes of the second degree.

The Engineer may also read other Grand Master Engineering Recipes but may not create any item of higher degree than the second level.

Note: These recipes will have many components to them; some may require not only physical materials to complete, but certain knowledge, such as Lores or Crafts. Even physical requirements such as Enhanced Strength or a belonging to a particular race or profession are not uncommon.

Grand Master Engineering III

Prerequisites: Grand Master Engineering Level II

This skill allows the Engineer to decipher Grand Master Engineering Recipes of the third degree.

The Engineer may also read other Grand Master Engineering Recipes but may not create any item of higher degree than the third level.

Note: These recipes will have many components to them; some may require not only physical materials to complete, but certain knowledge, such as Lores or Crafts. Even physical requirements such as Enhanced Strength or a belonging to a particular race or profession are not uncommon.

Grand Master Engineering IV

Prerequisites: Grand Master Engineering Level III

This skill allows the Engineer to decipher Grand Master Engineering Recipes of the forth degree.

The Engineer may also read other Grand Master Engineering Recipes but may not create any item of higher degree than the forth level.

Note: These recipes will have many components to them; some may require not only physical materials to complete, but certain knowledge, such as Lores or Crafts. Even physical requirements such as Enhanced Strength or a belonging to a particular race or profession are not uncommon.

This skill allows the Engineer to decipher Grand Master Engineering Recipes of the highest or Fifth degree.

The Engineer may also read other Grand Master Engineering Recipes, they may create true items of magnificent and there in no higher level than the fifth degree of Engineering.

Note: These recipes will have many components to them; some may require not only physical materials to complete, but certain knowledge, such as Lores or Crafts. Even physical requirements such as Enhanced Strength or a belonging to a particular race or profession are not uncommon.

Firearms

An Engineer's weapon of choice is often a firearm of some sort. The following skills are only open to those who have at minimum learned to be a Blacksmith.

These weapons must be approved by a Marshall, and will have strict guidelines as to what shapes and even what brands can be used of soft projectile toys.

The damage base and type of damage (i.e. Fire, Body, Massive...) are all determined by what type of firearm is being used, and whether it is an Apprentice, Journeyman, Master or even Grand Master Engineering Weapon.

Flintlock Pistol

Prerequisites: Blacksmithing

The Flintlock Pistol skill allows the character to use a hand size flintlock & bullets in combat. Regardless of style, a flintlock must be less than 25lbs in firing power. The bullets must be completely foam, and every event the flintlock and its bullets must be inspected and pass a safety check.

The Flintlock Pistol skill may be coupled with the Firearm Damage skill so that the user may call additional damage when using his/her flintlock.

The use of Flintlocks is allowed for any profession which meets the Engineering requirements, even Knight & Scholar professions.

Flintlock Musket

Prerequisites: Blacksmithing

The Flintlock Musket Skill allows the character to use a rifle size flintlock & bullets in combat. Regardless of style, a flintlock must be less than 25lbs in firing power. The bullets must be completely foam, and every event the flintlock and its bullets must be inspected and pass a safety check.

The Flintlock Musket skill may be coupled with the Firearm Damage skill so that the user may call additional damage when using his/her flintlock.

The use of the flintlock is allowed for any profession which meets the Engineering requirements, even Knight & Scholar professions.

Weapon Master – Firearms

Prerequisites: Apprentice Engineering

The Weapon Master – Firearms skill allows the character to use any firearm in combat, effectively combining the Flintlock Pistol and Flintlock Musket skills all into one Master skill.

All weapon requirements and restrictions still apply as listed in the individual skill descriptions above.

Any weapon used must meet the safety standards of Mythic Adventures, and pass a safety check every event before it may be used.

The Weapon Master - Firearms skill may be coupled with the Firearms Damage skill so that the user may call additional damage when using his/her flintlocks.

The use of Weapon Master - Firearms is allowed for any profession which meets the Engineering requirements, even Knight & Scholar professions.

Note: Unlike most Weapon skills, The Weapon Master – Firearms skill only allows the Firearms damage skill to be applied to itself, and therefore cannot be used to enhance the damage of any other Melee or Missile Weapons

Like all projectiles regardless of how much damage someone learns Weapon Master - Firearms cannot be used to learn or use the Riposte or Feint skills.

Firearms Damage

Prerequisites: Flintlock Weapon skill

This skill must be purchased with the designator Left, Right or for some characters, Both.

This skill may be bought multiple times, with a limit of +20 for every character. All purchased levels apply to any Flintlock Weapon skills the player has purchased for their character.

Thus, the maximum potential of anyone for special attacks is Eight (8) Critical Strikes and Four (4) Lethal Strikes.

Example: If you have Firearms Damage (Left) +2 and Weapon Master – Firearms you would add +2 damage to any of the weapons listed in those skills when using your left hand.

Each time this skill is purchased allows the player to call one (1) additional point of damage with any firearm skill the character has. For example, if the player purchased the Firearms Damage (Right) skill twice and had the Flintlock Pistol skill, they would add +2 damage when using a Pistol, in their right hand, thus calling 8 puncturing, 6 base and +2 for this skill. (i.e. For use with an Apprentice Flintlock Pistol)

The Firearms Damage skill only applies to the hand chosen at time of purchase, thus right or left. Such that if a player has the skills to use two weapons and is fighting with two pistols but has only purchased Firearms Damage +2 in the right hand and none in the left hand they would call 8 puncturing when shooting the right-hand pistol, but 6 puncturing when shooting with the left. (6 base +2 right hand/ 6 base +0 left hand)

The Elven, Eldar, and Jal’Khandian races, the Duelist and Rogue professions, and the Order of the Azure Rose prestige group have the option to purchase the Firearms Damage skill in both hands simultaneously instead of left or right. These levels are added to any existing left or right hand damage as necessary and to determine the maximum number of times the Firearms Damage skill can be purchased. Strikes purchased for both hands can be used in either hand.

This skill qualifies as a prerequisite for the more advanced strike attacks of Firearms Critical Strike and Firearms Lethal Strike.

A player may buy up each hand separately as they desire when using this skill such as buying +3 Firearms Damage in the right hand and +6 Firearms Damage in the left hand. Any Special Strikes would be governed by the number of Firearms Damage for that hand, and not over all Firearms Damage. Thus, in the above example the player could purchase 1 Firearms Critical Strike for his/her right hand and 2 for the left hand but would not yet qualify to purchase the Firearms Lethal Strike skill for either hand.

Finally, this skill only allows the players main hand damage to apply to any skill they have with a musket. For example, in the case of the player above who has +2 damage in the right hand and +4 damage in the left hand, they would only be able to apply the damage from their main hand, in this case the left, when using a musket. (i.e. When using a rifle (base8) they would call 12 (twelve) normal [8base +4 Firearms Damage (Left)])

Firearms Critical Strike

Prerequisites: Firearms Weapon skill, Firearms Damage (one per +3 damage).

The Firearms Critical Strike skill is a special attack skill, which allows the character to call a damaging attack which unless properly defended against will cause the defender to fall and be placed at the Critically Wounded status.

To launch this attack, the character must say at minimum “Critical Strike” plus the weapon damage type, and if needed the hand which the strike is coming from. This attack is only good for the one (1) swing in which it is made.

For example, it would be feasible to hear, “Critical Strike Magic, Right Hand” from a player using a magical weapon for the attack. The skill is used up whether it is successful or not at that time.

The strike must land on the player and contact their person. If physically blocked by shield the attack is used up with no effect. Also, there are spell shields which will defend against this attack, as well as any of the Parry, Block or Dodge skills.

Some creatures and even some characters can develop a natural defense against this attack. These characters will take damage based on their Master Fortify skill.

This skill cannot be used as a Parry.

Firearms Lethal Strike

Prerequisites: Firearms Weapon skill, Firearms Damage skill (one per +5), and Firearms Critical Strike.

The Firearms Lethal Strike skill is a special attack skill which allows the character to call a damaging attack which unless properly defended against will cause the defender to fall and be placed at Lethally Wounded status.

To launch this, attack the character must say at minimum “Lethal Strike” plus the weapon damage type, and if needed the hand which the strike is coming from. This attack is only good for the one (1) swing in which it is made.

For example, it would be feasible to hear, “Lethal Strike Magic, Right Hand” from a player using a magical weapon for the attack. The skill is used up whether it is successful or not at that time.

The strike must land on the player and contact their person. If physically blocked by a shield the attack is used up. Also, there are spell shields which will defend against this attack, as well as skills such as Lethal Parry, Shield Block or Dodge skills, though not the Critical Parry skill.

This skill may not be used as a Parry.

Lores and Crafts

Lores

Knowledge on a subject or matter can translate into power. Knowing information about one's enemies and one's friends has always been important, but so has knowledge on a great many subjects.

Lore skills allows a character to round out their education as it were and can but augment one's roleplaying and one's prowess when dealing with certain problems or dangers.

A Lore marked with [R] is restricted and a character may not start with the Greater Informational Lore, they may only purchase a single lesser lore from that group.

A member of a race may purchase the Greater Racial Lore that contains their race at character creation.

The exception is Ethereal Races lore. No one may start with Greater Information Lore: Ethereal Races, and only a member of an Ethereal Race may purchase a Lesser lore in that group.

The list of Greater Informational Lores and their Lesser Informational Lore subsets is as follows:

Racial Lores:

Ancient Races Lore[R]: (Elves, Eldar, Fairies and other Fey Races) Lesser Lores are Fairies, Eldar, Elves, Fey, and Trolls

Kingdoms of Man Lore[R]: (Humans) Lesser Lores will be Free Kingdom, Farseni, Volkonnar, Easterlings, Romanovi, the Ith, and the Gracean Empire

Ethereal Races Lore [R*]: (Daughters and Sons of Kyth, Djinn-born, Brotherhood Arcanum, Shadowvium) Each race is also available as a Lesser Lore. *

Goblinoid Races Lore [R]: (Orcs, Ogres, Goblins, Kobolds, Oni and their relations) Again each is available as a Lesser Lore.

Beast Races Lore [R]: (Jal'Khandian, Wolven, Ursoni, Minotaur, and so on) Each is also available as a Lesser Lore.

Knowledge Lores:

Planar Lore: (Life, Love, Purity, Harmony, Order, Discord, Strife, Corruption, Hate, and Death) Lesser Lores for each Plane are available.

Veil Lore [R]: (The Nexus, Ethereal, Outsiders, Shadow, Light, and Darkness) Lesser Lores exist for each of these.

Elemental Lore: (Fire, Earth, Water, and Air) Lesser Lores exist for each of these.

Mythical Creatures Lore [R]: (Dragons, Giants, Aberrations, Ents, Guardians, and Spirit beings) Each is available as a Lesser Lore

Nature Lore: (Forests, Deserts, Savanah, Tundra, Moors, and Mountains) Each is available as a Lesser Lore.

Constructs Lore [R]: (Golem, Homunculi, Mimics, and Animations) Each is available as a Lesser Lore

Undead Lore: (Skeletal, Spectral and Corporeal) Each is available as a Lesser Lore.

All Lores must be acquired by in game means and teaching unless purchased at character creation.

Informational Lores are broken into two categories Lesser and Greater. A Lesser Lore covers one race or type such as Elf Lore, or Spectral Undead Lore, a Greater Lore would cover a connected Group of Lores such as Ancient Races Lore or Undead Lore.

It is possible to upgrade a Lesser Lore to a Greater Lore, thus going from Jal'Khandian Lore to Beast Races Lore.

Trades, Gathering Crafts and Role-Playing Skills

Trades and Gathering Crafts are those skills which a character knows that may or may not have an in-game effect. This is often resolved by the Story team or Staff members. These skills are the filler between Lores and Production skills.

All Trade and Craft Skills may be purchased in Ranks up to five (5). Thus, someone with the Mining skill could purchase that skill five (5) times. If a use for the knowledge they have comes up, they might gather more information on a mineral deposit than someone who had only purchased the skill once and was thus at Mining rank one (1)

Gathering Crafts allow a character to receive material tags from the Production Table at check-in. The character may use the random chance bag or receive a fixed result based on the rank of the gathering skill. The random chance bag has range of success and failure, allowing one to do much better or worse than the fixed result.

Gathering Crafts and Trade skills can be used by the character to receive an income of crowns from the skill during check-in. If a Gathering skill is used to receive crowns, then it cannot also be used to receive item tags that the skill has access to. The number of crowns increase with the rank in the skill.

Rank 1 = 2 Crowns
Rank 2 = 5 Crowns
Rank 3 = 9 Crowns
Rank 4 = 14 Crowns
Rank 5 = 20 Crowns

Note: Staff may alter the availability of crowns and/or tags based on in game events. Mine collapse, drought, etc.

Role-Playing skills are those which allow the player to pick a skill which helps define and round out their character. Some are obvious such as Mountain Climbing, Belly Dancing, Cartography, or Riding Land based. Some more exotic ones are part of a profession's skills or must have a staff member's approval such as Riding – Air borne mounts, Fire Dancing or even something as strange as Ogre Tossing. Often the Role-Playing skill should be bought for a skill the player has demonstrated they can do in real life.

Then again if a player continuously uses strength enhancements to simulate tossing an Ogrekin ally at an enemy, staff may strongly suggest they buy a Role-Playing skill such as Ogre Tossing...

Gathering Crafts

These crafts can draw from a grab bag to gain materials at the beginning of each event staff makes them available. Each skill has a different pool of items that can be gained. A player may choose to take crowns instead of materials at a fixed rate. Staff may alter grab bag availability based on in game events such as a mine collapse, drought, or very fertile spring.

These skills are often great background skills to flesh out the history of a character.

These skills might also be useful in other situations, though not generally against other players, at staff discretion.

Specialty and Professions

Affinities

Certain Races and even some Professions are exceptionally well attuned to a particular weapon, type of magic or even production skill. These affinities and insights allow the character to both better portray his / her race and gain extra skill in them

Weapon Affinity I:<source>

Prerequisites: Race or Profession which allows Affinities and skill in the proper Weapon

This skill is purchased based on the source. So, a Dwarf would purchase Weapon Affinity I:Dwarf and it would apply to any weapon listed in the Dwarf affinity description, and a member of the military would purchase Weapon Affinity I:Military and it would apply to the weapon listed under Military affinity.

This skill allows the character to call one (1) additional point of damage when using a weapon which his / her race has a special affinity with and they have skill in.

For example, if the and Eldarine purchased the Weapon Affinity I:Eldarine skill and knew One Handed Bladed weapons they would add one (1) additional point of damage when using a Rapier, thus calling 4 normal (3 base and +1 for this skill).

Furthermore, the Weapon Affinity always applies to both hands, thus right or left. Such that if an Eldarine has the skills to use two weapons, and is fighting with two Rapiers, and has Weapon Affinity I they would call 4 normal when striking with Rapiers in both hands (3 base and +1 for this skill).

Lastly when fighting in the races favored style, and coupled with that Races Weapon Master this skill offers a bonus of one (1) point of Physical (Melee) Damage Reduction

This skill, unlike all the damage skills, does not count for the prerequisites for the more advanced strikes attacks such as Critical Strikes and such.

This skill will stack with any other damage enhancing skill such as Weapon Damage and Enhanced Strength.

The damage bonus from affinities with different sources will not stack, such that an Eldarine member of the military could gain a bonus from Weapon Affinity I:Eldarine or Weapon Affinity I:Military for a +1 damage bonus when using a rapier.

The DR bonus for those that receive them also do not stack. Only the highest bonus will apply.

*The list of Races/Groups which get a Damage reduction with the combination of their Race's Weapon Mastery, Racial Affinity and the correct fighting style are.

Dwarves: Hammer or Axe with Shield

Elves: Two Elven Blades (Bladesong style)

Dusk Elf: Two Dusk Elven Blades (Death Dance)

Eldar: Rapier and Main Gauche together

Orc/Orc-Blood: Heavy Sword/Axe & Shield

Queen's Military: One Handed & Shield

(i.e. A Dwarf or Orc without a shield or an Elf with one Blade, an Eldar using two Rapiers...would lose the DR bonus from this skill)

Weapon Affinity II:<Source>

Prerequisites: Weapon Affinity I:<source>

This skill is purchased based on the source. So, a Dwarf would purchase Weapon Affinity II:Dwarf and it would apply to any weapon listed in the Dwarf affinity description, and a member of the military would purchase Weapon Affinity II:Military and it would apply to the weapon listed under Military affinity.

This skill allows the character to call two (2) additional points of damage when using a weapon which his / her race has a special affinity with, and they have skill in.

For example, if the and Eldarine purchased the Weapon Affinity II skill and knew One Handed Bladed weapons they would add two (2) additional point of damage when using a Rapier, thus calling 5 normal (3 base and +2 for this skill).

Furthermore, the Weapon Affinity always applies to both hands, thus right or left. Such that if an Eldarine has the skills to use two weapons, and is fighting with two Rapiers, and has Weapon Affinity I they would call 5 normal when striking with Rapiers in both hands (3 base and +2 for this skill).

Lastly when fighting in the races favored style, and coupled with that Races Weapon Master this skill offers a bonus of two (2) points of Physical (Melee) Damage Reduction

This skill unlike all the damage skills does not count for the prerequisites for the more advanced strikes attacks such as Critical Strikes and such.

This skill will stack with any other damage enhancing skill such as Weapon Damage and Enhanced Strength.

The damage bonus from affinities with different sources will not stack, such that an Eldarine member of the military could gain a bonus from Weapon Affinity II:Eldarine or Weapon Affinity I:Military for a +2 damage bonus when using a rapier.

The DR bonus for those that receive them also do not stack. Only the highest bonus will apply.

Weapon Affinity III:<source>

Prerequisites: Weapon Affinity II:<source>

This skill is purchased based on the source. So, a Dwarf would purchase Weapon Affinity III:Dwarf and it would apply to any weapon listed in the Dwarf affinity description, and a member of the military would purchase Weapon Affinity II:Military and it would apply to the weapon listed under Military affinity.

This skill allows the character to call three (3) additional points of damage when using a weapon which his / her race has a special affinity with, and they have skill in.

For example, if the and Eldarine purchased the Weapon Affinity I skill and knew One Handed Bladed weapons they would add three (3) additional point of damage when using a Rapier, thus calling 6 normal (3 base and +3 for this skill).

Furthermore, the Weapon Affinity always applies to both hands, thus right or left. Such that if an Eldarine has the skills to use two weapons, and is fighting with two Rapiers, and has Weapon Affinity I they would call 6 normal when striking with Rapiers in both hands (3 base and +3 for this skill).

Lastly when fighting in the races favored style, and coupled with that Races Weapon Master this skill offers a bonus of three (3) points of Physical (Melee) Damage Reduction

This skill unlike all the damage skills does not count for the prerequisites for the more advanced strikes attacks such as Critical Strikes and such.

This skill will stack with any other damage enhancing skill such as Weapon Damage and Enhanced Strength.

The damage bonus from affinities with different sources will not stack, such that an Eldarine member of the military could gain a bonus from Weapon Affinity III:Eldarine or Weapon Affinity II:Military for a +3 damage bonus when using a rapier.

The DR bonus for those that receive them also do not stack. Only the highest bonus will apply.

This must be from a production skill that the character knows, that the race allows, and may only be of up to the skill that he or she has in that production (i.e. Apprentice, Journeyman or Master) This skill only removes the need for the production points to create the recipe, not the required components or crown costs.

Resists

Resists are a special skill which allows a character to have a limited immunity to an effect. They are a positive defense when used against a “piercing” attack.

Resists come in many forms and the player must decide to use a resist or another defense such as a spell shield or dodge at the time of the effect to be negated to be successful. To use a Resist vs. other Defense is always the choice of the player against an otherwise successful effect.

Some Resists are effective against certain types of creatures, such as Undead. These resists will negate any one effect which the specified creature successfully initiates against the character. Thus, an Undead who throws a Condemn spell, which successfully hits a character with Resist Undead, could be resisted. The same Undead could have a 20 massive melee attack resisted if the character still had a Resist vs. Undead.

Other Resists are effective against specific magic types. Thus, a character with Resist Arcane could resist any spell on the Arcane spell list, any spell thrown with a purple component packet, or any non-spell effect which mimics or is similar to an effect from a spell on the Arcanist list.

A third type of Resist is effective against an effect type. Resist Disease will be effective against any Disease, Sickness, Nausea, or other Disease-like effects, regardless of source.

If you are not certain if an effect can be resisted with your skill, please ask a Marshall or Staff Member.

When using a Resist against an effect a player must State “Resist <type>” loudly enough for the attacker to hear. Thus, in the examples above the player would have stated “Resist Undead”

Resists may always be used as a defense, even if you are dead.

Resists can be learned in many ways. The first way is those learned by ones Race, in which case they may be learned at any time and usually up to five (5) of a resist may be learned by the character of the appropriate Race. (See Racial Description)

Secondly, a characters Profession may have the ability to learn certain types of Resists. These resists are noted in the Profession’s description and often come with Prerequisites based on level and / or skills known.

Spells are another way to learn a Resist. A spell column may allow a character to learn certain types of resist. The larger the column the more resists a player may learn. Resists are based on the number of First (1st) level spells a character has and they may learn the first resist upon learning a single first level spell. Each additional Resist can be learned with every odd number of first level spells learned there on.

Examples: One (1) resist with a 1 column, two (2) resists with a 3, 2, 1 column, three (3) resists at a 5, 4, 3, 2, 1 column, and so on...

The knowledge of magical Rituals can also grant to ability to know very powerful Resists. For every three levels of Ritual, a character may learn an appropriate resist for the type of Ritual magic known, up to a maximum of three (3) resists learned in this fashion. (i.e. One (1) resist at Ritual Magic III, two (2) resists at Ritual Magic VI, and lastly Three (3) resists at Ritual Magic IX)

The last common way to learn a form of Resist is by joining one of the Prestige Groups. This is always governed by first joining one of these optional groups and then by meeting all other requirements, such as level, to learn these resists. These are always limited to no more than five (5) of any one type of resist learned in this manner.

Knowledge of Resists from different sources can be combined. For example, a Djinn-born Magi can learn his / her Resist Elemental skill five (5) times for Race, but they may also add any Resist Elementals an Elementalist Column would allow. For Example: A Djinn-born Magi with seven (7) first level spells could have up to nine (9) Resist Elemental if she so desired. (i.e. five (5) for being Djinn-born and four (4) for their spell column, equaling nine (9))

Resists granted by a Racial Advantage may be learned without a teacher as they are inherent abilities.

Curse of the Evil Eye

This type of magic is restricted to very few. Much like Runes it is learned in a single column format. Curses come in three forms: Immediate or Active are the most common, more powerful are the Conditional Curses which also are known as the Dying Curse because they caster must have been physically injured in some way to cause this curse. The most powerful is the Geas, also known as a Blood Oath, in which a Curse is placed on a willing target until a service or mission has been completed.

A Curse may be removed by a few means, depending on the type of Curse. The original caster may always remove a curse he or she has placed on a target. Though always loath to do such, another Curse caster may use his or her ability to cast the next higher Curse to remove a curse placed on a target. (i.e. a Caster may use their Curse of the Evil Eye 9 to remove a Curse of the Evil Eye 8) Curses of the 9th degree may only be removed by the Original caster or extremely powerful Magics.

Curses may only be placed on beings with a life force. They cannot affect beings without a life force or the undead who are considered Cursed already. There are rumors of even more powerful “generational” curses which can be passed down through family lines, and Lycanthropy may have been one of these Curses. Lastly it is known that Necromantic Curses do exist, though no one has cast one in over a century.

Note: Only Romanovi and Avengers may learn to use this form of Magic. Furthermore, Curse of the Evil Eye, like Runes does not count against ones Primary, Secondary or Tertiary Magics as Curses are not normal Spells.

Special Note: This is a skill which after Curse of the Evil Eye 1 requires a Teacher for each new degree, similar to spell or rune levels. A player must find another player with the Teaching skill or staff member who will sign off on his / her learning each new degree.

Miscellaneous Skills

These are those skills which enhance a character's ability but do not fit neatly into any other category. They do more than just Role-playing skills, but their game effects can still be as much to flesh out a character as anything else and are often not as directly effective as the other skills in this chapter have been.

All of these skills do have an in-game effect or use. They often also come with a Role-Playing style that can be fleshed out with their use or acquisition.

Evaluate Items

Prerequisites: None

This skill allows a character to discern the general value of items which are not directly apparent in game by granting the character information about the different types of materials that went into their construction, including how many of each.

It also allows the user to look at a material component and determine if it is worth about the same, more, or less than another, though not necessarily how much more, or less.

It is up to the player if they decide to if they will truthfully relay this information or not.

It is recommended that a player take time with this skill to have fun by inspecting the items in question. Use of tools such as magnifiers and Jewelers lens are highly recommended.

Disarm Traps

Prerequisites: None

Engineers may make traps but the knowledge of how to avoid them or disarm them is something that this skill is required for. No player may bypass or disarm a trap without knowledge of this skill. Even if he or she can see a Wire, and simply remove it without this skill they are not allowed to do so.

Marshalls, Storytellers and Staff may all require in game action to remove a trap and the player may still have to work at it even with this skill. After all nothing is a guaranteed success in life.

Pick Lock

Prerequisites: None

Engineers may make locks but the knowledge of how to pick them is something that this skill is required for. No player may bypass or pick a lock without knowledge of this skill. Even if he or she can do so in real life, without this skill they are not allowed to do so.

Marshalls, Storytellers and Staff may all require in game action to remove a lock and the player may still have to work at it even with this skill. In game locks must be approved by a Marshall or Staff and they will have a tag on them.

Nobility

Prerequisites: Decided at Character Creation.

This skill makes a player one of the Noble Class in game. They do not start with a title beyond that of Lord or Lady. They are not the Prince, Baron, Duke, Count or such. They are descended from one of their race's noble households and as such have certain in game benefits and responsibilities.

Nobles are held to High Law rather than Common Law like everyone else. This sometimes works in one's favor and sometimes not.

Nobles may have a Retinue that travels with them and must wear the household's livery. Nobles can openly carry arms even during times of prohibition or in places commoners are forbidden to.

Note: Nobles must always wear the best armor, or clothing as befitting their station in life. This means that a player who does not meet the standards of costuming set forth by the Game cannot play a person of official Noble Birth.

Lastly, as a member of a Noble Family the character receives a stipend from his or her family. This is to maintain the proper image of nobility and derives from any family land holdings or businesses. This stipend is based on title and is as follows.

Lord/Lady: 10 Crowns

Earl: 20 Crowns

Baron: 40 Crowns

Count: 80 Crowns

Duke: 160 Crowns

Note: Staff will have a list of noble houses a player may choose from based on his/her race at time of character creation. These are the official noble houses of the game, and as such a player's Character must be descendant from one of these to be able to purchase this skill.

Bravery

Prerequisites: Level 15 for Knights, Level 20 for Cavaliers, Level 30 for all other Professions

This skill grants complete immunity to Fear, Terror and Horror spells and effects. This does not mean that a character must run bravely to their certain demise. It simply means that they are not afraid of what they may be wise enough to run from.

This skill is always in effect and cannot be "turned off". Bravery is always used first before any spell shield is affected, Resist can be activated, or another defense is used up.

To use this skill, the character would simply state "Bravery" loudly enough for all including the attacker attempting a fear effect to hear.

Leadership I

Prerequisites: Officer, Noble, or Level 30

This skill grants the ability to lead troops and inspire them to action. When a person has Leadership, troops under their direct command are inspired to fight harder and longer than normal.

This inspiration translates to a +1 to all weapon damage done by the troops and +10 bonus hit points to those who remain within 10' of their leader.

Note: The character who has leadership and is commanding his / her troops gains no bonus from this skill. It only applies to those under his / her command.

Note: The bonus hitpoints count as a bonus to their HP total while within the area of effect, so they may be healed if lost. However, the initial hitpoints are only gained once per day, and cannot be refreshed by stepping out then back into the area. Any damage received while under this effect are applied to these hitpoints first when leaving the area. Any left over are regained when reentering the area.

Note: Only the highest bonus that could apply to an individual does.

Leadership II

Prerequisites: Leadership I and Level 40

This skill grants the ability to lead troops and inspire them to action. When a person has Leadership, troops under their direct command are inspired to fight harder and longer than normal.

This inspiration translates to a +2 to all weapon damage done by the troops and +20 bonus hit points to those who remain within 20' of their leader.

Note: The character who has leadership and is commanding his / her troops gains no bonus from this skill. It only applies to those under his / her command.

Note: The bonus hitpoints count as a bonus to their HP total while within the area of effect, so they may be healed if lost. However, the initial hitpoints are only gained once per day, and cannot be refreshed by stepping out then back into the area. Any damage received while under this effect are applied to these hitpoint first when leaving the area. Any left over are regained when reentering the area.

Note: Only the highest bonus that could apply to an individual does.

Leadership III

Prerequisites: Leadership II and Level 50

This skill grants the ability to lead troops and inspire them to action. When a person has Leadership, troops under their direct command are inspired to fight harder and longer than normal.

This inspiration translates to a +3 to all weapon damage done by the troops and +30 bonus hit points to those who remain within 30' of their leader.

Note: The character who has leadership and is commanding his / her troops gains no bonus from this skill. It only applies to those under his / her command.

Note: The bonus hitpoints count as a bonus to their HP total while within the area of effect, so they may be healed if lost. However, the initial hitpoints are only gained once per day, and cannot be refreshed by stepping out then back into the area. Any damage received while under this effect are applied to these hitpoint first when leaving the area. Any left over are regained when reentering the area.

Note: Only the highest bonus that could apply to an individual does.

Iron Grasp

Prerequisites: Level 20

This skill grants complete immunity to Disarm and Fumble effects. This does not mean that a character cannot drop their sword on their own, just that outside spells and spell like effects cannot cause him/her to drop it.

This skill is always in effect and cannot be "turned off". Iron Grasp is always used first before any spell shield is affected, Resist can be activated, or another defense is used up.

To use this skill, the character would simply state "Iron Grasp" loudly enough for all including the attacker attempting a disarm to hear.

Break Charm and Domination

Prerequisites: Eldarine, Eldaran, Lvl 20 Romanovi or Avenger

This skill grants the ability to remove a Charm or Domination effect on another being. This is done with some time and pain. For every level of the Charm like effect both the one Charmed and the one breaking the effect take one (1) hit point of damage.

Note: Domination from Creatures such as Vampires will cause both the Dominated being and the character using this skill ten (10) points of damage upon its completion.

The process of breaking the charm takes a ten count and must be done in a slow and steady manner. The character stating "Breaking Charm 1, Breaking Charm 2," and so on until Breaking Charm 10 is reached at which time both take damage. During the process both the character and the Charmed being are keenly aware that they will take damage.

Special Note: A player may not use this skill on themselves to break a charm or Domination that has been placed on them.

Torture I-V [R]

Prerequisites: None, though characters may not start with this skill without staff approval

This skill allows a character to extract truthful answers to questions from some characters. By taking a character who is willing or unable to resist and 10 minutes to use the skill, the torturer compares their levels in the Torture skill to the victim's levels in Master Fortify. If the Torture levels exceed the Master Fortify levels, the torturer can ask questions that the victim must answer truthfully.

Divination (Ranks I – V)

Prerequisites: None

This skill allows a character to receive hints and visions from the game staff. How the character uses the skill is open to interpretation, but commonly recognized means of Divination in Mythic Adventures are: Tarot, Astrology, Rune stones, Bones, and Water Gazing.

This skill may also be used to draw Crowns in the same way as Trade Skills.

If you would like to introduce another type of Divination, please work with the staff.

Astrology (Ranks I – V)

Prerequisites: Read & Write

This skill allows a player to use the night sky and stars for several purposes. The easy ones are to tell things like the time, or the heading of a ship. This skill also allows the player to try to divine something from the star's movements in the sky or that a comet is a portent of some important event. These predictions are often vague at best, and players are encouraged to have fun with them.

Remember that it was only in our more modern times that Astrologers and Astronomers where separate skill sets. It is up to the player as to how they wish to role-play this skills knowledge.

Please note though that players with this skill may be given small cryptic insights by the Story Team or Staff members with which to aid the players along in the story.

This skill can be purchased multiple times to a maximum of five (5) Ranks if desired by the player.

This skill may also be used to draw Crowns in the same way as Trade Skills.

Teaching I-V

Many of the skills in Mythic Adventures must be learned from a source. Often the best and most encouraged way is to learn a skill from another character in the game.

The Teaching skill allows a player character to sign off on another character learning a skill.

Only one skill may be listed on each diploma.

Most skills require that you find someone with the skill and the Teaching skill to train your character the first time they learn it. Additional purchases of the same skill such as Weapon Damage+2 or Scribe:11 do not require another teacher.

Each Spell Level, Ritual Level, and Grand Master Production Level are considered individual skills and so require a teacher for each purchase.

Note: Additional spells for the same level and column do not require a teacher

Some skills like Crafts, Lores, Affinities, and Role Playing skills are broad categories that contain a multitude of specific skills. Each specific Craft, Lore, Affinity, and RP skill requires that you find a willing teacher who has that specific skill before being able to learn it. If there are multiple levels of the skill such as Craft: Mining or Combat Lore: Orcs, you may buy the additional levels without a teacher. This does not include upgrading an Informational Lore from Lesser to Greater.

Example: A warrior first learns a Parry, after attaining her +2 weapon damage, from a teacher. Once they reach +4 weapon damage they do not need a teacher to learn a second (2nd) Parry.

Each level of this skill allows the character to teach one skill they know to someone who can learn it once per event. So, a character with 1 level of teaching may teach one other character one skill, while a teacher with 5 levels of teaching may teach five people one skill, or one person five skills, or any mixture between the two so long as only 5 instances of skill are taught in total.

In addition, this skill may also be used to draw Crowns in the same way as Trade Skills.

Note: Teaching is time sensitive. Your student must have a prerequisite skill before you can teach them a skill with that prerequisite. This means that they cannot learn both those skills during the same event.

This does not apply to skills that do not require a teacher for additional levels. You can purchase your 4th Weapon damage and 2nd Parry at the same time.

Also, your student must purchase the skill before their next event after you sign their teaching chit or the lesson didn't take, and they must be taught again.

Hit Point and Armor Enhancements

These skills allow the character to harden themselves against damage and to improve their armor by either wearing their armor more effectively or by training themselves to be able to wear more armor than their profession would normally allow.

As a large part of Mythic Adventures is that the Storytellers, and Staff must all play by the same rules as the Players, these skills play a large part in higher level encounters.

Blade of Strife

Useable by: Wrath Only

Duration: 5 swings

Area of Effect: Caster only

Verbal: “And Strife shall guide my blade”

This spell allows the Wrath caster to gain a +2 damage bonus for the very next 5 swings of his or her weapon. This spell only affects the very next 5 swings made by the caster, and that swing must occur within 5 minutes of casting this spell.

Bless

Useable by: Healer, Hearth & Druid

Type: Protection

Duration: Special

Area of Effect: One Creature

The Bless spell grants the target 10 additional hit points. These additional points are the first points to be used if the target is harmed in battle. They may not be healed and may not be used toward the use of any Lay on Hands like spell or ability.

The Bless spell expires after one day (at spell reset) if the points are not used.

Golems, Undead and other creatures without a life force may not benefit from a Bless spell.

Area of Effect: One Undead

Verbal: “From the darkness of Undeath I grant you the Blessing of the Grave.”

The spell grants an undead 4 additional hit points. These additional points are the first points to be used if the target is harmed in battle. They may not be healed, and may not be used toward the use of any Lay on Hands like spell or ability.

The Blessing of the Grave spell expires after one day (at spell reset) if the points are not used.

Only Undead are affected by a Blessing of the Grave Spell.

Runes of Power

Runes are a form of magic open to all professions and races. They unlock the power within symbols, and can be extremely beneficial to all.

Runes are not learned in a column format, but each level of Rune Magic is learned individually much like Ritual magic, or most skills.

Runes fall into four categories, each with its own function and type of power. These four categories are Armor, Body, Shield, and Weapon Runes.

Armor Runes much like armor itself fall into those runes which protect the bearer from harm. Therefore, the most common form of these runes absorb incoming attacks

Body Runes enhance one's person, and tend to be those runes which makes a person stronger or more resilient.

Shield Runes also protect the bearer, but rather than absorb harmful effects like armor they block these effects from ever taking place, much like a shield would block a sword.

Weapon Runes are those which enhance the bearer's ability to do damage. They are Runes built for war and combat, born to inflict harm to others

Runes must be applied to correct type of item to be effective. They must be visible and represented by at least a 2"x2" sized mark. Each Rune has its own symbolism, and these stay constant from rune bearer to rune bearer, such that a person should be able to identify the types of runes someone has inscribed.

Runes are inscribed on an item, which takes one minute to do, and then remain dormant on that item until activated or the end of the event whichever comes first. Only one rune of each type may be inscribed at a time on the appropriate item. For example, Bob the Marauder has an axe with a Rune of War on it. He could not then have a second weapon Rune placed on his Axe till after he activates the Rune of War and its duration has expired, unless he is a Rune Master

Runes take a minute to inscribe, and last until they are activated. A Rune user may only activate those runes they have personally inscribed, and they are the only ones who gain any benefit from those runes. If Bob from above dropped his axe after activating his rune of war and then Swipe the rogue grabbed it and started using Bob's axe against him. Swipe would gain no benefit from Bob's Rune of War on his axe.

This leads to some very interesting choices to be made as a Rune bearer can only have 1 of each level of Runes, and they must choose which rune they want to use and on which item.

Rune Master skill will allow a person, who inscribes Runes to learn a second column of Runes and even to have 2 Runes of each type active on the appropriate type of item, but they may not gain double benefit from a rune type nor can they use two of the same rune on an item.

Example: Ron the Runemaster decides he wants to go all out in this combat. He cannot combine a Rune of War and a Rune of Strife together as they both deal direct damage, but he could combine a Rune of Flame and a Rune of Strife.

Runes may be placed on a 2"x2" piece of tape to be easily removed and to easily be seen on an item or a person's body. Remember a Rune may not be concealed and must be clearly visible at all times.

There are even more powerful magics than Runes.

Once a Rune Master has completed their second column of Runes, they may begin to attempt to expand their knowledge into Glyphs. Glyphs protect portals and closures, and as such are most commonly found on doors and chests. Even more powerful are Sigils, which cannot even be attempted until Glyphs have been mastered the same manner as Runes.

Glyphs protect an area, such as a room, clearing or circle.

In both cases the knowledge of Glyphs and Sigils must be located by research done in play, and they are not common enough knowledge to be listed here, but instead are each individually discovered, much like Ritual Magics, or Grand Master Recipes.

All other adjustments such as attunements are accounted for based on the reduced damage. So that in the case above if the bearer of the Rune of Iron Skin had an attunement to Ice and took double damage from Fire they would take 26 points of damage from the Flame bolt spell (16 flame minus 3 DR equaling 13. This effect stacks after all other damage modifiers. Thus, if a Runemaster had a magical Shortsword +3, and had also placed a Rune of Combat on the Blade the Rune Master would call 12 magic (2 base + 3 modifier, +1 Rune of combat x2 Rune of vengeance)

Any effect which does a specific damage type would still be added on at the end such as Fire or Ice.

* Please note that the damage a weapon cannot ever call more than triple its actual damage cap. (i.e. a shortsword with a damage cap of 30, can never call more than 90)*

Curses of the Evil Eye

The Curse of the Evil Eye

Curses are a different and darker form of magic. Used primarily by the Romanovi, some non- Romanovi Avengers may also learn these Curses.

Curses are learned similar to Runes and Ritual Magics in that they are a single column, useable as one of each level known per day. The Curse to use at each level is decided at the time of casting from those the Romanovi or other may know.

Curses may be packet delivered or Named. In the case of a packet delivered Curse the caster must recite the curse and then hit the intended target.

Note intent plays a role in these curses and a packet which strikes the wrong target will have no effect on that target.

Named Curses require no packet only that the Caster knows the name of the target and the target is in range to actually hear themselves being cursed.

A Curse of the Evil Eye which uses the Target's Name cannot be dodged, evaded or blocked by a normal spell shield.

There are protections against such magics such as wards.

Packet delivered Curses may be Dodged and Evaded as normal, but they are still considered to Pierce spell shields, though not Charms against Curses.

There are three (3) types of Curses of the Evil Eye. The first and simplest is the Curse of Command, which can be cast at any target without any pre-determined action or affront on the target's part.

The second are the Curses of the Blood, or Blood Curses. To use these more powerful Curses, the caster must have been physically injured by the target.

The last form of Curse is the Blood Oath or Geas. It is almost never taught to any who are not of Romanovi blood. Only those very rare and special beings such as a Nominator would ever be taught such powerful and sacred Oaths, an outsider who has not learned at the feet of the Bandolier caught casting an Oath on someone is likely to be attacked and killed by any Romanovi who finds out.

Note: Curses of the Evil Eye have no effect on creatures such as Construct or Golems without a Life force. They are effective on Elementals and the Undead. These creatures may even enter contracts and thus be Blood Oathed.

Curses may be removed by the original Caster, by another Caster who will use a more powerful level of Curse of the Evil Eye slot up in the process (i.e. a 4th Level Curse could be removed by another with the use of a 5th Level or Higher Curse slot) up to 8th Level. 9th Level Curses of the Evil Eye may only be removed by the Original Caster.

Note: A Romanovi Bandolier may remove any Curse and may even remove a 9th Level Curse cast by another. They are loath to do so as a 9th Level Curse requires the Bandolier expel all 9 Levels of her Curse of the Evil Eye at once for the day to remove.

The Remove Curse spell can remove Curses of up to Level 7, but the caster may find him or herself in quite a bit of trouble with the local Romanovi if the spell is used to remove a Curse of the Evil Eye.

There are rumored to be Ritual magics that will remove any Curse, and several which can duplicate the effects of the most powerful Blood Oaths effects.

There are even powerful Ritual Magic Curses as well.

These are rare indeed and can be of either Ethereal or Terrestrial Magic. Often the local Bandolier controls access to these magics, and the components there of.

Special Note: A very rare Bronze coin is said to exist which can also cleanse one of any curse. They are ancient indeed and have many applications in Ritual Magics as well.

Mythic Adventures

Production Skills

Chapter 9: Production

Production skills allow the player to have his or her character make something with an in-game use. These can be used by the player, stored, or even sold in many cases, hopefully for a profit.

Mythic Adventures is a player driven game and therefore economy. If there are not enough producers to make armor for repairs and new items than the town will run out and prices for such commodities will therefore fluctuate by the rules of supply and demand.

Production Skills have three (3) basic skills which are needed to start to learn a particular type of Production.

As will all things in Mythic Adventures there is a standard and consistent set of rules which control all production skills, regardless if it is Vinting or Armorsmithing. You must first have one of the three (3) basic skills. These skills are Herbalism, Blacksmithing and Fermenting. These skills are the prerequisites for Production Skills, and each controls a group of Productions.

Once you have the basic skill you may learn Apprentice skill in a Production. You must learn the specific Apprentice skill for the type of production you wish to have (i.e. A Blacksmith could learn to be an Apprentice Weaponsmith, Armorsmith, Engineer, or Jewel Crafter)

An Apprentice may learn ten (10) skill levels in their chosen field, before they must find someone to teach them to be a Journeyman.

A Journeyman may learn an additional ten (10) skill levels for a total of twenty (20) skill levels before they must find someone to teach them to become a Master of that form of production.

As a Master, you may learn an additional ten (10) skill levels for a total of thirty (30) skill levels. Once a Master has reached thirty skill levels in a Production he or she may begin to learn the powerful Grand Master skills one (I) through five (V). These are similar to Ritual Magics and are the highest recipes which will make the most powerful items of the Production Skill.

All Levels of Production require a character have a recipe for what they wish to create. Recipes can be common, uncommon, and rare, at each type of Skill (i.e. there are rare Apprentice recipes)

A Recipe will require a certain amount of skill to create, such that an Apprentice cannot make Master Recipe, regardless of the point cost.

Recipes may also require a certain amount of skill to use. Most follow the rule that a character must have at least one rank lower than the recipe to use, thus an item created by a Master Recipe can be used by a Journeyman in the same Production skill.

Production Skills are primarily used between events, which is represented by the Production Check-In procedure. During Check-in at an event a character receives a number of Production Points to use based on their skills.

The Production Point total is equal to a multiplier based on skill rank in that production skill applied to the skill levels in that production skill. The skill ranks and multipliers are Apprentice at x1, Journeyman at x2, and Master at x3. A higher rank replaces the lower multiplier and is not in addition to it. The Grand Master skill rank does not provide an increased multiplier.

For example, a character with the Journeyman Jewel Crafter skill and 16 levels of Jewel Crafting would receive 32 (16x2) Production Points at check in.

Every Recipe, other than Grand Master Recipes, has a required Production Skill Rank, Production Point cost, Crown cost, and potentially required or optional components necessary to create them. At Check-in, a player may create, and receive the item tags for, any combination of Recipes, or multiples of the same Recipe, that they have the Recipes for as well as the Skill Ranks, Crowns and Components necessary to create, so long as the sum of the Production Point costs for those Recipes is less than or equal to their Production Point total for that skill.

If you turn in the Optional Components for a recipe when creating it, the crowns required is reduced to ½ round down.

Note: Grand Master Recipes may even require certain skills, Lores, and even have Racial restrictions.

A player will pay for and present the recipes at check in for what they have created during the break which they wish to use. Any unspent Production Points are lost, and do not carry over between games.

Rare Recipes must be found in game and they are not listed in this rule book.

Players may find these recipes in many ways throughout their travels and time playing Mythic Adventures.

Lastly there are certain items which a player can find that will help augment their skill points total and / or skill in created Production based items.

3rd Level Spell: Oak Gall, Crushed Berries

Physical Representation: Page in Spell Book

This recipe allows the Scribe to make a permanent copy of a 1st to 3rd Level Terrestrial spell into a caster's spell book from a scroll. The Scribe does not need skill in the Magic to be able to transcribe, only the scroll itself.

The scroll is consumed in the transcribing process.

Once a spell is placed into the Character's spell book record, it can only be used by that character and no one else.

It is possible for the Engineer to accidentally set off their trap.

The Circle must be able to make noise and have the Trap Card affixed to it. It may be placed under things and still work, (i.e. such as covered in pine needles or under a door welcome mat)

Always be careful to make sure the trap is secured so it does not move around.

Setting this type of Trap requires Ten (10) minutes

Note: a circle of un-popped bubble wrap makes an excellent Trap marker. Any questions see a Marshall for advice and approval.

Mythic Adventures

Leveling and Experience Points

Live Action Role-Playing Game

Chapter 10: Leveling and Experience Points

Experience points are given as a reward for playing the game, and act as a measure of a player's progress while participating in Mythic Adventures.

There are two types of experience point categories that will be referenced by the Hero's Library. The first is player experience. Player experience is experience earned by the player. This can be gained from volunteering. These points can be spent towards the character experience point pool. This is the pool that indicates when a character will level. Once experience is in the character experience category, it can not be removed.

Ways to obtain Experience Points:

Experience Points can be gained in several ways throughout a player's time with Mythic Adventures.

First a player will gain one hundred (100) experience points for each fully paid game played. This is for the average weekend game which would start on Friday and end on Sunday. For shorter or longer game sessions, the points gained would be adjusted accordingly.

Note: Points gained in this manner must be applied directly to the character played.

Players can gain floating experience points for helping the game in various ways such as taking extra time, or even a whole event, to monster, work on set designs, or help with set-up or tear down of props and site items for an event. These will be awarded directly to the player by the Staff Member in charge.

Players will earn Experience point chits for exceptional role-playing or participating in the world. These are awarded at the discretion of the Staff, Story teller team or even Marshall as they witness such events. Other players may exchange experience points chits for what they perceive as great and exceptional role-playing which enhances a game.

Combating monsters is one of the more common ways to obtain experience points, and each monster will carry a certain amount of experience chits based on its power and difficulty to kill. These should be divided up amongst the participants in taking down the monster, remembering good sportsmanship is one of the primary rules of Mythic Adventures.

Donating to a Chapter can be another way to receive an Experience point chit. Most of the time, donations which are used to further improve a game's immersion for all players are rewarded at a rate of one experience point for every dollar given. This applies to time as well as to items crafted or donated for the value of the skills or item donated.

Earning XP for permanently adding a recipe or spell to a player's Recipe or Spell Book can only occur once for each recipe, when the player adds the discovery to their permanent book, and only if they can use the spell or recipe at the time.

New discoveries for production or spell research can also grant a player experience. Much like adding an existing spell or recipe to one's Spell Book, creating something new and adding it one's bag of tricks is rewarded, though these rewards come from working directly with a Marshall or Staff member in charge of the area being worked on.

XP reward for Creating a new spell or recipe:

Apprentice Recipe: 50 experience points

Journeyman Recipe 100 experience points

Master Recipe 150 experience points

Grand Master Recipe: 200 experience points per level

Rune: 50 per level

Sigil or Glyph: 100 per level

Creation of Primary Spell: 25 per spell level

Creation of a Primary Ritual: 50 per spell level

XP Reward for adding an existing spell or recipe

Apprentice Recipe: 10 experience points

Journeyman Recipe 20 experience points

Master Recipe 30 experience points

Grand Master Recipe: 40 experience points per level

Rune: 10 per level

Sigil or Glyph: 20 per level

Spell for Primary Column 5 per spell level

Spell for Secondary Column: 5 per spell level

Spell for Tertiary Column: 5 per spell level

Ritual: 10 per spell level

What all can I spend Experience on?

Most directly, experience can be spent on leveling a character. This follows the Experience Point chart and is the way in which a player gains levels for his or her character.

Experience Points which are granted as chits may be banked so that a player may start at a higher level when starting a new character.

Training for Skills one cannot find a teacher for is also available on a limited basis for an experience point cost.

Occasionally, certain items such as Apprentice potions or elixirs may be purchased prior to an event's start from staff members and are role-played as exchanges with traveling caravans during the time between events. Also, additional Lives may sometimes be purchased with Experience Points from Staff Members before events as well.

Experience can also be used to purchase new recipes or spells (if available) from the games Marshalls or Staff to add to a character's permanent list of abilities. Please check with staff to determine availability and cost.

Note: These purchases represent Training and must be purchased directly from a Marshall or Staff member.

Chapter 11: Living and Dying

As a game which includes combat and war, players will during the course of their adventures be at various states of health.

Health is most commonly represented as a value; the number of hit points and armor points a character has. The more powerful or healthy a character is due to their level and skills, the more hit points he or she may have.

Furthermore, health can be represented by a status of effect such as diseased or paralyzed. These effects may not have a hit point deduction to them, but they do have a certain type of Role-play which is expected from the effect.

Health

Healthy: When a player's character has a positive hit point total, they are considered alive and measurably healthy. As a character's hit points are reduced through combat or other means, players are encouraged to role-play the exhaustion or pain of the injuries being incurred.

Conversely, as a character is healed by magic or various other means a player is encouraged to role-play their recovery as well.

Bleeding Out: If a character is reduced to any number below 1 hit point, they cease to count any hit points lost and instead are placed at the Bleeding Out status. They must immediately start a three (3) minute count.

A character that is bleeding out may be healed by any normal means such as basic spells, ointments, or First Aid. They may not drink a potion nor be forced to drink a potion.

A Bleeding out player may not move and should either lay down where they lost their hit points or drop to one knee to represent their status. This should always be done in a safe manner, being conscious of one's surroundings.

After a player has counted for three (3) minutes and not received any aid, the player will move on to the next status of injury which is Critically Wounded.

Critically Wounded: If a character is reduced to Critically Wounded Status either due to time passing from Bleeding Out status or from a special attack such as a Critical Strike, they are placed at the Critically Wounded status. They must immediately start a three (3) minute count.

A character that is critically wounded can be healed by any special means such as a Heal Critical Wounds spell or any curative magic of 6th or higher level, application of certain items, or through First Aid or Triage from a skilled Surgeon. They may not drink a potion nor be forced to drink a potion.

A Critically Wounded player may not move and should either lay down where they lost their hit points or drop to one knee to represent their status. This should always be done in a safe manner, being conscious of one's surroundings.

After a player has counted for three (3) minutes and not received any aid, the player will move on to the next status of injury which is Lethally Wounded.

Lethally Wounded: If a character is reduced to Lethally Wounded status either due to time passing from Critically Wounded status, or from a special attack such as a Lethal Strike or Assassinate they are placed at the Lethally Wounded status. They must immediately start a three (3) minute count.

A character who is Lethally Wounded can be healed by any special means such as a Heal Lethal Wounds spell or any curative magic of 8th or higher level, application of certain items, or through First Aid or Triage from a skilled Surgeon. They may not drink a potion nor be forced to drink a potion.

A Lethally Wounded player may not move and should either lay down where they lost their hit points or drop to one knee to represent their status. This should always be done in a safe manner, being conscious of one's surroundings.

After a player has counted for three (3) minutes and not received any aid, the player will move on to the next status of injury which is Dead.

Dead: If a character is reduced to Dead Status either due to time passing from Lethally Wounded status or from a special attack such as a Death Spell they are placed at the Dead status. They must immediately start a three (3) minute count.

A character that is dead can be revived by any special means such as a Life spell or similar magic of 9th level or the application of certain items by a skilled Surgeon. They may not drink a potion nor be forced to drink a potion.

A Dead player may not move and should either lay down where they lost their hit points or drop to one knee to represent their status. This should always be done in a safe manner, being conscious of one's surroundings.

After a player has counted for three (3) minutes and not received any aid, the player has the choice to go out of play, his or her body effectively disappearing, and move to a respawn point in the game.

After the 3-minute count, the player may choose to remain in place, however, they may not move from that place, interact with other players or characters, or talk except to staff or a marshal. They can do nothing but sit or lie there waiting for aid. They may choose at any time to dissipate and respawn.

Note: There are items and spells which can force a player to dissipate and respawn.

Much like a video game they must go out of play, leaving any in game possessions not bonded to the character at the point where their body dissipates. Once at a proper Respawn point, their loss of life will be recorded and if they have any additional lives, a deduction from their total will be made and marked on their life chit. Once the character is resurrected, they lose the previous hour of memory measured from the last point they were at the Healthy status before resurrection but will be at full health.

Note: Once a character has lost all its lives, that character ceases to exist, and a player must create another character. These events can be quite dramatic in a player's tenure with Mythic Adventures and should be handled with great sportsmanship by all involved.

Other Statuses

A Player may become afflicted with several things which can further affect one's status in game.

Some examples are given below and placed in the category of what type of affliction they are.

Appropriate resists can always be used to remove these effects.

Note: If a character is out of resists for the day and the day's reset occurs while they are afflicted with an effect which they could have otherwise resisted, they may use the resist to remove the effect once it has reset.

Metabolic: These effects are those which cause a change to the character's body in a physical manner and are caused by spells or spell like effects. They may be shielded against by the appropriate Spell or resist.

Paralyzed: The player is unable to move under their own power and may either simply stand or fall to the ground, unable to move but conscious unless rendered otherwise. A player who is paralyzed may not defend themselves.

Petrified: The character has been turned to stone and must represent this by being unmoving. A petrified character must begin the same count as if they were bleeding out for their status in case they are returned from stone. If at the end of their count for dead status they are not returned to normal status they will crumble and dissipate as normal.

An effect similar to a Shatter spell will render the player to dust and they will crumble and dissipate just as if they had exhausted their dead status count.

Note: Not all petrification is permanent but may only last a duration such as five (5) or ten (10) minutes. In this case the character will automatically return to normal status at whatever level of wounded their count has placed them at.

Cursed: This status is set by the curse which is placed on the character and may have many different effects.

Slept: The player must act as if he or she is asleep; they may remain standing if it is unsafe or unwise to lie down. Snoring is sometimes encouraged; sleeping effects can be removed on a ten count most of the time. A sleeping character may be killed on a five count. (i.e. Killing 1, Killing 2, Killing 3, Killing 4, Killing 5) at which points they are reduced to Dead Status.

Unconscious: Similar to being asleep but usually accompanied by some form of physical damage.

Diseased: A Diseased character may not have any visible effect, and the disease must be removed in some manner even if the damages it causes are healed. Most disease effects have a limited duration, but not all of them. The specific effects are determined by the disease.

Toxins: These effects are those which caused by a Poison spell or Production item (Ingested, Venom, Gas). They may be shielded against by the appropriate spell or resist.

Poisoned: A Poisoned character may not have any visible effect, and the poison must be removed in some manner even if the damage it causes are healed. Most poisons have a limited duration, but not all of them. The specific effects are determined by the poison.

Paralyzed: The player is unable to move under their own power and may either simply stand or fall to the ground, unable to move but conscious unless rendered otherwise. A player who is paralyzed may not defend themselves.

Petrified: The character has been turned to stone and must represent this by being unmoving. A petrified character must begin the same count as if they were bleeding out for their status in case they are returned from stone. If at the end of their count for dead status they are not returned to normal status they will crumble and dissipate as normal.

An effect similar to a Shatter spell will render the player to dust and they will crumble and dissipate just as if they had exhausted their dead status count.

Note: Not all petrification is permanent but may only last a duration such as five (5) or ten (10) minutes. In this case the character will automatically return to normal status at whatever level of wounded their count has placed them at.

Mind Affected: These effects are those which cause a change to the character's mind in a physical manner. They may be shielded against by the appropriate spell or resist.

Trance: This effect places the character in an almost sleep like state in which they may wander as if sleep walking but not interact with any outside force. The character may not wander outside a ten (10) foot radius of where they were initially tranced. A tranced character may be killed on a five count. (i.e. Killing 1, Killing 2, Killing 3, Killing 4, Killing 5) at which points they are reduced to Dead Status. They may not move once the Kill has started.

Charmed: This effect places the character under the influence of an outside force. They will be taking orders from that force as if they came from a best friend or respected commanding officer. This will not cause a character to act against its primary nature and cannot be used in such a manner. (i.e. a charmed Knight cannot be made to act in a way which would cause them to lose their Knight status)

Dominated: This effect places the character under the complete influence of an outside force. They will be taking orders from that force no matter what they may be, even unto the death. This can cause a character to act against its primary nature. (i.e. a dominated Knight of Valor might be found fighting in defense of an Undead Master.)

Feared: This effect will cause a character to move as fast as is safely possible away from the object of their fear. They may not be killed outright by this effect but will not defend themselves normally until the effect has ended (10 Minutes) or they have moved out of sight of the object of their fears.

Horried: This effect will cause a character to move as fast as is safely possible away from the object of their fear. They may not be killed outright by this effect but will not defend themselves normally until the effect has ended (10 Minutes). This effect will last even after they have moved out of sight of the object which horrifies them.

Terrified: This effect will cause a character to stand still, shaking in terror of object of their terror. A terrified character may be killed on a five count. (i.e. Killing 1, Killing 2, Killing 3, Killing 4, Killing 5) at which points they are reduced to Dead Status. They will not defend themselves normally until the effect has ended (10 Minutes). This effect will last until the object of their terror moves out of sight or the duration of the terror effect ends.

Terror can be restored by the same object if the character does not get out of its area of effect.

Chapter 12: Weapons and Effects

Taglines

Damage types and taglines can be combined in a player's tagline such that a character with an enchanted axe may wish to call Cleaving Magic against a golem made of wood in case such a creature would take additional damage from the weapon. Weapons can have several different damage types depending on their use.

Taglines other than those listed here do exist. If the player is unsure of the effects of a tagline, they should ask a marshal or Staff member.

Weapon Taglines

Normal Damage is the standard of most non-magic weapons and may be used anytime an attacker is not worried about the particular damage a weapon does.

Slashing Damage is used by swords and other bladed weapons which are used in a cutting motion and may cause additional damage to some creatures.

Crushing Damage is used by weapons which have a smashing effect on their target and may cause additional damage to brittle targets.

Cleaving Damage is used by axes and their ilk and has a combined smashing and cutting action. Certain creature such as those made of wood may take additional damage from these weapons.

Puncturing Damage is used by arrows, bullets and crossbow bolts and is used to represent the damage type of these weapons. Certain types of creatures may take additional damage from this tagline.

Magic Damage is called by those weapons which are considered Enchanted and must be used to even cause any damage to certain creatures.

Special Tagline with Effects

Entangle: An entangled character is held and cannot move, attack, or defend. An entangled character can break free with Enhanced Strength +1 on a ten (10) count and on a five (5) count with Enhanced Strength +2. An entangled character may not be killed if they are breaking free. An entangled character may be cut out on a 10 count by another character.

Disease: A Diseased character may not have any visible effect, and the disease must be removed in some manner even if the damages it causes are healed. They cannot run, nor can they attack, a diseased character may only defend. This effect must get through armor to hit points and lasts for 10 minutes or until dispelled.

Paralyze: The player is unable to move under their own power and may either simply stand unmoving or fall to the ground, unable to move but conscious unless rendered otherwise. A player who is paralyzed may not defend themselves. This effect must get through armor to hit points and lasts for 10 minutes or until dispelled.

Poison: A Poisoned character may not have any visible effect, and the poison must be removed in some manner even if the damages it causes are healed. The Poison will do one (1) hit point of damage every ten (10) seconds until the target dies or the Poison is neutralized.

Elemental Damage (Fire, Ice, Lightning, etc.) In addition to the normal weapon's damage this tagline also has an elemental effect which may cause more or less damage against certain beings.

Light: Always counts as magic against creatures affected by it. Does double damage to some Undead, Demons, and other creatures of darkness, bypassing most DRs other than those specifically vs Light.

Body: This tagline will bypass all armor and go directly to a target's hit points. The damage will leave the target's armor unaffected from the attack. Shields may block and weapons may be used to parry this tagline, and it must land on the target to affect their hit points.

Massive: This tagline will bypass all defenses and cannot be blocked or parried normally. If an attack lands on the target or their items, such as sword or shield, the damage is taken by the target. It must go through a target's armor before it affects their hit points.

The Massive tagline ignores a target's Damage Reduction, bypassing it to do full damage.

Certain Skills such as Parry, Shield Block, and Shield Bash can be used to stop one swing of this tagline.

Life Drain: This attack is a rare tagline which bypasses armor and goes directly to hit points. The attack drains the vitality of its target and transfers it to the attacker, effectively healing the attacker by the amount of damage of the attack.

The attack can be blocked or parried and must land a physical blow on the target to be effective.

Demise: This tagline will do damage and is also a Deadly effect unless resisted or protected against. Do not expect to see it on anything other than the most powerful of beings. The Deadly effect must get through armor to hitpoints before taking effect.

Certain Skills such as Master Fortify will stop the attack from outright killing the target, though the tagline will add a damage equivalent to the most powerful of attacks, Deadly Attacks, to the swing damage.

Weapon Damage Caps/Chart

Normal Maximum Damage is that which the Weapon Damage, Additive skills (e.g. Strength or Combat Lore), Weapon Quality, and Permanent Enchantments (eg. Striker) can add up to. All weapons have this category.

Backstab Maximum Damage is the combined maximum which a weapon can call from Backstab Damage, Weapon Damage, Additive skills (e.g. Strength or Combat Lore), Weapon Quality, and Permanent Enchantments (eg. Striker).

Note: Certain things will allow a weapon to exceed its maximums, such as, but not limited to, the Slayer Ritual Enchantment, Spells, and skills like Ferocious Strike or Eviscerate.

Maximum Damage Potential, and Maximum Backstab Damage Potential is the maximum a weapon is allowed to call once bringing damage multipliers into the equation.

The maximum potential is usually three times the maximum damage, but damage is compared to the Maximum Damage before a double damage effect is applied, so a double damage effect still capped at double the maximum damage cap.

Temp Spell, Temp Enchantment, and Temp Production

Adders are limited or temporary effects such as spells and production items that are not increased by multiplier effects but are added after that calculation.

Note: Magical Lores applied to blade spells or similar effects apply only once, and in Step 1, before comparison to cap.

If a weapon does not have a number in the Maximum Backstab Damage category, it may not gain any benefit from the Backstab Damage skill.

Damage Calculation Formula

Step 1 (Base + Skills): Base Damage + Applicable Additive Skills (Weapon Damage, Backstab Damage, Weapon Affinities, Combat Lores, Magic Lores, Hated Enemies, Enhanced Strength, etc.) + Weapon Quality + Permanent Additive Enchantments.

Step 2 (Maximum Damage): Compare Step 1 against weapon's (Normal Maximum Damage or Backstab Maximum Damage); Take lesser.

Step 3 (Damage Multipliers): Apply Damage Multipliers such as Slayer enchantment or the Ferocious Strike or Eviscerate skills.

Step 4 (Damage Potential): Compare Step 4 against weapon's (Normal Maximum Damage Potential or Backstab Maximum Damage Potential); take lesser.

Step 5 Temporary Spell, Enchantment, and Production

Adders: Apply any additive Spell or spell like effects such as Fiery Blade of Elemental Fury, Mace of Valor, Swing limited Enchantments, or any temporary production item effect such as specialized ammo or sharpening stones.

Damage Example:

Will the Warrior worship his weapons. He has purchased 5 Enhanced Strength, 18 levels of Weapon Damage, +2 Backstab Damage, Combat Lore III vs Orcs, Ferocious Strike, and has acquired a +3 Shortsword with Slayer vs Orcs, and Sharpening Stone.

Against everything except orcs, from the front he has a Base Damage of 2, +5 from Strength, +18 from Weapon Damage, and +3 from weapon quality for a total of 28 points of Damage. We compare that to the Max Damage of 30 for a Short sword and we're good. With Ferocious Strike that's doubled to 56 and compared to Max Potential of 90 and we're still good. Add the Sharpening stone at the end, and we have 30 (28+2) for a normal swing, and 58 (56+2) with Ferocious Strike.

From the back, we can add his 2 Backstab damage for 30 (vs. a max of 45) and 60 For Ferocious Strike, 32 and 62 with the sharpening stone.

Vs Orcs, we have that 28 from before, plus 6 from the Combat Lore. Now we have a base of 34, but when we compare that to the weapon max of 30, we must reduce to 30. Then we can add Slayer for a normal swing of 60, and then add Ferocious Strike which would take us to 120, but compared to the maximum potential of 90, we again must reduce to 90 for the Ferocious Strike. Add the Sharpening stone at the end, and we have 62 (60+2) for a normal swing, and 92 (90+2) with Ferocious Strike. If only it was a Longsword with its cap of 35!

From the back, vs orcs, it gets a little better. We have the 28, plus 6 from combat lore, plus 2 from Backstab Damage for 36, but the Max Backstab for a shortsword is 45 instead of 30, so we get to keep it all. Doubled to 72 for normal swings, and again with Ferocious Strike to 104. We compare 104 to the 135 Backstab Potential of a shortsword and we're good. Add in the Sharpening stone and we're at 74 and 106 against Orcs from the back.

Swing Speed

Weapons may only be swung as fast as the complete tagline used can be enunciated fully. (I.e. One swing for each time a player with an Enchanted Axe with a Flame blade spell can say " <Total Damage number> Cleaving Magical Fire")

This is a safety issue and no exceptions will be made.

No matter how many things are combined a weapon may never exceed this potential

Basic Weapon Safety

Further information is available in the Safety Guide

Pipe and Foam: The oldest type of boffers are the Pipe and Foam with some form of tape or cloth over them. These are terrible looking for the most part but can be made for about $25 to $40 easily enough.

These must have at least a 2" top/thrusting tip of dense open cell foam (green foam from JoAnn's works) and the distance from the PVC pipe to the striking surface should be about 3/4" and made of closed cell foam.

Gaff Tape is preferred to Duct Tape and can be painted much better. Also, tape and cloth covered weapons are considered to be poor quality (Gray color if you play MMOs) and will have a -1 penalty to damage. This has to do with safety; humidity in Florida wreaks havoc on Gaff Tape and glue for cloth and that sticky stuff can hurt badly.

PVC cores for weapons under 36" should be schedule 20, Over 36" up to 46" should be Schedule 40, and for Two Handed Weapons (not really recommended for these types) Schedule 80. 1/2" or 3/4" cores are fine no smaller or larger.

No wooden dowels or metal cores are allowed.

Carved Foam Latex or PlastiDip: These weapons are those which are the most popular type presently in the world for LARP. They are made with either a fiberglass rod core or some form of carbon fiber core and the distance from core to striking surface to should be 3/4" or more. The tip must be approved before it can be used for thrusting attacks, and no matter what the core should be over 1 1/2" below the tip.

There are several great guides to making these sorts of very realistic weapons online, but understand safety is our primary objective and they need maintenance to stay safe. It is easy to go way far fantasy with additions like curved spikes and such, but again safety first. If you have a question, ask.

These weapons will need a clear coat that is hyper allergenic over the painted areas and will be inspected like all boffers each and every event.

If you decide to purchase a weapon from a manufacturer online remember, buyer beware. Unfortunately, many of the imports and other companies making these boffers advertise as "LARP like" or "LARP safe", but they are not. We apologize if your weapon does not pass a safety inspection.

Foam Injected: The last type of boffer weapons we allow are the foam injected type. These need almost no maintenance at all and they can look amazing.

Please make sure to only buy something in person from a reputable vendor (Frederick's Forge carries approved boffers of this type) or from one of the companies such as Calimacil or Mitryl (both out of Canada) who we know have safe weapons designed for LARP.

If you decide to purchase a weapon from a manufacturer online remember, buyer beware. Unfortunately, many of the imports and other companies making these boffers advertise as "LARP like" or "LARP safe", but they are not. We apologize if your weapon does not pass a safety inspection.

That covers safe weapons. There are a few other areas that are similar and need to be addressed.

Foam Phys-Reps are preferred for the following items and they must always be larger than 3" in diameter and have no core. We prefer between 10lbs and 17lbs foam for the item.

Alchemy and Poisons which can be thrown should be made of these materials. We will work with players on helping with these items. We have many examples at events you can inspect as well.

Grenades are also made of the same foams, and should be larger in diameter, up to 6", than Alchemy and Poison Bottles.

Thrown weapons should be coreless or if cored, inspected and have at least 3/4" from the core to the striking surface, and a tip and pommel of soft foam.

Spell Packets should be made with Rye or Grass seed (safer for the environment) and are color coded for the type of magic they represent. In our game packets represent components of the spells magic and are in play items.

Packets should be about the size in diameter of a U.S. fifty cent piece, and up to 2" in diameter. They should be no smaller. The packet should be tight enough to throw but have a little squish and give when pressed by your thumb. They should not be "floppy" or any smaller than the above stated diameter.

The materials should be cloth and a rubber band and should be used to keep the packet tight enough to throw well. There are some spell packets which like bottles and grenades are made of injection foam, these are approved on a case by case bases.

Armor Points, Locations, and Values

Armor Points are much like hit points and are the first line of defense for most characters. Some spells will grant a certain number of armor points but for the most part armor must be worn to gain the benefit of armor protection.

Armor points are calculated by adding up all the various types of armor a player is wearing and stacks in layers. The various types of armor and their values are listed on the charts in this book and a player will have their armor evaluated by an Armor Marshall or Staff member at the start of any event.

Armor and Damage

Armor is ablative and armor points work just like hit points. Armor must be worn to gain its values. As a player takes damage it usually must go through the armor first before getting to the character's hit points.

Certain spells and taglines such as the "Body" tagline will bypass armor and go straight to hit points.

Should your armor be destroyed or rendered to zero armor points, it may still be repaired normally by an armorsmith.

Effective Types of Armor

Armor must cover the front and back of a character to gain full value, less coverage and the armor will only gain half value.

Chain and Plate Armors must be made of Metal, Leather Armors must be made of real leather, not vinyl or pleather, to gain the benefits of being considered real armor for Armor Points values.

Plastic Armors will not count, and though many can look fantastic they will gain a reduced amount of Armor Points.

Qualities of Armor

Certain armors may gain a bonus for the level of creation and effort put into the armor. Quality bonuses allow a character to go over their armor maximum by the value of the bonus.

Professional Quality gains a 5% bonus to the level of protection offered and are of such a quality that they can easily be seen to be superior to the common version of the same.

Master Quality is of such a quality that it exceeds even most professional made armors. These have extra detail in them, and the quality is readily visible. Things such as double stitching, 6 in one, or Dragon weave for chain mail, or even ornate yet function decoration on plate armors.

Master Quality items will gain a 10% bonus for the extra level of detail and manufacturing put into the item.

These bonuses will be decided on by the Armor Marshall and can be presented by the player so that the Marshall can make the best judgement possible.

Additions to Armors

Certain types of coverage or additional work can also increase an armor's value.

Items such as studding can add additional points of protection to leather goods and heavy quilted items. Studding can be done in tighter than one-inch (1") groupings and as wide as 3 inch (3") groupings to gain the three different levels of bonus for studs.

Articulation on items such as pauldrons and greaves, knee caps and elbow cups can all add extra bonuses if made from strong enough materials.

Areas that can be Covered.

The various parts of the body gain different amounts of protection which is added to the whole of the armor points the character has.

Armor points are not reduced by the area struck, but from an overall total of armor points.

Armor points are listed and calculated using the charts below. Primary location armors may be stacked up to two (2) layers, such that a layer of leather over chain mail would simply have their values added together. Joint locations cannot be layered and take the highest available value. All values are totaled and compared to the characters professional and skill limitations to get a final Armor Points value.

Armor points worn in excess of a characters professional and skill totals do not count toward Armor Points for the character and do not "fill in" as the armor gets damaged. They are ignored.

Optional Permanent Armor Sets

At the games option, if a player plans to wear the same armor or sets of armor they may submit this (these) set(s) for a permanent record. This is purely at the player and games discretion and can be done to speed up the player's check in and help to streamline the game over all.

Armor Repair

Armor which is damaged or destroyed can be repaired by a skilled Armorsmith. Armor, unlike spells, does not reset during an event, each new day. An Armorsmith may want to charge for their services.

Armor must be repaired during an event if a character wishes to continue to have the benefit of wearing their armor.

Armor is considered refreshed at the start of each new event, once check in is complete.

Any special abilities a set of armor may have are rendered useless if the armor value is at zero, until the armor is repaired.

Shields

Shields do not add to Armor Points and their use is a separate skill, covered in the skills section of this rulebook.

Armor Material and Construction Guidelines

Leather Armors:

Soft Leather: Leather thickness greater than 1mm (3 Oz) but less than 3 mm (8 Oz), including Suede.

Hard Leather: Leather thickness greater than or equal to 3mm (8oz) and/or treated to harden.

Notes: Leather <1mm will be considered clothing.

Chain Armors:

Ring Mesh: 22-24-gauge steel rings that are welded closed for strength.

Light Chain: Aluminum rings no thinner than 16 Ga SWG (0.0625", 1.59mm) with an inner diameter no greater than 5/16 inch.

Medium Chain: Steel rings no thinner than 18 Ga SWG (0.048", 1.2mm) with an inner diameter no greater than 3/8 inch.

Heavy Chain: Steel rings no thinner 16 Ga SWG (0.0625", 1.59mm) with an inner diameter no greater than 5/16 inch.

Notes: Chain base values are based on the European 4 in 1 pattern. Professional (5%) and Master Crafted (10%) bonuses will be granted to armors that exceed the minimum. For example, denser aspect ratios (using a thicker gauge or smaller inner diameter); denser weaves like 6in1, King's Maille, or Persian; and higher-grade materials (Titanium)

Scale Armors: Size based on TheRingLord.com scale Sizes

Large: TRL Extra Large, Large, and Medium sized scales

Tiny: TRL Small and Tiny sized scales

Notes:

Polyurethane Plate: Wyrmswick or Dragon Armory only

Notes:

Metal Armors:

Aluminum: 16 Ga (~1.5mm) minimum thickness, provides base points. Not eligible to receive professional or master quality bonuses.

Steel: 20 Ga (~1mm) Grants professional quality bonus as base, eligible for master quality bonus.

Notes: Not meeting minimum thickness grants the fake material penalties.
